THE VERSE.

THE measure is English heroic verse without rime, as that of Homer in Greek, and of Virgil in Latin; rime being no necessary adjunct or true ornament of poem or good verse, in longer works especially, but the invention of a barbarous age to set off wretched matter and lame metre; graced indeed since by the use of some famous modern poets, carried away by custom, but much to their own vexation, hindrance, and constraint to express many things otherwise, and for the most part worse, than else they would have expressed Not without cause, therefore, some both Italian and Spanish poets of prime note have rejected rime both in longer and shorter works; as have long since our best English tragedies; as a thing of itself, to all judicious ears, trivial and of no true musical delight; which consists only in apt numbers, fit quantity of syllables, and the sense variously drawn out from one verse into another, not in the jingling sound of like endings, a fault avoided by the learned aucients both in poetry and all good oratory. This neglect then of rime so little is to be taken for a defect, though it may seem so perhaps to vulgar readers, that it is rather to be esteemed an example set, the first in English, of ancient liberty recovered to heroic poem, from the troublesome and modern bondage of riming.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK I.

THE ARGUMENT.

This First Book proposes first, in brief, the whole subject, Man's Disobedience, and the Loss thereupon of Paradise wherein he was placed. Then touches the prime cause of his Fall, the Serpent, or rather Satan in the Serpent; who revolting from God, and drawing to his side many legions of Angels, was by the command of God driven out of Heaven with all his crew into the great deep. Which action passed over, the poem hastes into the midst of things, presenting Satan with his Angels now fallen into Hell, described here not in the centre (for heaven and earth may be supposed as yet not made, certainly not yet accursed) but in a place of utter darkness, fitliest called Chaos; here Satan with his angels lying on the burning lake, thunderstruck and astonished, after a certain space recovers, as from confusion, calls up him who next in order and dignity lay by him; they confer of their miserable fall. Sata awakens all his legions, who lay till then in the same manner confounded; they rise; their numbers, array of battle, their chief leaders named, according to the idols known afterwards in Canaan and the countries adjoining. To these Satan directs his speech : comforts them with hope yet of regaining Heaven; but tells them lastly of a new world and new kind of creature to be created, according to an ancient prophecy or report in Heaven (for that Angels were long before this visible creation, was the opinion of many ancient Fathers.) To find out the truth of this prophecy, and what to determine thereon, he refers to a full council. What his associates thence attempt. Pandemonium, the palace of Satan, rises suddenly built out of the deep; the infernal Peers there sit in council.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK I.

F Man's first disobedience, and the fruit Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste Brought death into the world, and all our we

With loss of Eden, till one greater Man
Restore us, and regain the blissful seat,
Sing, Heavenly Muse! that on the secret top
Of Oreb, or of Sinai, didst inspire
That shepherd, who first taught the chosen seed,
In the beginning how the heavens and earth

10 Rose out of Chaos. Or, if Sion Hill
Delight thee more, and Siloa's brook that flowed Fast by the oracle of God, I thence Invoke thy aid to my adventurous song,
That with no middle flight intends to soar

15 Above the Aonian mount, while it pursues
Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme.
And chiefly thou, O Spirit! that dost prefer

Instruct me, for thou knowest; thou from the first
Wast present, and, with mighty wings outspread,
Dove-like sat'st brooding on the vast abyss,
And madest it pregnant; what in me is dark
Illumine! what is low raise and support!

Before all temples the upright heart and pure,

That to the height of this great argument 25 II may assert eternal Providence, And justify the ways of God to men. Say first, (for Heaven hides nothing from thy view, Nor the deep tract of Hell) say first, what cause Moved our grand parents, in that happy state Favoured of Heaven so highly, to fall off From their Creator, and transgress his will, For one restraint, lords of the world besides. Who first seduced them to that foul revolt? The infernal serpent! he it was, whose guile, Stirred up with envy and revenge, deceived The mother of mankind, what time his pride Had cast him out from Heaven, with all his host Of rebel angels; by whose aid, aspiring To set himself in glory above his peers, He trusted to have equalled the Most High, If he opposed; and with ambitious aim Against the throne and monarchy of God Raised impious war in Heaven, and battle proud, With vain attempt. Him the Almighty Power Hurled headlong flaming from the ethereal sky, With hideous ruin and combustion, down . To bottomless perdition; there to dwell In adamantine chains and penal fire, Who durst defy the Omnipotent to arms. Nine times the space that measures day and night To mortal men, he with his horrid crew) Lay vanquished, rolling in the fiery gulf, Confounded though immortal! But his doom Reserved him to more wrath; for now the thought Both of lost happiness and lasting pain Round he throws his baleful eyes. Torments him. That witnessed huge affliction and dismay, Mixed with obdurate pride, and steadfast hate: At once, as far as Angels ken, he views 60 The dismal situation waste and wild; A dangeon horrible, on all sides round, As one great furnace, flamed; yet from those flames No light, but rather darkness visible Served only to discover sights of woe, 65 Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace : And rest can never dwell! hope never comes, ! That comes to all ; but torture without end

Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed

With ever-burning sulphur unconsumed! Such place eternal justice had prepared For those rebellious; here their prison ordained In utter darkness; and their portion set As far removed from God, and light of Heaven, As from the centre thrice to the utmost pole.

O how unlike the place from whence they fell! There the companions of his fall, o'erwhelmed With floods and whirlwinds of tempestuous fire, He soon discerns; and weltering by his side One next himself in power, and next in crime, $\times 0$ Long after known in Palestine, and named Beëlzebub. To whom the Arch-enemy, (And thence in Heaven called Satan) with bold words Breaking the horrid silence, thus began:

" If thou beest he But O how fallen! how changed From him, who in the happy realms of light, Clothed with transcendent brightness, didst outshine Myriads though bright! If he, whom mutual league, United thoughts and counsels, equal hope And hazard in the glorious enterprise,

Joined with me once, now misery hath joined 90 In equal rain; into what pit thou seest, From what height fallen; so much the stronger proved He with his thunder! and till then who knew The force of those dire arms? Yet not for those.

95 Nor what the potent Victor in his rage Can else inflict, do I repeut, or change (Though changed in outward lustre) that fixed mind, And high disdain from sense of injured merit, That with the Mightiest raised me to contend,

And to the fierce contention brought along 100 Innumerable force of Spirits armed, That durst dislike his reign; and, me preferring, His utmost power with adverse power opposed In dubious battle on the plains of Heaven,

What though the field be lost,— 105And shook his throne. All is not lost; the unconquerable will, And study of revenge, immortal hate, And courage never to submit or yield, And what is else not to be overcome; -

110 That glory never shall his wrath or might Extort from me. To bow and sue for grace With suppliant knee, and deify his power, Who, from the terror of this arm, so late

Donbted his empire;—that were low indeed!

That were an ignominy and shame beneath
This downfall! since by fate the strength of gods,
And this empyreal substance cannot fail;
Since, through experience of this great event.
(In arms not worse, in foresight much advanced,)

120 We may, with more successful hope, resolve
To wage by force or guile eternal war,
Irreconcileable to our grand Foe,
Who now triumphs, and, in the excess of joy
Sole reigning, holds the tyranny of Heaven."

125 So spake the apostate Angel, though in pain, Vaunting aloud, but racked with deep despair; And him thus answered soon his bold compeer:

"O Prince! O Chief of many throned Powers,

That led the embattled Scraphim to war

130 Under thy conduct, and, in dreadful deeds
Fearless, endangered Heaven's perpetual King,
And put to proof his high supremacy,
Whether upheld by strength, or chance, or fate!
Too well I see and rue the dire event,

135 That with sad overthrow and foul defeat
Hath lost us Heaven, and all this mighty host
In horrible destruction laid thus low,
As far as gods and heavenly essences
Can perish; for the mind and spirit remains

140 Invincible, and vigour soon returns,
Though all our glory extinct, and happy state,
Here swallowed up in endless misery!
But what if he our Conqueror—whom I now
Of force believe Almighty, since no less

145 Than such could have o'erpowered such force as ours,—
Have left us this our spirit and strength entire Strongly to suffer and support our pains;
That we may so suffice his vengeful ire,
Or do him mightier service, as his thralls

150 By right of war, whate'er his business be, Here in the heart of Hell to work in fire, Or do his errands in the gloomy Deep? What can it then avail, though yet we feel Strongth undiminished, or eternal being,

155 To undergo eternal punishment?"

Whereto with speedy words the Arch-fiend replied: "Fallen Cherub! to be weak is miserable,
Doing or suffering; but of this be sure,

- To do aught good never will be our task;
 But ever to do ill our sole delight;
 As being the contrary to his high will
 Whom we resist. If then his providence
 Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
 Our labour must be to pervert that end.
- 165 And out of good still to find means of evil;
 Which oft-times may succeed, so as perhaps Shall grieve him, (if I fail not,) and disturb
 His inmost counsels from their destined aim.—
 But see! the angry Victor hath recalled
- 170 His ministers of vengeance and pursuit
 Back to the gates of Heaven; the sulphurous hail,
 Shot after us in storm, o'er-blown, hath laid
 The fiery surge, that from the precipice
 Of Heaven received us falling; and the thunder,
- 175 Winged with red lightning and impetuous rage, Perhaps hath spent his shafts, and ceases now To bellow through the vast and boundless deep; Let us not slip the occasion, whether scorn Or satiate fury yield it from our Foe.
- 180 Seest thou you dreary plain, forlorn and wild.
 The seat of desolation, void of light.
 Save what the glimmering of these livid flames
 Casts pale and dreadful? Thither let us tend
 From off the tossing of these fiery waves;
- 185 There rest, if any rest can harbour there;
 And, re-assembling our afflicted powers,
 Consult how we may henceforth most offend
 Our enemy; our own loss how repair;
 How overcome this dire calamity;
- What reinforcement we may gain from hope; If not, what resolution from despair." A
 Thus Satan, talking to his nearest mate,
 With head up-lift above the wave, and eyes
 That sparkling blazed; his other parts besides,
- 195 Prone on the flood, extended long and large, Lay, floating many a rood; in bulk as huge As whom the fables name of monstrous size, Titanian, or Earth-born, that warred on Jove, Briarcos, or Typhon whom the den
- 200 By ancient Tarsus held; or that sca-beast Leviathan, which God of all his works Created hugest that swim the ocean stream; Him, haply, slumbering on the Norway foam,

The pilot of some small night-foundered skiff,
Deeming some island, oft, as seamen tell,
With fixed anchor in his scaly rind
Moors by his side under the lee, while night
Invests the sea, and wished morn delays;

So stretched out huge in length the Arch-field lay,
Chained on the burning lake; nor ever thence
Had risen, or heaved his head, but that the will
And high permission of all-ruling Heaven
Left him at large to his own dark designs,

That with reiterated crimes he might

Heap on himself damnation, while he sought Evil to others; and enraged might see How all his malice served but to bring forth Infinite goodness, grace, and mercy shown On man by him seduced; but on himself

Treble confusion, wrath, and vengeance poured.
Forthwith upright he rears from off the pool
His mighty stature; on each hand the flames
Driven backward slope their pointing spires, and, rolled
In billows, leave in the midst a horrid vale.

225 Then with expanded wings he steers his flight Aloft, incumbent on the dusky air That felt unusual weight; till on dry land He lights, if it were land that ever burned With solid, as the lake with liquid fire;

230 And such appeared in hue, as when the force Of subterranean wind transports a hill Torn from Pelorus, or the shattered side Of thundering Ætna, whose combustible And fuelled entrails thence conceiving fire,

235 Sublimed with mineral fury, aid the winds,
And leave a singed bottom all involved
With stench and smoke; such resting found the sole
Of unblest feet. Him followed his next mate,
Both glorying to have scaped the Stygian flood

240 As gods, and by their own recovered strength, Not by the sufferance of supernal Power.

"Is this the region, this the soil, the clime,"
Said then the lost Archangel, "this the seat,
That we must change for Heaven? this mournful gloom

245 For that celestial light? Be it so! since he,
Who now is Sovran, can dispose, and bid
What shall be right; farthest from him is best,
Whom reason hath equalled, force hath made supreme

Above His equals. Farewell, happy fields, 250Where joy for ever dwells! hail, horrors! hail, Infernal world! and thou profoundest Hell Receive thy new possessor ! one who brings A mind not to be changed by place or time. The mind is its own place, and in itself

255Can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven. What matter where, if I be still the same, And what I should be, all but less than he Whom thunder hath made greater? Here at least We shall be free; the Almighty hath not built

260Here for his envy; will not drive us hence; Here we may reign secure; and in my choice To reign is worth ambition, though in Hell; Better to reign in Hell, than serve in Heaven. But wherefore let we then our faithful friends,

265 The associates and co-partners of our loss, Lie thus astonished on the oblivious pool, And call them not to share with us their part In this unhappy mansion; or once more, With rallied arms, to try what may be yet

Regained in Heaven, or what more lost in Hell?" 270 So Satan spake, and him Beëlzebub Thus answered: "Leader of those armies bright, Which but the Omnipotent none could have foiled! If once they hear that voice,—their liveliest pledge

275 Of hope in fears and dangers, heard so oft In worst extremes, and on the perilons edge Of battle when it raged, in all assaults Their surest signal,—they will soon resume New conrage, and revive, though now they lie

280Grovelling and prostrate on you lake of fire, (As we erewhile,) astounded and amazed ;— No wonder, fallen such a pernicious height!" He scarce had ceased, when the superior Fiend

Was moving toward the shore; his ponderous shield

285Ethereal temper, massy, large and round, Behind him cast; the broad circumference Hnng on his shoulders like the moon, whose orb Through optic glass the Tuscan artist views At evening from the top of Fesolé, 290Or in Valdarno, to descry new lands, Rivers, or mountains, in her spotty globe. His spear, (to equal which the tallest pine. Hewn on Norwegian hills to be the mast

Of some great ammiral, were but a wand)
He walked with, to support uneasy steps
Over the burning marle (not like those steps
On Heaven's azure;) and the torrid clime.
Smote on him sore besides, vaulted with fire.
Nathless he so endured, till on the beach

300 Of that inflamed sea he stood, and called
His legions, angel forms, who lay entranced,
Thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks
In Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian shades
High over-arched embower; or scattered sedge

Afloat, when with fierce winds Orion armed Hath vexed the Red Sea coast, whose waves o'erthrew
Busiris and his Memphian chivalry,
While with perfidious hatred they pursued
The sojourners of Goshen, who beheld

210 From the safe shore their floating carcasses,
And broken chariot wheels; so thick bestrown,
Abject and lost lay these, covering the flood,
Under amazement of their hideous change.
He called so loud, that all the hollow deep

315 Of Hell resounded: "Princes, Potentates,
Warriors, the flower of Heaven! once yours, now lost
If such astonishment as this can seize Eternal Spirits; or have ye chosen this place
After the toil of battle to repose

320 Your wearied virtue, for the case you find To slumber here, as in the vales of Heaven? Or in this abject posture have ye sworn To adore the Conqueror? who now beholds Cherub and Scraph rolling in the flood,

325 With scattered arms and ensigns, till anon His swift pursuers from Heaven-gates discern The advantage, and descending tread us down Thus drooping, or with linked thunderbolts Transfix us to the bottom of this gulf.

330 Awake, arise, or be for ever fallen!" They heard, and were abashed, and up they sprung
Upon the wing; as when men wont to watch
On duty, sleeping found by whom they dread,
Rouse and bestir themselves ere well awake.

335 Nor did they not perceive the evil plight
In which they were, or the fierce pains not feel;
Yet to their General's voice they soon obeyed,
Innumerable. As when the potent rod

Of Amram's son, in Egypt's evil day,

340 Waved round the coast, up called a pitchy cloud Of locusts, warping on the eastern wind, That o'er the realm of impious Pharaoh hung Like night, and darkened all the land of Nile; So numberless were those bad Angels, seen

Hovering on wing under the cope of Hell,
'Twixt upper, nether, and surrounding fires;
Till, as a signal given, the uplifted spear
Of their great Sultan waving to direct
Their course, in even balance down they light

350 On the firm brimstone, and fill all the plain;
A multitude, like which the populous North
Poured never from her frozen loins, to pass
Rhene or the Danaw, when her barbarous sons
Came like a deluge on the South, and spread

355 Beneath Gibraltar to the Libyan sands.
Forthwith from every squadron, and each band,
The heads and leaders thither haste where stood
Their great commander; godlike shapes, and forms
Excelling human, princely Dignities,

360 And Powers that erst in Heaven sat on thrones;
Though of their names in Heavenly records now
Be no memorial, blotted out and rased,
By their rebellion, from the books of life.
Nor had they yet among the sons of Eve

365 Got them new names; till wandering o'er the earth,
Through God's high sufferance for the trial of man,
By falsities and lies the greatest part
Of mankind they corrupted to forsake

God their Creator, and the invisible
Glory of him that made them to transform
Oft to the image of a brute, adorned
With gay religions full of pomp and gold,

And devils to adore for deities;

Then were they known to men by various names, 375 And various idols through the heathen world.

Say, Muse, their names then known, who first, who last, Roused from the slumber on that fiery couch, At their great Emperor's call, as next in worth Came singly where he stood, on the bare strand, 380 While the promisenous crowd stood yet aloof.

The chief were those who, from the pit of Hell Roaming to seek their prey on Earth, durst fix Their seats, long after, next the seat of God, Their alters by his alter, gods adored
Among the nations round, and durst abide Jehovah thundering out of Sion, throned
Between the cherubim; yea, often placed
Within his sanctuary itself their shrines,
Abominations! and with cursed things

300 His holy rites and solemn feasts profaned,
And with their darkness durst affront his light.
First Moloch, horrid king, besmeared with blood
Of human sacrifice, and parents' tears,
Though, for the noise of drums and timbrels loud,

395 Their children's cries unheard, that passed through fire To his grim idol. Him the Ammonite Worshipped in Rabba and her watery plain, In Argob, and in Basan, to the stream Of utnost Arnon. Nor content with such

400 Andacious neighbourhood, the wisest heart
Of Solomon he led by fraud to build
His temple right against the temple of God,
On that opprobrious hill, and made his grove
The pleasant valley of Hinnom, Tophet thence

405 And black Gehemia called, the type of Hell. A Next Chemos, the obscene dread of Moab's sons, From Aroer to Nebo, and the wild Of southmost Abarim; in Hesebon And Horonáim, Seon's realm, beyond

410 The flowery dale of Sibma clad with vines,
And Eleäle to the Asphaltic pool;
Peor his other name when he enticed
Israel in Sittim, on their march from Nile,
To do him wanton rites, which cost them woe.

A15 Yet thence his lustful orgies he enlarged
Even to that hill of scandal, by the grove
Of Moloch homicide, lust hard by hate;
Till good Josiah drove them thence to hell.
With these came they, who, from the bordering flood

420 Of old Euphrates to the brook that parts
Egypt from Syrian ground, had general names
Of Baälim and Ashtaroth, those male,
These feminine. (For Spirits when they please
Can either sex assume, or both; so soft

425 And uncompounded is their essence pure,
Not tied or manacled with joint or limb,
Nor founded on the brittle strength of bones,
Like cumbrous flesh; but in what shape they choose,

Dilated or condensed, bright or obscure,

430 Can execute their aery purposes,
And works of love or enmity fulfil.)
For those the race of Israel oft forsook
Their living Strength, and unfrequented left
His righteous altar, bowing lowly down

435 To bestial gods; for which their heads as low Bowed down in battle, sunk before the spear Of despicable foes. With these in troop Came Astoreth, whom the Phonicians called Astartè, Queen of heaven, with crescent horns;

440 To whose bright image nightly by the moon Sidonian virgins paid their vows and songs; In Sion also-not unsung, where stood Her temple on the offensive mountain, built By that uxorions king, whose heart, though large,

445 Beguiled by fair idolatresses, fell
To idols foul. Thammuz came next behind,
Whose annual wound in Lebanon allured
The Syrian damsels to lament his fate
In amorous ditties all a summer's day;

450 While smooth Adonis from his native rock Ran purple to the sea, supposed with blood Of Thammuz yearly wounded; the love-tale Infected Sion's daughters with like heat; Whose wanton passions in the sacred porch

455 Ezekiel saw, when, by the vision led,
His eye surveyed the dark idolatries
Of alienated Judah. Next came one
Who mourned in carnest, when the captive ark
Maimed his brute image, head and hands lopped off

460 In his own temple, on the gransel edge,
Where he fell flat, and shamed his worshippers;
Dagon his name, sea monster, upward man
And downward fish; yet had his temple high
Reared in Azotus, dreaded through the coast

465 Of Palestine, in Gath, and Ascalon,
And Accaron, and Gaza's frontier bounds.
Him followed Rimmon, whose delightful seat
Was fair Damascus, on the fertile banks
Of Abbana and Pharphar, lucid streams.

470 He also against the house of God was bold;
A leper once he lost, and gained a king,
Ahaz, his sottish conqueror, whom he drew
God's altar to disparage and displace

For one of Syrian mode, whereon to burn
475 His odious offerings, and adore the gods
Whom he had vanquished. After these appeared
A crew who under names of old renown,
Osiris, Isis, Orus, and their train,
With monstrous shapes, and sorceries abused

480 Fanatic Egypt, and her priests, to seek
Their wandering gods disguised in brutish forms
Rather than human. Nor did Israel scape
The infection, when their borrowed gold composed
The calf in Oreb; and the rebel king

Doubled that sin in Bethel, and in Dan,
Likening his Maker to the grazed ox;
Jehovah! who in one night, when he passed
From Egypt marching, equalled with one stroke
Both her first-born and all her bleating gods.

490 Belial came last, than whom a spirit more lewd Fell not from Heaven, or more gross to love Vice for itself; to him no temple stood Or altar smoked; yet who more oft than he In temples, and at altars, when the priest

495 Turns atheist, as did Eli's sons, who filled With lust and violence the house of God? In courts and palaces he also reigns, And in luxurious cities, where the noise Of riot ascends, above their lofticst towers,

500 And injury and outrage; and when night
Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons
Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine;
Witness the streets of Sodom, and that night
In Gibeah, when the hospitable door

505 Exposed a matron to avoid worse rape.

These were the prime, in order and in might;
The rest were long to tell, though far renowned;
The Ionian gods, of Javan's issue held
Gods, yet confessed later than Heaven and Earth,

Their boasted parents. Titan, Heaven's first-born, With his enormous brood, and birthright seized By younger Saturn; he from mightier Jove (His own and Rhea's son,) like measure found; So Jove usurping reigned. These, first in Crete

515 And Ida known, thence on the snowy top
Of cold Olympus ruled the middle air,
Their highest heaven; or on the Delphian cliff,
Or in Dodona, and through all the bounds

Of Doric land; or who with Saturn old
520 Fled over Adria to the Hesperian fields,
And o'er the Celtic roamed the utmost isles,
All these and more came flocking, but with looks
Downcast and damp; yet such wherein appeared
Obscure some glimpse of joy, to have found their Chief

Not in despair, to have found themselves not lost ln loss itself; which on his countenance cast like doubtful hue; but he, his wonted pride Soon recollecting, with high words, that bore Semblance of worth, not substance, gently raised

Their fainting courage, and dispelled their fears.

Then straight commands that, at the warlike sound Of trumpets loud, and clarions, be upreared His mighty standard; that proud honour claimed Azazel as his right, a cherub tall;

Who forthwith from the clittoring

535 Who forthwith from the glittering staff unfurled The imperial ensign; which, full high advanced, Shone like a meteor streaming to the wind, With gems and golden lustre rich emblazed, Seraphic arms and trophies; all the while

540 Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds;
At which the universal host up-sent
A shout that tore Hell's concave; and beyond
Frighted the reign of Chaos and old Night.
All in a moment through the gloom were seen

545 Ten thousand banners rise into the air,
With orient colours waving; with them rose
A forest huge of spears; and thronging helms
Appeared, and serried shields in thick array
Of depth immeasurable; anon they move

550 In perfect phalaux, to the Dorian mood
Of flutes and soft recorders; such as raised
To height of noblest temper heroes old
Arming to battle, and instead of rage
Deliberate valour breathed, firm and unmoved

555 With dread of death to flight or foul retreat;
Nor wanting power to mitigate and swage,
With solemn touches, troubled thoughts, and chase
Anguish, and doubt, and fear, and sorrow, and pain
From mortal or immortal minds. Thus they 560 Breathing united force, with fixed thought,

Moved on in silence to soft pipes, that charmed
Their painful steps o'er the burnt soil; and now
Advanced in view they stand, a horrid front

Of dreadful length, and dazzling arms, in guise 565Of warriors old with ordered spear and shield, Awaiting what command their mighty Chief Had to impose. He through the armed files Darts his experienced eye, and soon traverse The whole battalion views, their order due, 570 Their visages and stature as of gods; Their number last he sums. And now his heart Distends with pride, and hardening in his strength Glories; for never, since created man, Met such embodied force, as named with these 575 Could merit more than that small infantry Warred on by cranes; though all the giant-brood Of Phlegra with the heroic race were joined That fought at Thebes and Ilium, on each side Mixed with auxiliar gods; and what resounds 580 In fable or romance of Uther's son, Begirt with British and Armoric knights; And all who since, baptized or infidel, Jousted in Aspramont, or Montalban, Damasco, or Morocco, or Trebisond; 585 Or whom Biserta sent from Afric shore, When Charlemain with all his peerage fell By Fontarabbia. Thus far these beyond Compare of mortal prowess, yet observed Their dread commander; he, above the rest 590 In shape and gesture proudly eminent, Stood like a tower; his form had yet not lost All her original brightness, nor appeared Less than Archangel ruined, and the excess Of glory obscured; as when the sun new-risen Looks through the horizontal misty air, 595Shorn of his beams, or from behind the moon, In dim colipse, disastrous twilight sheds On half the nations, and with fear of change Perplexes monarchs; darkened so, yet shone 600 Above them all the Archangel; but his face Deep scars of thunder had intrenched, and care Sat on his faded cheek, but under brows Of dauntless courage, and considerate pride Waiting revenge; cruel his eye, but cast 605 Signs of remorse and passion, to behold

The fellows of his crime, the followers rather, (Far other once beheld in bliss,) condemned For ever now to have their lot in pain;

- Millions of Spirits for his fault amerced
 Of Heaven, and from eternal splendours flung
 For his revolt; yet faithful how they stood,
 Their glory withered; as when heaven's fire
 Hath scathed the forest oaks or mountain pines,
 With singed top their stately growth, though bare,
- Stands on the blasted heath. He now prepared to speak, whereat their doubled ranks they bend from wing to wing, and half inclose him round With all his peers; attention held them mute; Thrice he essayed, and thrice in spite of scorn,
- 620 Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth; at last Words interwove with sighs found out their way:

 "O Myriads of immortal Spirits! O Powers Matchless, but with the Almighty, and that strife Was not inglorious, though the event was dire,
- As this place testifies, and this dire change, Hateful to utter; but what power of mind, Foreseeing or presaging, from the depth Of knowledge past or present, could have feared How such united force of gods, how such
- 630 As stood like these, could ever know repulse? For who can yet believe, though after loss, That all these puissant legions, whose exile Hath emptied Heaven, shall fail to re-ascend, Self-raised, and repossess their native seat?
- 635 For me be witness all the host of Heaven, If counsels different, or dangers shunned By me, have lost our hopes. But he, who reigns Monarch in Heaven, till then as one secure Sat on his throne, upheld by old repute,
- Consent, or custom, and his regal state
 Put forth at full, but still his strength concealed,
 Which tempted our attempt, and wrought our fall.
 Henceforth his might we know, and know our own,
 So as not either to provoke, or dread
- New war, provoked. Our better part remains
 To work in close design, by fraud or guile,
 What force effected not; that he no less
 At length from us may find, who overcomes
 By force, hath overcome but half his foe.
- o50 Space may produce new worlds, whereof so rife
 There went a fame in Heaven, that he ere long
 Intended to create, and therein plant
 A generation, whom his choice regard

Should favour equal to the sons of Heaven.

655 Thither, if but to pry, shall be perhaps
Our first eruption, thither or elsewhere;
For this infernal pit shall never hold
Celestial Spirits in bondage, nor the Abyss
Long under darkness cover.—But these thoughts

660 Full counsel must mature. Peace is despaired,
For who can think submission? War then, war,
Open or understood, must be resolved."

He submission and to confirm his words outflow.

He spake; and to confirm his words outflew Millions of flaming swords, drawn from the thighs

665 Of mighty Cherubim; the sudden blaze
Far round illumined Hell; highly they raged
Against the Highest; and fierce with grasped arms
Clashed on their sounding shields the din of war,
Hurling defiance toward the vault of Heaven.

670 There stood a hill not far, whose grisly top Belched fire and rolling smoke; the rest entire Shone with a glossy scurf, undoubted sign
That in his womb was hid metallic ore,
The work of sulphur. Thither winged with speed

675 A numerous brigad hastened; as when bands
Of pioneers, with spade and pickaxe armed,
Forerun the royal camp, to trench a field,
Or cast a rampart. Mammon led them on,
Mammon, the least erected Spirit that fell

680 From Heaven; for even in Heaven his looks and thoughts Were always downward bent, admiring more The riches of Heaven's pavement, trodden gold, Than aught divine or holy else enjoyed In vision beatific; by him first

685 Men also, and by his suggestion taught,
Ransacked the centre, and with impious hands
Rifled the bowels of their mother earth
For treasures better hid. Soon had his crew
Opened into the hill a spacious wound,

690 And digged out ribs of gold. Let none admire That riches grow in Hell; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane. And here let those Who boast in mortal things, and wondering tell Of Babel, and the works of Memphian kings,

695 Learn how their greatest monuments of fame,
And strength, and art, are easily outdone
By Spirits reprobate; and in an hour,
What in an age they, with incessant toil

And hands innumerable, scarce perform.

Nigh on the plain in many cells prepared,
That underneath had veins of liquid fire
Sluiced from the lake, a second multitude
With wondrous art founded the massy ore;
Severing each kind, and scummed the bullion dross;

705 A third as soon had formed within the ground A various mould, and from the boiling cells By strange conveyance filled each hollow nook; As in an organ, from one blast of wind, To many a row of pipes the sound-board breathes.

710 Anon out of the earth a fabric huge Rose like an exhalation, with the sound Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet, Built like a temple, where pilasters round Were set, and Doric pillars overlaid

715 With golden architrave; nor did there want Cornice or frieze, with bossy sculptures graven; The roof was fretted gold. Not Babylon, Nor great Alcairo, such magnificence Equalled, in all their glories, to enshrine

720 Belus or Sèrapis, their gods, or seat
Their kings, when Egypt with Assyria strove
In wealth and luxury. The ascending pile
Stood fixed her stately height; and straight the doors
Opening their brazen folds, discover, wide

725 Within, her ample spaces o'er the smooth And level pavement; from the arched roof, Pendent by subtle magic, many a row Of starry lamps, and blazing cressets, fed With naphtha and asphaltus, yielded light

730) As from a sky. The hasty multitude Admiring entered, and the work some praise, And some the architect; his hand was known In heaven by many a towered structure high, Where sceptred Angels held their residence,

735 And sat as Princes, whom the Supreme King Exalted to such power, and gave to rule, Each in his hierarchy, the Orders bright;
Nor was his name unheard, or unadored,
In ancient Greece; and in Ausonian land

740 Men called him Mulciber; and how he fell From Heaven they fabled, thrown by angry Jove Sheer o'er the crystal battlements; from morn To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve, A sammer's day; and with the setting sun
Dropped from the zenith, like a falling star,
On Lemnos, the Ægean isle; thus they relate,
Erring; for he with this rebellions rout
Fell long before; nor aught availed him now
To have built in Heaven high towers; nor did he scape

750 By all his engines, but was headlong sent,
With his industrious crew, to build in hell.
Meanwhile the winged heralds, by command
Of sovran power, with awful ceremony

And trumpet's sound, throughout the host proclaim

755 A solemn council forthwith to be held
At Pandemonium, the high capital
Of Satan and his peers; their summons called
From every band and squared regiment
By place or choice the worthiest, they anon-

760 With hundreds, and with thousands, trooping came Attended; all access was throughd, the gates And porches wide, but chief the spacious hall (Though like a covered field, where champions bold Wont ride in armed, and at the Soldan's chair.

765 Defied the best of Panim chivalry
To mortal combat, or career with lance,)
Thick swarmed, both on the ground and in the air
Brushed with the hiss of rustling wings. As bees
In spring time, when the sun with Taurus rides.

770 Pour forth their populous youth about the hive In clusters; they among fresh dews and flowers Fly to and fro, or on the smoothed plank, (The suburb of their straw-built citadel.)

New rubbed with balm, expatiate and confer

775 Their state affairs. So thick the aery crowd Swarmed and were straitened; till, the signal given, Behold a wonder! they but now who seemed In bigness to surpass Earth's giant sons, Now less than smallest dwarfs, in narrow room

780 Throng numberless, like that Pygmëan race Beyond the Indian mount; or fairy clves, Whose midnight revels, by a forest side, Or fountain, some belated peasant sees,

Or dreams he sees; while over-head the moon
Sits arbitress, and nearer to the earth
Wheels her pale course; they, on their mirth and dance

Intent, with jound music charm his ear;
At once with joy and fear his heart rebounds.

Thus incorporeal Spirits to smallest forms
Reduced their shapes immense, and were at large,
Though without number still, amidst the hall
Of that infernal court. But far within,
And in their own dimensions like themselves,
The great Scraphic Lords and Cherubim,
10 close recess and secret conclave sat;

795 In close recess and secret conclave sat;
A thousand demi-gods on golden seats,
Frequent and full. After short silence then,
And summons read, the great consult began.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK II.

THE ARGUMENT.

The consultation begun, Satan debates whether another battle is to be hazarded for the recovery of Heaven; some advise it, other, dissuade. A third proposal is preferred, mentioned before by Satan, to search the truth of that prophecy or tradition in Heaven concerning another world, and another kind of creature, equal, or not much inferior to themselves, about this time to be created; their doubt who shall be sent on this difficult search; Satan then chief undertakes alone the voyage; is honoured and applauded. The council thus ended, the rest betake them several ways, and to several employments, as their inclinations lead them, to entertain the time till Satan return. He passes on his journey to Hell gates, finds them shut, and who sat there to guard them, by whom at length they are opened, and discover to him the great gulf between Hell and Heaven; with what difficulty he passes through, directed by Chaos, the Power of that place, to the sight of this new world which he sought.

PARADISE LOST.

ВООК П.

IGH on a throne of royal state, which far Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind. Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold, Satan exalted sat, by merit raised To that bad eminence; and from despair Thus high uplifted beyond hope, aspires Beyond thus high; insatiate to pursue Vain war with Heaven; and, by success untaught. 10 His proud imaginations thus displayed: " Powers and Dominions, Deities of Heaven! (For, since no deep within her gulf can hold Immortal vigour, though oppressed and fallen, I give not Heaven for lost; from this descent . Celestial Virtues rising will appear : More glorious and more dread than from no fall,

More glorious and more dread than from no fall,
And trust themselves to fear no second fate.)
Me, though just right and the fixed laws of Heaven
Did first create your leader, next, free choice,
With what besides in counsel or in fight,
Hath been achieved of merit, yet this loss,
Thus far at least recovered, hath much more
Established in a safe unenvied throne,

Yielded with full consent. The happier state
In Heaven, which follows dignity, might draw
Envy from each inferior; but who here
Will envy whom the highest place exposes
Foremost to stand against the Thunderer's aim
Your bulwark, and condemus to greatest share

30 Of endless pain? Where there is then no good For which to strive, no strife can grow up there From faction; for none, sure, will claim in Hell Precedence; none, whose portion is so small Of present pain, that with ambitious mind

35 Will covet more. With this advantage then To union, and firm faith, and firm accord, More than can be in Heaven, we now return To claim our just inheritance of old, Surer to prosper than prosperity

40 Could have assured us; and by what best way, Whether of open war, or covert guile, We now debate; who can advise may speak."

He ceased; and next him Moloch, sceptred king.

Stood up, the strongest and the fiercest Spirit
That fought in Heaven, now fiercer by despair;
His trust was with the Eternal to be deemed
Equal in strength, and rather than be less,
Cared not to be at all; with that care lost,
Went all his fear; of God, or Hell, or worse,

50 He recked not; and these words thereafter spake:

"My sentence is for open war; of wiles,
More unexpert, I boast not; them let those Contrive who need, or when they need, not now;
For, while they sit contriving, shall the rest,

55 Millions that stand in arms, and longing wait The signal to ascend, sit lingering here Heaven's fugitives, and for their dwelling-place Accept this dark opprobrious den of shame, The prison of his tyranny who reigns

60 By our delay? No! let us rather choose, Armed with Hell-flames and fury, all at once O'er Heaven's high towers to force resistless way, Turning our tortures into horrid arms Against the Torturer; when to meet the noise

65 Of his almighty engine he shall hear Infernal thunder; and, for lightning, see Black fire and horror shot with equal rage Among his Angels; and his throne itself

- Mixed with Tartarean sulphur, and strange fire,
 11 His own invented torments. But perhaps
 The way seems difficult and steep to scale
 With upright wing against a higher foe;
 Let such bethink them, if the sleepy dreuch
 Of that forgetful lake benumb not still,
- 75 That in our proper motion we ascend
 Up to our native seat; descent and fall
 To us is adverse. Who but felt of late,
 When the fierce foe hung on our broken rear
 Insulting, and pursued as through the deep,
- 80) With what compulsion and laborious flight
 We sunk thus low? The ascent is easy then;
 The event is feared. Should we again provoke
 Our stronger, some worse way his wrath may find
 To our destruction, if there be in Hell
- 85 Fear to be worse destroyed. What can be worse Than to dwell here, driven out from bliss, condemned In this abhorred deep to utter woe!

 Where pain of unextinguishable fire Must exercise us, without hope of end,
- 90) The vassals of his anger, when the scourge Inexorably, and the torturing hour, Calls us to penance? More destroyed than thus, We should be quite abolished, and expire. What fear we then? what doubt we to incense
- 95 His utmost ire? which, to the height enraged, Will either quite consume us, and reduce To nothing this essential; happier far, Than miserable to have eternal being!
 Or, if our substance be indeed divine,
- And cannot cease to be, we are at worst
 On this side nothing; and by proof we feel
 Our power sufficient to disturb his Heaven,
 And with perpetual inroads to alarm,
 Though inaccessible, his fatal throne;
- 10.5 Which, if not victory, is yet revenge."

 He ended frowning, and his look denounced
 Desperate revenge, and battle dangerous
 To less than gods. On the other side uprose Belial, in act more graceful and humane.
- 110 A fairer person lost not Heaven; he seemed For dignity composed, and high exploit; But all was false and hollow; though his tongue Dropped manna, and could make the worse appear

- The better reason, to perplex and dash
 Maturest counsels; for his thoughts were low;
 To vice industrious, but to nobler deeds
 Timorous and slothful; yet he pleased the ear,
 And with persuasive accent thus began:
- "I should be much for open war, O Peers,
 As not behind in hate, if what was urged
 Main reason to persuade immediate war,
 Did not dissuade me most; and seem to cast
 Ominous conjecture on the whole success;

When he who most excels in fact of arms, In what he counsels, and in what excels, Mistrustful, grounds his courage on despair

And utter dissolution, as the scope Of all his aim, after some dire revenge.

First, what revenge? The towers of Heaven are filled With armed watch, that render all access

Impregnable; oft on the bordering deep Encamp their legions; or, with obscure wing. Scout far and wide into the realm of Night, Scorning surprise. Or could we break our way

135 By force, and at our heels all Hell should rise. With blackest insurrection, to confound Heaven's purest light; yet our great enemy All incorruptible, would on his throne Sit unpolluted; and the ethereal mould,

140 Incapable of stain, would soon expel
Her mischief, and purge off the baser fire,
Victorious. Thus repulsed, our final hope
Is flat despair; we must exasperate
The Almighty Victor to spend all his rage,

145 And that must end us; that must be our cure.
To be no more. Sad cure! for who would lose.
Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
Those thoughts, that wander through eternity,
To perish rather, swallowed up and lost

150 In the wide womb of uncreated night,
Devoid of sense and motion? And who knows,
Let this be good, whether our angry Foe
Can give it, or will ever? how he can,
Is doubtful; that he never will, is sure.

155 Will he, so wise, let loose at once his ire, Belike through impotence or unaware, To give his enemies their wish, and end Them in his anger, whom his anger saves

To punish endless? 'Wherefore cease we, then?'

160 Say they who counsel war; 'We are decreed, Reserved, and destined to eternal woe; Whatever doing, what can we suffer more; What can we suffer worse?'—Is this then worst, Thus sitting, thus consulting, thus in arms?

What! when we fled amain, pursued, and struck
With Heaven's afflicting thunder, and besought
The deep to shelter us? This Hell then seemed
A refuge from these wounds. Or when we lay Chained on the burning lake? That, sure, was worse.

170 What if the breath that kindled those grim fires, Awaked, should blow them into sevenfold rage, And plunge us in the flames? Or, from above, Should intermitted vengeance arm again His red right hand to plague us? what if all

175 Her stores were opened, and this firmament Of Hell should spout her cataracts of fire, Impendent horrors, threatening hideous fall One day upon our heads; while we, perhaps, Designing or exhorting glorious war,

180 Caught in a ficry tempost shall be hurled, Each on his rock transfixed, the sport and prey Of racking whirlwinds; or for ever sunk Under you boiling ocean, wrapped in chains: There to converse with everlasting groans,

185 Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved,
Ages of hopeless end? This would be worse.
War therefore, open or concealed, alike
My voice dissuades; for what can force or guile
With him, or who deceive his mind, whose eye

190 Views all things at one view? He from Heaven's height All these our motions vain sees and derides;
Not more almighty to resist our might,
Than wise to frustrate all our plots and wiles.
Shall we then live thus vile, the race of Heaven

195 Thus trampled, thus expelled, to suffer here Chains and these torments? Better these than worse, By my advice; since fate inevitable Subdues us, and omnipotent decree, The Victor's will. To suffer, as to do, 200 Our strength is equal, nor the law unjust That so ordains; this was at first resolved, If we were wise, against so great a foe Contending, and so doubtful what might fall.

- 1 laugh, when those who at the spear are bold
 And venturous, if that fail them, shrink, and fear,
 What yet they know must follow, to endure
 Exile, or ignominy, or bonds, or pain,
 The sentence of their conqueror. This is now
 Our doom; which if we can sustain and bear,
- 210 Our supreme foe, in time, may much remit
 His anger; and perhaps, thus far removed,
 Not mind us not offending, satisfied
 With what is punished; whence these raging fires
 Will slacken, if his breath stir not their flames.
- 215 Our purer essence then will overcome
 Their noxious vapour; or inured, not feel:
 Or changed at length, and to the place conformed
 In temper and in nature, will receive
 Familiar the fierce heat, and void of pain;
- 220 This horror will grow mild, this darkness light;
 Besides what hope the never-ending flight
 Of fature days may bring, what chance, what change
 Worth waiting, since our present lot appears
 For happy though but ill, for ill not worst,
- 225 If we procure not to ourselves more woe."
 Thus Belial, with words clothed in reason's garb
 Counselled ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth,
 Not peace; and after him thus Mammon spake:
 "Either to disenthroue the King of Heaven
- 230 We war, if war be best; or to regain
 Our own right lost. Him to unthrone we then
 May hope, when everlasting Fate shall yield
 To fickle Chance, and Chaos judge the strife;
 The former, vain to hope, argues as vain
- The latter; for what place can be for us
 Within Heaven's bound, unless Heaven's Lord supreme
 We overpower? Suppose he should relent,
 And publish grace to all, on promise made
 Of new subjection; with what eyes could we
- 240 Stand in his presence humble, and freeze Strict laws imposed, to celebrate his throne With warbled hymns, and to his Godhead sing Forced hallelujahs, while he lordly sits Our envied Sovran, and his altar breathes
- 245 Ambrosial odours and ambrosial flowers, Our servile offerings? This must be our task In Heaven, this our delight; how wearisome Eternity so spent in worship paid

To whom we hate! let us not then pursue
By force impossible, by leave obtained
Unacceptable, though in Heaven, our state
Of splendid vassalage; but rather seek
Our own good from ourselves and from our own
Live to ourselves, though in this vast recess,

255 Free and to none accountable; preferring Hard liberty before the easy yoke Of servile pomp. Our greatness will appear Then most conspicuous, when great things of small, Useful of hurtful, prosperous of adverse,

260 We can create; and in what place soe'er
Thrive under evil, and work ease out of pain,
Through labour and endurance. This deep world
Of darkness do we dread? How oft amidst Thick clouds and dark, doth Heaven's all-ruling Sire

265 Choose to reside, his glory unobscured,
And with the majesty of darkness round
Covers his throne; from whence deep thunders roar
Mustering their rage, and Heaven resembles Hell!
As he our darkness, cannot we his light

270 Imitate when we please? This desert soil
Wants not her hidden lustre, gems and gold;
Nor want we skill or art, from whence to raise
Magnificence; and what can Heaven show more?
Our torments also may in length of time

275 Become our elements; these piercing fires
As soft as now severe, our temper changed
Into their temper; which must needs remove
The sensible of pain. All things invite
To peaceful counsels, and the settled state

280 Of order, how in safety best we may Compose our present evils, with regard
Of what we are, and where; dismissing quite
All thoughts of war. Ye have what I advise."
He scarce had finished, when such murmur filled

The assembly, as when hollow rocks retain
The sound of blustering winds, which all night long
Had roused the sea, now with hoarse cadence lull
Sea-faring men o'crwatched, whose bark by chance,
Or pinnace, anchors in a craggy bay

290 After the tempest; such applause was heard As Mammon ended, and his sentence pleased, Advising peace. For, such another field They dreaded worse than Hell; so much the fear Of thunder and the sword of Michaël-

295 Wronght still within them; and no less desire To found this nether empire, which might rise, By policy, and long process of time, In emulation opposite to Heaven.
Which when Boëlzebub perceived, than whom,

300 Satan except, none higher sat, with grave
Aspect he rose, and in his rising seemed
A pillar of state; deep on his front engraven
Deliberation sat, and public care;

And princely counsel in his face yet shone,
Majestic though in ruin! Sage he stood,
With Atlantean shoulders fit to bear
The weight of mightiest monarchies; his look

Drew audience, and attention still as night, Or summer's noon-tide air; while thus he spake:

310 "Thrones and Imperial Powers, Offspring of Heaven, Ethereal Virtues! or these titles now
Must we renounce, and, changing style, be called Princes of Hell? For, so the popular vote Inclines, here to continue, and build up here

315 A growing empire; doubtless! while we dream.
And know not that the King of Heaven hath doomed
This place our dangeon, not our safe retreat
Beyond his potent arm, to live exempt
From Heaven's high jurisdiction, in new league

320 Banded against his throne; but to remain.
In strictest bondage, though thus far removed.
Under the inevitable curb reserved.
His captive multitude; for he, be sure,
In height, or depth, still first and last will reign.

325 Sole king, and of his kingdom lose no part
By our revolt; but over Hell extend
His empire, and with iron sceptre rule
Us here, as with his golden those in Heaven.
What sit we then projecting peace and war?

330 War hath determined us, and foiled with loss Irreparable; terms of peace yet none Vouchsafed or sought; for what peace will be given To us enslaved, but custody severe, And stripes, and arbitrary punishment

Inflicted? and what peace can we return,
But, to our power, hostility and hate,
Untamed reluctance, and revenge, though slow
Yet ever plotting how the Conqueror least

May reap his conquest, and may least rejoice
340 In doing what we most in suffering feel?
Nor will occasion want, nor shall we need
With dangerous expedition, to invade
Heaven, whose high walls fear no assault or siege,

Or ambush from the deep; what if we find Some easier enterprise? There is a place.

345 Some easier enterprise? There is a place,
If ancient and prophetic fame in Heaven
Err not, another world, the happy seat
Of some new race called Man, about this time
To be created like to us, though less

Of him who rules above; so was his will Pronounced among the gods, and by an oath,
That shook Heaven's whole circumference, confirmed.
Thither let us bend all our thoughts, to learn

355 What creatures there inhabit, of what mould,
Or substance, how endued, and what their power,
And where their weakness, how attempted best,
By force, or subtlety. Though Heaven be shut
And Heaven's high Arbitrator sit secure

360 In his own strength, this place may lie exposed, The utmost border of his kingdom, left To their defence who hold it; here perhaps Some advantageous act may be achieved By sudden onset; either with Hell fire

365 To waste his whole creation, or possess
All as our own, and drive, as we were driven,
The puny habitants; or, if not drive,
Seduce them to our party, that their God
May prove their foe, and with repenting hand

Abolish his own works. This would surpass
Common revenge and interrupt his joy
In our confusion, and our joy upraise
In his disturbance; when his darling sons,
Hurled headlong to partake with us, shall curse

Their frail original, and faded bliss,
Faded so soon! Advise, if this be worth
Attempting, or to sit in darkness here
Hatching vain empires." Thus Beëlzebub
Pleaded his devilish counsel, first devised

380 By Satan, and in part proposed; for whence, But from the author of all ill, could spring So deep a malice, to confound the race Of mankind in one root, and Earth with Hill

To mingle and involve, done all to spite
385 The great Creator? But their spite still serves
His glory to augment. The bold design
Pleased highly those infernal States, and joy
Sparkled in all their eyes; with full assent
They vote; whereat his speech he thus renews:

390 "Well have ye judged, well ended long debate, Synod of gods! and, like to what ye are, Great things resolved; which from the lowest deep Will once more lift us up, in spite of Fate, Nearer our ancient seat; perhaps in view

395 Of those bright confines, whence, with neighbouring arms, And opportune excursion, we may chance Re-enter Heaven; or else in some mild zone Dwell, not unvisited of Heaven's fair light, Secure, and at the brightening orient beam

400 Purge off this gloom; the soft delicious air,
To heal the scar of these corrosive fires,
Shall breathe her balm. But first, whom shall we send
In search of this new world? whom shall we find Sufficient? Who shall tempt with wandering feet

405 The dark, unbottomed, infinite abyss,
And through the palpable obscure find out
His uncouth way; or spread his aery flight,
Upborne with indefatigable wings
Over the vast abrupt, ere he arrive

410 The happy isle? What strength, what art can then Suffice, or what evasion bear him safe
Through the strict senteries, and stations thick
Of angels watching round? Here he had need
All circumspection; and we now no less

The weight of all, and our last hope, relies."

This said, he sat; and expectation held His look suspense, awaiting who appeared To second, or oppose, or undertake

420 The perilons attempt; but all sat mute,
Pondering the danger with deep thoughts; and each
In other's countenance read his own dismay,
Astonished! None, among the choice and prime
Of those Heaven-warring champions, could be found

425 So hardy as to proffer or accept,
Alone, the dreadful voyage; till at last
Satan, whom now transcendent glory raised
Above his fellows, with monarchal pride,

(Conscious of highest worth) unmoved thus spake:

"O Progeny of Heaven, empyreal Thronos!
With reason hath deep silence and demur
Seized us, though undismayed; long is the way
And hard, that out of Hell leads up to light
Our prison strong; this huge convex of fire,

Outrageous to devour, immures us round Ninefold; and gates of burning adamant, Barred over us, prohibit all egress. These passed, if any pass, the void profound Of unessential Night receives him next, 440 Wide gaping, and with utter loss of being Threatens him, plunged in that abortive gulf. If thence he scape into whatever world, Or unknown region, what remains him less Than unknown dangers, and as hard escape?

445 But I should ill become this throne, O Peers!
And this imperial sovranty adorned
With splendour, armed with power, if aught proposed
And judged of public moment, in the shape
Of difficulty or danger, could deter

450 Me from attempting. Wherefore do I assume These royalties, and not refuse to reign, Refusing to accept as great a share Of hazard, as of honour, due alike To him who reigns, and so much to him due

455 Of hazard more, as he above the rest
High-honoured sits? Go therefore, mighty Powers!
Terror of Heaven, though fallen! intend at home,
While here shall be our home, what best may ease
The present misery, and render Hell

460 More tolerable; if there be cure, or charm,
To respite, or deceive, or slack the pain
Of this ill mansion. Intermit no watch
Against a wakeful foe, while I abroad,
Through all the coasts of dark destruction, seek

465 Deliverance for us all; this enterprise
None shall partake with me." Thus saying, rose
The monarch, and prevented all reply;
Prudent, lest, from his resolution raised,
Others among the chief might offer now,

470 Certain to be refused, what erst they feared;
And so refused, might in opinion stand
His rivals, winning cheap the high repute,
Which he through hazard huge must earn. But they

Dreaded not more the adventure than his voice
475 Forbidding; and at once with him they rose;
Their rising all at once was as the sound
Of thunder heard remote. Towards him they bend
With awful reverence prone; and as a god
Extol him equal to the Highest in Heaven;

480 Nor failed they to express how much they praised
That for the general safety he despised
His own; for neither do the Spirits damned
Lose all their virtue; lest bad men should boast
Their specious deeds on earth, which glory excites,

485 Or close ambition varnished o'er with zeal.
Thus they their doubtful consultations dark
Ended, rejoicing in their matchless chief;
As when from mountain-tops the dusky clouds
Ascending, while the north-wind sleeps, o'er-spread

Heaven's cheerful face, the lowering element Scowls o'er the darkened landscape snow, or shower; If chance the radiant sun with farewell sweet Extend his evening beam, the fields revive, The birds their notes renew, and bleating herds

49: Attest their joy, that hill and valley rings.
O shame to men! Devil with devil danned
Firm concord holds, men only disagree
Of creatures rational, though under hope
Of heavenly grace; and, God proclaiming peace.

500 Yet live in hatred, enmity, and strife
Among themselves, and levy cruel wars,
Wasting the earth, each other to destroy;
As if (which might induce us to accord)
Man had not hellish foes enow besides,

505 That, day and night, for his destruction wait.

The Stygian council thus dissolved; and forth
In order came the grand infernal Peers;
Midst came their mighty Paramount, and seemed Alone the antagonist of Heaven, nor less

Than Hell's dread emperor, with pomp supreme,
And godlike imitated state. Him round
A globe of fiery Scraphim enclosed,
With bright emblazonry, and horrent arms.
Then, of their session ended, they bid cry

515 With trumpets' regal sound the great result;
Towards the four winds four speedy cherubim
Put to their mouths the sounding alchymy,
By herald's voice explained; the hollow Abyss

Heard far and wide, and all the host of Hell
With deafening shout returned them loud acclaim.
Thence more at ease their minds, and somewhat raised
By false presumptuous hope, the ranged Powers

Disband, and, wandering, each his several way

Pursues, as inclination or sad choice

525 Leads him perplexed, where he may likeliest find Trace to his restless thoughts, and entertain The irksome hours, till his great chief return. Part on the plain, or in the air sublime Upon the wing, or in swift race contend,

530 As at the Olympian games, or Pythian fields; Part curb their fiery steeds, or shun the goal With rapid wheels, or fronted brigads form. As when, to warn proud cities, war appears Waged in the troubled sky, and armies rush

535 To battle in the clouds; before each van
Prick forth the aery knights, and couch their spears
Till thickest legions close; with feats of arms
From either end of heaven the welkin burns.
Others, with vast Typhœan rage, more fell,

540 Rend up both rocks and hills, and ride the air In whirlwind; Hell scarce holds the wild uproar As when Alcides, from Œchalia crowned With conquest, felt the envenomed robe, and tore Through pain up by the roots Thessalian pines,

545 And Lichas from the top of Œta threw
Into the Euboic Sea. Others more mild,
Retreated in a silent valley, sing
With notes angelical to many a harp
Their own heroic deeds, and hapless fall

550 By doom of battle; and complain that fate
Free virtue should enthrall to force, or chance.
Their song was partial; but the harmony
(What could it less when Spirits immortal sing?)
Suspended Hell, and took with ravishment

555 The thronging audience. In discourse more sweet,
(For eloquence the soul, song charms the sense)
Others apart sat on a hill retired,
In thoughts more elevate, and reasoned high
Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate;

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute;
And found no end, in wandering mazes lost.
Of good, and evil, much they argued then,
Of happiness, and final misery,

Passion, and apathy, and glory and shame
Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy!
Yet with a pleasing sorcery could charm
Pain for a while, or anguish; and excite
Fallacious hope, or arm the obdured breast
With stubborn patience, as with triple steel.

570 Another part, in squadrons and gross bands,
On bold adventure to discover wide
That dismal world, if any clime perhaps
Might yield them easier habitation, bend
Four ways their flying march, along the banks

575 Of four infernal rivers, that disgorge
Into the burning lake their baleful streams;
Abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate;
Sad Acheron of sorrow, black and deep;
Cocytus, named of lamentation loud

580 Heard on the rucful stream; fierce Phlegethon,
Whose waves of torrent fire inflame with rage.
Far off from these, a slow and silent stream,
Lethè, the river of oblivion, rolls
Her watery labyrinth; whereof who drinks

Forthwith his former state and being forgets, Forgets both joy, and grief, pleasure, and pain. Beyond this flood a frozen continent Lies dark and wild; beat with perpetual storms Of whirlwind, and dire hail, which on firm land

590 Thaws not, but gathers heap, and ruin seems
Of ancient pile; all else, deep snow and ice,
A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog
Betwixt Damiata and mount Casius old,
Where armies whole have sunk; the parching air

595 Burns frore, and cold performs the effect of fire.
Thither, by harpy-footed Furies haled,
At certain revolutions, all the damned
Are brought; and feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce;

600 From beds of raging fire to starve in ice
Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine,
Immoveable, infixed, and frozen round,
Periods of time; thence hurried back to fire,
They ferry over this Lethean sound

605 Both to and fro, their sorrow to augment,
And wish and struggle, as they pass, to reach
The tempting stream, with one small drop to lose
In sweet forgetfulness all pain and woe.

All in one moment, and so near the prink;
But Fate withstands, and to oppose the attempt
Medusa with Gorgonian terror guards
The ford, and of itself the water flies
All taste of living wight, as once it fled
The lip of Tantalus. Thus roving on

615 In confused march forlorn, the adventurous bands, With shuddering horror pale, and eyes aghast, Viewed first their lamentable lot, and found No rest; through many a dark and dreary vale They passed, and many a region dolorous,

620 O'er many a frozen, many a fiery Alp,
Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades of death,—
A universe of death, which God by curse
Created evil; for evil only good,
Where all life dies, death lives, and nature breeds,

625 Perverse, all monstrous, all prodigious things,
Abominable, inutterable, and worse
Than fables yet have feigned, or fear conceived,
Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire.
Meanwhile the Adversary of God and man,

630 Satan, with thoughts inflamed of highest design, Puts on swift wings, and towards the gates of Hell Explores his solitary flight; sometimes He scours the right-hand coast, sometimes the left; Now shaves with level wing the deep; then soars

As when far off at sea a fleet descried
Hangs in the clouds, by equinoctial winds
Close sailing from Bengala, or the isles
Of Ternate and Tidore, whence merchants bring

Their spicy drugs; they on the trading flood
Through the wide Æthiopian to the Cape
Ply, stemming nightly toward the pole; so seemed Far off the flying Fiend. At last appear
Hell bounds, high reaching to the horrid roof,

And thrice three-fold the gates; three folds were brass,
Three iron, three of adamantine rock,
Impenetrable, impaled with circling fire,
Yet unconsumed. Before the gates there sat
On either side a formidable Shape;

The one seemed woman to the waist, and fair, But ended foul, in many a scaly fold, Voluminous and vast, a serpent armed With mortal sting; about her middle round A cry of Hell-hounds never ceasing barked
With wide Cerberean mouths full loud, and rung
A hideous peal; yet, when they list, would creep,
If aught disturbed their noise, into her womb,
And kennel there; yet there still barked and howled Within, unseen. Far less abhorred than these

660 Vexed Scylla, bathing in the sea that parts
Calabria from the hoarse Trinacrian shore;
Nor uglier follow the night-hag, when, called
In secret, riding through the air she comes,
Lured with the smell of infant blood, to dance

With Lapland witches, while the labouring moon Eclipses at their charms. The other Shape,—
If shape it might be called that shape had none Distinguishable, in member, joint, or limb;
Or substance might be called, that shadow seemed,

For each seemed either,—black it stood as Night,
Fierce as ten Furies, terrible as Hell,
And shook a dreadful dart; what seemed his head
The likeness of a kingly crown had on.

Satan was now at hand, and from his seat

The monster moving onward came as fast
With horrid strides; Hell trembled as he strode.
The undaunted Fiend, what this might be admired,
Admired, not feared; God and his Son except,
Created thing nought valued he, nor shunned;

680 And, with disdainful look, thus first began:

"Whence, and what art thou, execrable Shape!

That darest, though grim and terrible, advance

Thy miscreated front athwart my way

To yonder gates? Through them I mean to pass,
That be assured, without leave asked of thee.
Retire, or taste thy folly, and learn by proof,
Hell-born, not to contend with Spirits of Heaven."

To whom the Goblin, full of wrath, replied:
"Art thou that Traitor-angel; art thou he,

690 Who first broke peace in Heaven, and faith, till then Unbroken; and, in proud rebellious arms, Drew after him the third part of Heaven's sons Conjured against the Highest; for which both thou And they, outcast from God, are here condemned

To waste eternal days in woe and pain?

And reckonest thou thyself with Spirits of Heaven,
Hell-doomed, and breathest defiance here and scorn,
Where I reign king, and, to enrage thee more,

Thy king and lord? Back to thy punishment,

False fugitive! and to thy speed add wings,
Lest with a whip of scorpions I pursue
Thy lingering; or with one stroke of this dart

Strange horror seize thee, and pangs unfelt before."

So spake the grisly Terror, and in shape,
(So speaking, and so threatening,) grew ten-fold
More dreadful and deform. On the other side,
Incensed with indignation, Satan stood
Unterrified; and like a comet burned,
That fires the length of Ophiuchus huge

710 In the arctic sky, and from his horrid hair Shakes pestilence and war. Each at the head Levelled his deadly aim; their fatal hands No second stroke intend; and such a frown Each cast at the other, as when two black clouds,

715 With heaven's artillery fraught, come rattling on Over the Caspian, then stand front to front, Hovering a space, till winds the signal blow To join their dark encounter in mid-air. So frowned the mighty combatants, that Hell

720 Grew darker at their frown; so matched they stood; For never but once more was either like To meet so great a foe. And now great deeds Had been achieved, whereof all Hell had rung, Had not the snaky Sorceress, that sat

725 Fast by Hell-gate, and kept the fatal key,
Risen, and with hideous outcry rushed between.
"O father, what intends thy hand," she cried,
"Against thy only son? What fury, O son,
Possesses thee to bend that mortal dart

730 Against thy father's head? and knowest for whom; For him who sits above, and laughs the while At thee, ordained his drudge to execute Whate'er his wrath, which he calls justice, bids,—His wrath, which one day will destroy ye both!"

735 She spake, and at her words the hellish Pest Forebore; then these to her Satan returned:
"So strange thy outcry, and thy words so strange
Thou interposest, that my sudden hand,
Prevented, spares to tell thee yet by deeds

740 What it intends, till first I know of thee,
What thing thou art, thus double-formed, and why,
In this infernal vale first met, thou callest
Me father, and that phantasm callest my son.

I know thee not, nor ever saw till now 745 Sight more detestable than him and thee." To whom, thus the Portress of Hell-gate replied: "Hast thou forgot me then, and do I seem Now in thine eye so foul? once deemed so fair In Heaven, when at the assembly, and in sight 750 Of all the Seraphim with thee combined In bold conspiracy against Heaven's King, All on a sudden miserable pain Surprised thee, dim thine eyes, and dizzy swum In darkness, while thy head flames thick and fast 755 Threw forth, till on the left side opening wide, Likest to thee in shape and countenance bright, Then shining heavenly fair, a goddess armed, Out of thy head I sprung; amazement seized All the host of Heaven; back they recoiled afraid At first, and called me Sin, and for a sign 760° Portentous held me; but, familiar grown, I pleased, and with attractive graces won The most averse, thee chiefly, who full oft Thyself in me thy perfect image viewing 765Becamest enamoured; and such joy thou tookest With me in secret, that my womb conceived A growing burden. Meanwhile war arose, And fields were fought in Heaven; wherein remained-For what could else?—to our Almighty Foe Clear victory; to our part loss and rout 770 Through all the Empyrean. Down they fell, Driven headlong from the pitch of Heaven, down Into this Deep; and, in the general fall, I also; at which time this pewerful key Into my hand was given, with charge to keep 775 These gates for ever shut, which none can pass Without my opening. Pensive here I sat Alone; but long I sat not, till my womb, Pregnant by thee, and now excessive grown, 780 Prodigious motion felt, and rueful throes. At last this odious offspring whom thou seest. Thine own begotten, breaking violent way, Tore through my entrails, that, with fear and pain Distorted, all my nether shape thus grew 785 Transformed. But he, my inbred enemy

Forth issued, brandishing his fatal dart
Made to destroy. I fled, and cried out, Death!
Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sighed

From all her caves, and back resounded Death!

790 I fled; but he pursued, (though more, it seems, Inflamed with lust than rage,) and, swifter far,
Me overtook, his mother, all dismayed,
And, in embraces forcible and foul
Ingendering with me, of that rape begot

795 These yelling monsters, that with ceaseless cry Surround me, as thou sawest, hourly conceived, And hourly born, with sorrow infinite To me; for, when they list, into the womb That bred them they return, and howl, and gnaw

My bowels, their repast; then, bursting forth Afresh, with conscious terrors vex me round, That rest or intermission none I find.
Before mine eyes in opposition sits
Grim Death, my son and foe, who sets them on;

And me, his parent, would full soon devour,
For want of other prey, but that he knows
His end with mine involved, and knows that I
Should prove a bitter morsel, and his bane,
Whenever that shall be; so Fate pronounced.

But thou, O father! I forewarn thee, shun
His deadly arrow; neither vainly hope
To be invulnerable in those bright arms,
Though tempered heavenly; for that mortal dint,
Save he who reigns above, none can resist."

She finished; and the subtle Fiend his lore
Soon learned, now milder, and thus answered smooth:
"Dear daughter! since thou claimest me for thy sire,
And my fair son here showest me, the dear pledge
Of dalliance had with thee in Heaven, and joys
820 Then sweet, now sad to mention, through dire change

820 Then sweet, now sad to mention, through dire Befallen us, unforeseen, unthought of; know, I come no enemy, but to set free, From out this dark and dismal house of pain, Both him and thee, and all the heavenly host

825 Of Spirits, that, in our just pretences armed,
Fell with us from on high; from them I go
This uncouth errand sole; and one for all Myself expose, with lonely steps to tread
The unfounded deep, and through the void immense

830 To search with wandering quest a place foretold Should be, and, by concurring signs, ere now Created, vast and round; a place of bliss In the purlieus of Heaven; and therein placed

A race of upstart creatures, to supply 835 Perhaps our vacant room; though more removed, Lest Heaven, surcharged with potent multitude, Might hap to move new broils. Be this, or aught Than this more secret, now designed, I haste To know; and, this once known, shall soon return, 840 And bring ye to the place where thou and Death Shall dwell at ease, and up and down unseen Wing silently the buxom air, embalmed. With odours; there ye shall be fed and filled Immeasurably; all things shall be your prey." He ceased; for both seemed highly pleased, and Death 845 Grinned horrible a ghastly smile, to hear His famine should be filled, and blessed his maw Destined to that good hour; no less rejoiced His mother bad, and thus bespake her sire: 850 "The key of this infernal pit, by due And by command of Heaven's all-powerful King, I keep, by him forbidden to unlock These adamantine gates; against all force Death ready stands to interpose his dart, Fearless to be o'ermatched by living might. 855But what owe I to his commands above. Who hates me, and hath hither thrust me down Into this gloom of Tartarus profound, To sit in hateful office here confined, 860 Inhabitant of Heaven, and heavenly-born, Here in perpetual agony and pain, With terrors and with clamours compassed round Of mine own brood, that on my bowels feed? Thou art my father, thou my author, thou 865 My being gavest me; whom should I obey But thee? whom follow? thou wilt bring me soon To that new world of light and bliss, among The gods who live at ease, where I shall reign At thy right hand voluptuous, as beseems Thy daughter and thy darling, without end." 870 Thus saying, from her side the fatal key, Sad instrument of all our woe, she took: And, towards the gate rolling her bestial train, Forthwith the huge portcullis high up-drew, Which, but herself, not all the Stygian Powers 875 Could once have moved; then in the keyhole turns The intricate wards, and every bolt and bar

Of massy iron, or solid rock, with ease

Unfastens. On a sudden open fly,
With impetuous recoil and jarring sound,
The infernal doors, and on their hinges grate
Harsh thunder, that the lowest bottom shook
Of Erebus. She opened, but to shut
Excelled her power; the gates wide open stood,

That with extended wings a bannered host,
Under spread ensigns marching, might pass through
With horse and chariots ranked in loose array;
So wide they stood, and like a furnace mouth
Cast forth redounding smoke and ruddy flame.

890 Before their eyes, in sudden view, appear
The secrets of the hoary deep; a dark
Illimitable ocean, without bound,
Without dimension; where length, breadth, and height,
And time, and place, are lost; where eldest Night

895 And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold
Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise
Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.
For Hot, Cold, Moist, and Dry, four champions fierce,
Strive here for mastery, and to battle bring

900 Their embryon atoms; they around the flag
Of each his faction, in their several clans,
Light-armed or heavy, sharp, smooth, swift, or slow,
Swarm populous, (unnumbered as the sands
Of Barca or Cyrenè's torrid soil,

905 Levied to side with warring winds, and poise
Their lighter wings.) To whom these most adhere
He rules a moment; Chaos umpire sits,
And by decision more embroils the fray
By which he reigns; next him, high arbiter,

910 Chance governs all. Into this wild Abyss.—
The womb of Nature, and perhaps her grave,
Of neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor fire,
But all these, in their pregnant causes, mixed
Confusedly, and which thus must ever fight,

915 Unless the Almighty Maker them ordain
His dark materials, to create more worlds;—
Into this wild Abyss the wary Fiend
Stood on the brink of Hell and looked a while,
Pondering his voyage; for no narrow frith

920 He had to cross. Nor was his ear less pealed With noises loud and ruinous, (to compare Great things with small,) than when Bellona storms With all her battering engines, bent to rase Some capital city; or less than if this frame

925 Of heaven were falling, and these elements,
In mutiny, had from her axle torn
The steadfast earth. At last, his sail-broad vans
He spreads for flight, and, in the surging smoke
Uplifted, spurns the ground. Thence many a league,

930 As in a cloudy chair, ascending rides

As in a cloudy chair, ascending rides
Audacious; but, that seat soon failing, meets
A vast vacuity; all unawares,
Fluttering his pennons vain, plumb-down he drops
Ten thousand fathom deep, and to this hour

935 Down had been falling, had not, by ill chance,
The strong rebuff of some tumultuous cloud,
Instinct with fire and nitre, hurried him
As many miles aloft; that fury stayed,
Quenched in a boggy Syrtis, neither sea,

940 Nor good dry land, nigh foundered on he fares,
Treading the crude consistence, half on foot,
Half flying; behoves him now both oar and sail.
As when a gryphon, through the wilderness
With winged course, o'er hill or moory dale,

945 Pursues the Arimaspian, who by stealth
Had from his wakeful custody purloined
The guarded gold; so eagerly the Fiend,
O'er bog, or steep, through strait, rough, dense, or rare,
With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues his way,

950 And swims, or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies. At length a universal hubbub wild Of stunning sounds, and voices all confused, Borne through the hollow dark, assaults his ear With loudest vehemence. Thither he plies,

955 Undaunted, to meet there whatever Power
Or Spirit of the nethermost Abyss
Might in that noise reside, of whom to ask
Which way the nearest coast of darkness lies,
Bordering on light; when, straight, behold the throne

960 Of Chaos, and his dark pavilion spread
Wide on the wasteful deep; with him enthroned
Sat sable-vested Night, eldest of things,
The consort of his reign; and by them stood
Orcus and Ades, and the dreaded name

96è Of Demogorgon; Rumour next, and Chance, And Tumult, and Confusion, all embroiled, And Discord, with a thousand various mouths. To whom Satan, turning boldly, thus: "Ye Powers And Spirits of this nethermost Abyss,

Chaos and ancient Night, I come no spy,
With purpose to explore or to disturb
The secrets of your realm; but, by constraint
Wandering this darksome desert, as my way
Lies through your spacious empire up to light,

975 Alone and without guide, half lost, I seek
What readiest path leads where your gloomy bounds
Confine with Heaven; or if some other place,
From your dominion won, the ethereal King
Possesses lately, thither to arrive,

980 I travel this profound. Direct my course;
Directed, no mean recompense it brings
To your behoof; if I that region lost,
All usurpation thence expelled, reduce
To her original darkness and your sway,

985 (Which is my present journey,) and once more Erect the standard there of ancient Night;
Yours be the advantage all, mine the revenge!"
Thus Satan; and him thus the Anarch old,
With faltering speech and visage incomposed,

990 Answered: "I know thee, stranger, who thou art;
That mighty leading Angel, who of late
Made head against Heaven's King, though overthrown,
I saw and heard; for such a numerous host
Fled not in silence through the frighted Deep

995 With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout,
Confusion worse confounded; and Heaven-gates
Poured out by millions her victorious bands,
Pursuing. I upon my frontiers here
Keep residence; if all I can will serve

1000 That little which is left so to defend,
Encroached on still through our intestine broils,
Weakening the sceptre of old Night; first Hell,
Your dungeon, stretching far and wide beneath,
Now lately Heaven and Earth, another world,

Hung o'er my realm, linked in a golden chain
To that side Heaven from whence your legions fell;
If that way be your walk, you have not far;
So much the nearer danger. Go and speed!
Havoc, and spoil, and ruin are my gain."

He ceased; and Satan stayed not to reply;
But, glad that now his sea should find a shore,
With fresh alacrity and force renewed,
Springs upward, like a pyramid of fire,

Into the wild expanse; and, through the shock
Of fighting elements, on all sides round
Environed, wins his way; harder beset
And more endangered, than when Argo passed
Through Bosporus, betwixt the justling rocks;
Or when Ulysses on the larboard shunned

1020 Charybdis, and by the other whirlpool steered. So he with difficulty and labour hard Moved on; with difficulty and labour he; But, he once past, soon after, when man fell, Strange alteration! Sin and Death amain

Following his track, (such was the will of Heaven)
Paved after him a broad and beaten way
Over the dark Abyss, whose boiling gulf
Tamely endured a bridge, of wondrous length,
From Hell continued, reaching the utmost orb

1030 Of this frail world; by which the Spirits perverse With easy intercourse pass to and fro To tempt or punish mortals, except whom God and good Angels guard by special grace.

But now, at last, the sacred influence

1035 Of light appears; and from the walls of Heaven Shoots far into the bosom of dim Night A glimmering dawn. Here Nature first begins Her furthest verge, and Chaos to retire As from her outmost works, a broken foe,

1040 With tumult less, and with less hostile din;
That Satan with less toil, and now with ease,
Wafts on the calmer wave by dubious light;
And, like a weather-beaten vessel, holds
Gladly the port, though shrouds and tackle torn;

Or in the emptier waste, resembling air,
Weighs his spread wings, at leisure to behold
Far off the empyreal Heaven, extended wide
In circuit, undetermined square or round,
With opal towers, and battlements adorned,

1050 Of living sapphire, once his native seat;
And fast by, hanging in a golden chain,
This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.
Thither, full fraught with mischievous revenge,

1055 Accursed, and in a cursed hour, he hies.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK III.

THE ARGUMENT.

God, sitting on his throne, sees Satan flying towards this world, then newly created; shows him to the Son, who sat at his right hand; foretells the success of Satan in perverting mankind; clears his own justice and wisdom from all imputation, having created Man free, and able enough to have withstood his tempter; yet declares his purpose of grace towards him, in regard he fell not of his own malice, as did Satan, but by him seduced. The Son of God renders praises to his Father for the manifestation of his gracious purpose towards Man; but God again declares, that grace cannot be extended towards Man without the satisfaction of divine justice; Man hath offended the divine majesty of God by aspiring to Godhead, and therefore, with all his progeny, devoted to death, must die, unless some one can be found sufficient to answer for his offence and undergo his punishment. The Son of God freely offers himself a ransom for man; the Father accepts him, ordains his incarnation, pronounces his exaltation above all names in Heaven and Earth; commands all the Angels to adore him; they obey, and hymning to their harps in full choir, celebrate the Father and the Son. Meanwhile Satan alights upon the bare convex of this world's outermost orb; where, wandering, he first finds a place, since called the Limbo of Vanity; what persons and things fly up thither; thence comes to the gate of Heaven, described ascending by stairs, and the waters above the firmament that flow about it; his passage thence to the orb of the sun; he finds there Uriël, the regent of that orb, but first changes himself into the shape of a meaner angel, and, pretending a zealous desire to behold the new creation, and Man whom God had placed here, inquires of him the place of his habitation, and is directed; alights first on Mount Niphates.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK III.

AIL, holy Light! offspring of Heaven first-born! Or of the Eternal co-eternal beam May I express thee unblamed? since God is light And never but in unapproached light Dwelt from eternity; dwelt then in thee, Bright effluence of bright essence increate. Or hearest thou rather pure ethereal stream, Whose fountain who shall tell? before the sun. Before the Heavens thou wert, and, at the voice 10 Of God, as with a mantle, didst invest The rising world of waters dark and deep, Won from the void and formless infinite. Thee I revisit now with bolder wing, Escaped the Stygian pool, though long detained 15 In that obscure sojourn, while in my flight Through atter and through middle darkness borne, With other notes than to the Orphéan lyre. I sung of Chaos and eternal Night; Taught, by the heavenly Muse, to venture down 20 The dark descent, and up to re-ascend, Though hard and rare; thee I revisit safe,

And feel thy sovran vital lamp; but thou Revisitest not these eyes, that roll in vain To find the piercing ray, and find no dawn;

So thick a drop serene hath quenched their orbs,

Or dim suffusion veiled. Yet not the more Cease I to wander where the Muses haunt Clear spring, or shady grove, or sunny hill, Smit with the love of sacred song; but chief Thee, Sion, and the flowery brooks beneath, That wash thy hallowed feet, and warbling flow,

That wash thy hallowed feet, and warbling flow Nightly I visit; nor sometimes forget Those other two, equalled with me in fate, So were I equalled with them in renown,

35 Blind Thamyris, and blind Mæonides,
And Tiresias and Phineus, prophets old;
Then feed on thoughts, that voluntary move
Harmonious numbers; as the wakeful bird
Sings darkling, and in shadiest covert hid

40 Tunes her nocturnal note. Thus, with the year Seasons return; but not to me returns Day, or the sweet approach of even or morn, Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose, Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine;

45 But cloud instead, and ever-during dark
Surrounds me from the cheerful ways of men
Cut off, and for the book of knowledge fair
Presented with a universal blank
Of Nature's works, to me expunged and rased,

50 And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out. So much the rather thou, celestial Light, Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers Irradiate; there plant eyes; all mist from thence Purge and disperse, that I may see and tell

55 Of things invisible to mortal sight.

Now had the Almighty Father from above, From the pure empyréan where he sits High throned above all height, bent down his eye His own works and their works at once to view.

60 About him all the Sanctities of Heaven Stood thick as stars, and from his sight received Beatitude past atterance; on his right The radiant image of his glory sat, His only Son. On earth he first beheld

Our two first parents, yet the only two Of mankind, in the happy garden placed, Reaping immortal fruits of joy and love, Uninterrupted joy, unrivalled love, In blissful solitude. He then surveyed

70 Hell and the gulf between, and Satan there

Coasting the wall of Heaven on this side Night In the dun air sublime, and ready now To stoop, with wearied wings and willing feet, On the bare outside of this world, that seemed 75 Firm land embossomed without firmament, Uncertain which, in ocean or in air. Him God beholding from his prospect high, Wherein past, present, future, he beholds, Thus to his only Son, foreseeing, spake.

"Only begotten Son, seest thou what rage Transports our Adversary? whom no bounds Prescribed, no bars of Hell, nor all the chains Heaped on him there, nor yet the main Abyss, Wide interrupt, can hold; so bent he seems 85 On desperate revenge, that shall redound Upon his own rebellious head. And now, Through all restraint broke loose, he wings his way Not far off Heaven, in the precincts of light, Directly towards the new-created world,

90 And Man there placed, with purpose to assay If him by force he can destroy, or, worse, By some false guile pervert; and shall pervert; For Man will hearken to his glozing lies, And easily transgress the sole command,

95 Sole pledge of his obedience; so will fall He and his faithless progeny. Whose fault? Whose but his own? Ingrate! he had of me All he could have; I made him just and right, Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.

100 Such I created all the ethereal Powers
And Spirits, both them who stood, and them who failed:
Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell.
Not free, what proof could they have given sincere
Of true allegiance, constant faith or love,

105 Where only what they needs must do appeared,
Not what they would? what praise could they receive?
What pleasure I from such obedience paid,
When will and reason, (reason also is choice)
Useless and vain, of freedom both despoiled,

110 Made passive both, had served necessity,
Not me? They, therefore, as to right belonged,
So were created; nor can justly accuse
Their Maker, or their making, or their fate,
As if predestination over-ruled

115 Their will, disposed by absolute decree,

Or high foreknowledge; they themselves decreed Their own revolt, not I; if I foreknew, Foreknowledge had no influence on their fault, Which had no less proved certain unforeknown:

120 So, without least impulse or shadow of fate, Or aught by me immutably foreseen, They trespass, authors to themselves in all, Both what they judge, and what they choose; for so I formed them free; and free they must remain,

Till they enthrall themselves; I else must change Their nature, and revoke the high decree Unchangeable, eternal, which ordained Their freedom; they themselves ordained their fall. The first sort by their own suggestion fell,

130 Self-tempted, self-depraved; Man falls, deceived By the other first; Man therefore shall find grace, The other none. In mercy and justice both, Through Heaven and Earth, so shall my glory excel: But mercy, first and last, shall brightest shine."

Thus while God spake, ambrosial fragrance filled All Heaven, and in the blessed Spirits elect Sense of new joy ineffable diffused.

Beyond compare the Son of God was seen Most glorious; in him all his Father shone

140 Substantially expressed; and in his face
Divine compassion visibly appeared,
Love without end, and without measure grace;
Which uttering, thus he to his Father spake:

"O Father, gracious was that word which closed
Thy sovran sentence, that Man should find grace:
For which both Heaven and Earth shall high extol
Thy praises, with the innumerable sound
Of hymns and sacred songs, wherewith thy throne
Encompassed shall resound thee ever blest.

150 For should Man finally be lost, should Man,
Thy creature late so loved, thy youngest son,
Fall circumvented thus by fraud, though joined
With his own folly? that be from thee far,
That far be from thee, Father, who art Judge

Of all things made, and judgest only right.
Or shall the Adversary thus obtain
His end, and frustrate thine? shall he fulfil
His malice; and thy goodness bring to nought;
Or proud return, though to his heavier doom,

160 Yet with revenge accomplished, and to Hell

Draw after him the whole race of mankind, By him corrupted? or wilt thou thyself Abolish thy creation, and anmake, For him, what for thy glory thou hast made?

165 So should thy goodness and thy greatness both Be questioned and blasphemed without defence."

To whom the great Creator thus replied:

"O Son, in whom my soul hath chief delight, Son of my bosom, Son who art alone

170 My word, my wisdom, and effectual might,
All hast thou spoken as my thoughts are, all
As my eternal purpose hath decreed;
Man shall not quite be lost, but saved who will;
Yet not of will in him, but grage in me

175 Freely vouchsafed; once more I will renew
His lapséd powers, though forfeit, and enthralled
By sin to foul exorbitant desires;
Upheld by me, yet once more he shall stand
On even ground against his mortal foe;

180 By me upheld, that he may know how frail His fallen condition is, and to me owe All his deliverance, and to none but me. Some I have chosen of peculiar grace, Elect above the rest; so is my will;

The rest shall hear me call, and oft be warned
Their sinful state, and to appease betimes
The incensed Deity, while offered grace,
Invites; for I will clear their senses dark,
What may suffice, and soften stony hearts

190 To pray, repent, and bring obedience due.
To prayer, repentance, and obedience due,
Though but endeavoured with sincere intent,
Mine ear shall not be slow, mine eye not shut.
And I will place within them, as a guide,

195 My umpire Conscience, whom if they will hear, Light after light, well used, they shall attain, And to the end persisting, safe arrive. This my long sufferance, and my day of grace, They who neglect and scorn shall never taste;

200 But hard be hardened, blind be blinded more, That they may stumble on, and deeper fall; And none but such from mercy I exclude. But yet all is not done. Man disobeying, Disloyal, breaks his fealty, and sins

205 Against the high supremacy of Heaven,

Affecting Godhead, and, so losing all, To expiate his treason hath nought left, But, to destruction sacred and devote, He with his whole posterity must die;

210 Die he or justice must; unless for him Some other able, and as willing, pay The rigid satisfaction,—death for death.
Say, heavenly Powers! where shall we find such love?
Which of ye will be mortal to redeem

215 Man's mortal crime, and just the unjust to save?
Dwells in all Heaven charity so dear?"
He asked, but all the heavenly choir stood mute,
And silence was in Heaven; on Man's behalf
Patron or intercessor none appeared;

220 Much less that durst upon his own head draw
The deadly forfeiture, and ransom set.
And now without redemption all mankind
Must have been lost, adjudged to Death and Hell
By doom severe, had not the Son of God,

225 In whom the fulness dwells of love divine, His dearest mediation thus renewed:

"Father, thy word is past; Man shall find grace; And shall grace not find means, that finds her way, The speediest of thy wingéd messengers,

230 To visit all thy creatures, and to all Comes unprevented, unimplored, unsought? Happy for Man, so coming; he her aid Can never seek, once dead in sins and lost; Atonement for himself, or offering meet,

235 Indebted and undone, hath none to bring.
Behold me then; me for him, life for life
I offer; on me let thine anger fall;
Account me Man; I for his sake will leave
Thy bosom, and this glory next to thee

240 Freely put off, and for him lastly die
Well pleased; on me let Death wreak all his rage;
Under his gloomy power I shall not long
Lie vanquished; thou hast given me to possess
Life in myself for ever; by thee I live,

245 Though now to Death I yield, and am his due, All that of me can die; yet, that debt paid, Thou wilt not leave me in the loathsome grave His prey, nor suffer my unspotted soul For ever with corruption there to dwell;

250 But I shall rise victorious, and subdue

My vanquisher, spoiled of his vaunted spoil; Death his death's wound shall then receive, and stoop Inglorious, of his mortal sting disarmed. I through the ample air in triumph high

255 Shall lead Hell captive, mangre Hell, and show
The Powers of Darkness bound. Thou, at the sight
Pleased, out of Heaven shall look down and smile,
While, by thee raised, I ruin all my foes,
Death last, and with his carcase glut the grave;

260 Then, with the multitude of my redeemed, Shall enter Heaven, long absent, and return, Father, to see thy face, wherein no cloud Of anger shall remain, but peace assured And reconcilement; wrath shall be no more

265 Thenceforth, but in thy presence joy entire."
His words here ended, but his meek aspect
Silent yet spake, and breathed immortal love
To mortal men, above which only shone
Filial obedience; as a sacrifice

270 Glad to be offered, he attends the will
Of his great Father. Admiration seized
All Heaven, what this might mean, and whither tend,
Wondering; but soon the Almighty thus replied:
"O thou in Heaven and Earth the only peace

275 Found out for mankind under wrath! O thou,
My sole complacence! well thou knowest how dear
To me are all my works, nor Man the least,
Though last created; that for him I spare
Thee from my bosom and right hand, to save,

280 By losing thee a while, the whole race lost.
Thou, therefore, whom thou only canst redeem,
Their nature also to thy nature join;
And be thyself man among men on earth,
Made flesh, when time shall be, of virgin seed,

285 By wondrous birth; be thou, in Adam's room, The head of all mankind, though Adam's son. As in him perish all men, so in thee, As from a second root, shall be restored As many as are restored; without thee none.

290 His crime makes guilty all his sons; thy merit, Imputed, shall absolve them who renounce Their own both righteous and unrighteous deeds, And live in thee transplanted, and from thee Receive new life. So Man, as is most just,

295 Shall satisfy for Man, be judged and die;

And dying, rise; and rising, with him raise His brethren, ransomed with his own dear life. So heavenly love shall outdo hellish hate, Giving to death, and dying to redeem,

300 So dearly to redeem what hellish hate
So easily destroyed, and still destroys
In those who, when they may, accept not grace.
Nor shalt thou, by descending to assume Man's nature, lessen or degrade thine own.

305 Because thou hast, though throned in highest bliss Equal to God, and equally enjoying Godlike fruition, quitted all, to save A world from utter loss, and hast been found, By merit more than birthright, Son of God,

Found worthiest to be so by being good,
Far more than great or high; because in thee
Love hath abounded more than glory abounds;
Therefore thy humiliation shall exalt
With thee thy manhood also to this throne;

Here shalt thou sit incarnate, here shalt reign
Both God and Man, Son both of God and Man,
Anointed universal King; all power
I give thee; reign for ever, and assume Thy merits; under thee, as Head Supreme,

320 Thrones, Princedoms, Powers, Dominions, I reduce;
All knees to thee shall bow, of them that bide
In Heaven or Earth, or under Earth in Hell.
When thou, attended gloriously from Heaven,
Shalt in the sky appear, and from thee send

325 The summoning Archangels to proclaim
Thy dread tribunal; forthwith from all winds
The living, and forthwith the cited dead
Of all past ages, to the general doom
Shall hasten; such a peal shall rouse their sleep.

330 Then, all thy saints assembled, thou shalt judge Bad men and Angels; they arraigned shall sink Beneath thy sentence; Hell, her numbers full, Thenceforth shall be for ever shut. Meanwhile The world shall burn, and from her ashes spring

New Heaven and Earth, wherein the just shall dwell, And, after all their tribulations long,
See golden days, fruitful of golden deeds,
With joy and love triúmphing, and fair truth.
Then thou thy regal sceptre shalt lay by,

340 For regal sceptre then no more shall need,

God shall be all in all. But all ye gods Adore him, who to compass all this dies; Adore the Son, and honour him as me!"

No sooner had the Almighty ceased, but,—all
The multitude of Angels, with a shout
Loud as from numbers without number, sweet
As from blest voices, uttering joy,—Heaven rung
With jubilee; and loud hosannas filled
The eternal regions; lowly reverent

350 Towards either throne they bow, and to the ground With solemn adoration down they cast
Their crowns inwove with amarant and gold;
Immortal amarant, a flower which once
In Paradise, fast by the tree of life,

355 Began to bloom; but soon for Man's offence
To Heaven removed, where first it grew, there grows,
And flowers aloft, shading the fount of life,
And where the river of bliss through midst of Heaven
Rolls o'er Elysian flowers her amber stream;

With these, that never fade, the Spirits elect
Bind their resplendent locks inwreathed with beams;
Now in loose garlands thick thrown off, the bright
Pavement, that like a sea of jasper shone,
Impurpled with celestial roses smiled.

Then, crowned again, their golden harps they took,
Harps ever tuned, that glittering by their side
Like quivers hung, and with preamble sweet
Of charming symphony they introduce
Their sacred song, and waken raptures high;

370 No voice exempt, no voice but well could join Melodious part, such concord is in Heaven.

Thee, Father, first they sung, Omnipotent, Immutable, Immortal, Infinite, Eternal King; thee, Author of all being,

375 Fountain of light, thyself invisible
Amidst the glorious brightness where thou sittest
Throned inaccessible, but when thou shadest
The full blaze of thy beams, and, through a cloud
Drawn round about thee like a radiant shrine,

380 Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear, Yet dazzle Heaven, that brightest Scraphim Approach not, but with both wings veil their eyes Thee, next they sang, of all creation first Begotton Son, Divine Similitude,

385 In whose conspicuous countenance, without cloud

Made visible, the almighty Father shines, Whom else no creature can behold; on thee Impressed the effulgence of his glory abides, Transfused on thee his ample Spirit rests.

390 He Heaven of Heavens, and all the Powers therein,
By thee created, and by thee threw down
The aspiring Dominations; thou that day
Thy Father's dreadful thunder didst not spare,
Nor stop thy flaming chariot-wheels, that shook

395 Heaven's everlasting frame, while o'er the necks
Thou drovest of warring Angels disarrayed.
Back from pursuit thy Powers with loud acclaim
Thee only extolled, Son of thy Father's might,
To execute fierce vengeance on his foes.

400 Not so on Man; him, through their malice fallen, Father of mercy and grace, thou didst not doom So strictly, but much more to pity incline; No sooner did thy dear and only Son Perceive thee purposed not to doom frail Man

405 So strictly, but much more to pity inclined,
He, to appease thy wrath, and end the strife
Of mercy and justice in thy face discerned,
Regardless of the bliss wherein he sat
Second to thee, offered himself to die

410 For Man's offence. O unexampled love,
Love no where to be found less than Divine!
Hail, Son of God, Saviour of men! thy name
Shall be the copious matter of my song
Henceforth, and never shall my harp thy praise

415 Forget, nor from thy Father's praise disjoin!
Thus they in Heaven, above the starry sphere,
Their happy hours in joy and hymning spent.
Meanwhile upon the firm opacous globe
Of this round world, whose first convex divides

420 The luminous inferior orbs, enclosed
From Chaos, and the inroad of Darkness old,
Satan alighted walks. A globe far off
It seemed, now seems a boundless continent,
Dark, waste, and wild, under the frown of Night

425 Starless exposed, and ever-threatening storms
Of Chaos blustering round, inclement round;
Save on that side which from the wall of Heaven,
Though distant far, some small reflection gains
Of glimmering air, less vexed with tempest loud;
430 Here walked the Fieud at large in spacious field.

As when a vulture, on Imaüs bred, Whose snowy ridge the roving Tartar bounds, Dislodging from a region scarce of prey, To gorge the flesh of lambs or yearling kids

435 On hills where flocks are fed, flies toward the springs Of Ganges or Hydaspes, Indian streams;
But in his way lights on the barren plains Of Sericana, where Chineses drive With sails and wind their cany waggons light;

440 So, on this windy sea of land, the Fiend Walked up and down alone, bent on his prey; Alone, for other creature in this place, Living or lifeless, to be found was none; None yet, but store hereafter from the earth

445 Up hither, like aërial vapours, flew
Of all things transitory and vain, when sin
With vanity had filled the works of men;
Both all things vain, and all who in vain things
Built their fond hopes of glory or lasting fame,

450 Or happiness in this or the other life; All who have their reward on earth, the fruits Of painful superstition and blind zeal, Nought seeking but the praise of men, here find Fit retribution, empty as their deeds;

4.55 All the unaccomplished works of Nature's hand, Abortive, monstrous, or unkindly mixed, Dissolved on earth, fleet hither, and in vain, Till final dissolution, wander here;

(Not in the neighbouring moon, as some have dreamed;
400) Those argent fields more likely habitants,
Translated Saints, or middle Spirits, hold,

Betwixt the angelical and human kind.)
Hither, of ill-joined sons and daughters born,
First from the ancient world those Giants came 465 With many a vain exploit, though then renowned;

The builders next of Babel on the plain
Of Sennaär, and still with vain design
New Babels, had they wherewithal, would build;
Others came single; he who, to be deemed

470 A god, leaped fondly into Ætna flames, Empedocles; and he who, to enjoy Plato's Elysium, leaped into the sea, Cleombrotus; and many more too long, Embryos and idiots, eremites and friars,

475 White, black, and grey, with all their trumpery.

b

Here pilgrims roam, that strayed so far to seek In Golgotha him dead, who lives in Heaven; And they who, to be sure of Paradise, Dying put on the weeds of Dominic, 480 Or in Franciscan think to pass disguised.

They pass the planets seven, and pass the fixed,
And that crystalline sphere whose balance weighs
The trepidation talked, and that first moved;
And now Saint Peter at Heaven's wicket seems

485 To wait them with his keys, and now at foot Of Heaven's ascent they lift their feet, when, lo! A violent cross wind from either coast Blows them transverse, ten thousand leagues awry, Into the devious air; then might ye see

490 Cowls, hoods, and habits, with their wearers, tost
And fluttered into rags; then reliques, beads,
Indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bulls,
The sport of winds; all these, upwhirled aloft,
Fly o'er the backside of the world far off,

495 Into a Limbo large and broad, since called The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown Long after, now unpeopled, and untrod.

All this dark globe the Fiend found as he passed; And long he wandered, till at least a gleam

500 Of dawning light turned thither-ward in haste His travelled steps. Far distant he descries, Ascending by degrees magnificent Up to the wall of Heaven, a structure high; At top whereof, but far more rich, appeared

505 The work as of a kingly palace-gate, With frontispiece of diamond and gold Embellished; thick with sparkling orient gems The portal shone, inimitable on earth By model, or by shading pencil drawn.

510 The stairs were such as whereon Jacob saw Angels ascending and descending, bands Of guardians bright, when he from Esau fled To Padan-Aram, in the field of Luz Dreaming by night under the open sky,

And waking cried, "This is the gate of Heaven."
Each stair mysteriously was meant, nor stood
There always, but drawn up to Heaven sometimes
Viewless; and underneath a bright sea-flowed
Of jasper, or of liquid pearl, whereon

520 Who after came from earth, sailing arrived,

Wafted by Angels, or flew o'er the lake Rapt in a chariot drawn by flery steeds. The stairs were then let down, whether to dare The Fiend by easy ascent, or aggravate 52.) His sad exclusion from the doors of bliss;

Direct against which opened from beneath,
Just o'er the blissful seat of Paradise,
A passage down to the Earth, a passage wide,
Wider by far than that of after-times

Over Mount Sion, and, though that were large, Over the Promised Land to God so dear, By which, to visit oft those happy tribes, On high behests his Angels to and fro Passed frequent, and his eye with choice regard

535 From Paneas, the fount of Jordan's flood,
To Beërsaba, where the Holy Land
Borders on Egypt and the Arabian shore;
So wide the opening scemed, where bounds were set
To darkness, such as bound the ocean wave.

Satan from hence, now on the lower stair,
That scaled by steps of gold to Heaven-gate,
Looks down with wonder at the sudden view
Of all this world at once. As when a scout,
Through dark and desert ways with peril gone

545 All night, at last, by break of cheerful dawn,
Obtains the brow of some high-climbing hill,
Which to his eye discovers unaware
The goodly prospect of some foreign land
First seen, or some renowned metropolis

550 With glistering spires and pinnacles adorned,
Which now the rising sun gilds with his beams;
Such wonder seized, though after Heaven seen,
The Spirit malign, but much more envy seized,
At sight of all this world beheld so fair.

555 Round he surveys, (and well might where he stood So high above the circling canopy Of night's extended shade,) from eastern point Of Libra to the fleecy star that bears.

Andromeda far off Atlantic seas,

560 Beyond the horizon; then from pole to pole
He views in breadth, and without longer pause
Down right into the world's first regions throws
His flight precipitant, and winds with ease,
Through the pure marble air, his oblique way

565 Amongst innumerable stars, that-shone

590

Stars distant, but nigh hand seemed other worlds; Or other worlds they seemed, or happy isles, Like those Hesperian gardens famed of old, Fortunate fields, and groves, and flowery vales,

Tortinate lefts, and groves, and howery vates,

Thrice happy isles; but who dwelt happy there
He stayed not to enquire. Above them all
The golden sun, in splendour likest Heaven,
Allured his eye; thither his course he bends
Through the calm firmament, (but up or down,

575 By centre, or eccentric, hard to tell,
Or longitude,) where the great luminary,
Aloof the vulgar constellations thick,
That from his lordly eye keep distance due,
Dispenses light from far; they, as they move

Their starry dance in numbers that compute Days, months, and years, towards his all-cheering lamp Turn swift their various motions, or are turned By his magnetic beam, that gently warms The universe, and to each inward part

585 With gentle penetration, though unseen,
Shoots invisible virtue even to the deep;
So wondrously was set his station bright.
There lands the Fiend; a spot like which perhaps

Astronomer in the sun's lucent orb,
Through his glazed optic tube, yet never saw.
The place he found beyond expression bright,
Compared with aught on earth, metal or stone:

Compared with aught on earth, metal or stone; Not all parts like, but all alike informed With radiant light, as glowing iron with fire;

595 If metal, part seemed gold, part silver clear; If stone, carbuncle most or chrysolite, Ruby or topaz, to the twelve that shone In Aaron's breast-plate, and a stone besides Imagined rather oft than elsewhere seen,

That stone, or like to that, which here below Philosophers in vain so long have sought; In vain, though by their powerful art they bind Volatile Hermes, and call up unbound In various shapes old Proteus from the sea, 605 Drained through a limbec to his native form.

What wonder then if fields and regions here
Breathe forth elixir pure, and rivers run
Potable gold, when with one virtuous touch
The arch-chemic sun, so far from us remote,

610 Produces, with terrestrial humour mixed,

Here in the dark so many precious things Of colour glorious and effect so rare? Here matter new to gaze the Devil met Undazzled; far and wide his eye commands;

615 For sight no obstacle found here, nor shade,
But all sunshine, as when his beams at noon
Culminate from the equator, as they now
Shot upward still direct, whence no way round
Shadow from body opaque can fall; and the air,

620 No where so clear, sharpened his visual ray
To objects distant far, whereby he soon
Saw within ken a glorious Angel stand,
The same whom John saw also in the sun.
His back was turned, but not his brightness hid;

625 Of beaming sunny rays a golden tiar
Circled his head, nor less his locks behind
Illustrious on his shoulders fledge with wings
Lay waving round; on some great charge employed
He seemed, or fixed in cogitation deep.

630 Glad was the Spirit impure, as now in hope
To find who might direct his wandering flight
To Paradise, the happy seat of Man,
His journey's end, and our beginning woe.
But first he casts to change his proper shape,

635 Which else might work him danger or delay; And now a stripling Cherub he appears, Not of the prime, yet such as in his face Youth smiled celestial, and to every limb Suitable grace diffused, so well he feigned;

640 Under a coronet his flowing hair
In curls on either cheek played; wings he wore
Of many a coloured plume sprinkled with gold;
His habit fit for speed succinct, and held
Before his decent steps a silver wand.

645 He drew not nigh unheard; the Angel bright, Ere he drew nigh, his radiant visage turned, Admonished by his car, and straight was known The Archangel Uriël, one of the seven Who in God's presence, nearest to his throne,

Stand ready at command, and are his eyes
That run through all the Heavens, or down to the Earth
Bear his swift errands over moist and dry,
O'er sea and land; him Satan thus accosts:

"Uriel, for thou of those seven Spirits that stand 655 In sight of God's high throne, gloriously bright, 660

The first art wont his great authentic will Interpreter through highest Heaven to bring, Where all his sons thy embassy attend; And here art likeliest by supreme decree Like honour to obtain, and as his eye To visit oft this new creation round; Unspeakable desire to see, and know All these his wondrous works, but chiefly Man, His chief delight and favour, him for whom All these his works so wondrous he ordained,

665 Hath brought me from the choirs of Cherubim Alone thus wandering. Brightest Scraph, tell In which of all these shining orbs hath Man His fixéd seat, or fixéd seat hath none,

670 But all these shining orbs his choice to dwell; That I may find him, and with secret gaze, Or open admiration, him behold, On whom the great Creator hath bestowed Worlds, and on whom hath all these graces poured;

That both in him and all things, as is meet, 675The universal Maker we may praise; Who justly hath driven out his rebel foes To deepest Hell, and, to repair that loss, Created this new happy race of Men

680 To serve him better; wise are all his ways." So spake the false dissembler unperceived;

For neither Man nor Angel can discern Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks Invisible, except to God alone. By his permissive will, through Heaven and Earth:

And oft, though Wisdom wake, Suspicion sleeps At Wisdom's gate, and to Simplicity Resigns her charge, while Goodness thinks no ill Where no ill seems; which now for once beguiled

690 Uriel, though regent of the sun, and held The sharpest-sighted Spirit of all in Heaven; Who to the fraudulent impostor foul, In his aprightness, answer thus retarned:

"Fair Angel, thy desire, which tends to know 695 The works of God, thereby to glorify The great Work-master, leads to no excess That reaches blame, but rather merits praise The more it seems excess, that led thee hither From thy empyreal mansion thus alone,

700 To witness with thine eyes what some, perhaps Contented with report, hear only in Heaven; For wonderful indeed are all his works. Pleasant to know, and worthiest to be all Had in remembrance always with delight;

705 But what created mind can comprehend
Their number, or the wisdom infinite
That brought them forth, but hid their causes deep?
I saw, when at his word the formless mass,
This world's material mould, came to a heap;

710 Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar
Stood ruled, stood vast infinitude confined;
Till at his second bidding darkness fled,
Light shone, and order from disorder sprung.
Swift to their several quarters hasted then

705 The cumbrous elements, carth, flood, air, fire;
And this ethereal quintessence of Heaven
Flew upwards, spirited with various forms,
That rolled orbicular, and turned to stars
Numberless, as thou seest, and how they move:

720 Each had his place appointed, each his course;
The rest in circuit walls this universe.
Look downward on that globe, whose hither side
With light from hence, though but reflected, shines;
That place is Earth, the seat of Man; that light

725 His day, which else, as the other hemisphere,
Night would invade; but there the neighbouring moon
(So call that opposite fair star) her aid
Timely interposes, and her mouthly round
Still ending, still renewing, through mid heaven

730 With borrowed light her countenance triform Hence fills and empties, to enlighten the Earth, And in her pale dominion checks the night. That spot, to which I point, is Paradise. Adam's abode; those lofty shades, his bower.

735 Thy way thou canst not miss, me mine requires."

Thus said, he turned; and Satan, bowing low,
As to superior Spirits is wont in Heaven,
Where honour due and reverence none neglects,
Took leave, and toward the coast of earth beneath,

740 Down from the ecliptic, sped with hoped success;
Throws his steep flight in many an aery wheel,
Nor stayed, till on Niphates' top he lights.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK IV.

THE ARGUMENT.

SATAN, now in prospect of Eden, and night he place where he must now attempt the bold enterprise which he undertook alone against God and Man, falls into many doubts with himself, and many passions, fear, envy, and despair; but at length confirms himself in evil, journeys on to Paradise, whose outward prospect and situation is described, overleaps the bounds, sits in the shape of a cormorant on the Tree of Life, as highest in the garden, to look about him. The garden described; Satan's first sight of Adam and Eve; his wonder at their excellent form and happy state, but with resolution to work their fall; overhears their discourse, thence gathers that the Tree of Knowledge was forbidden them to eat of, under penalty of death; and thereon intends to found his temptation, by seducing them to transgress; then leaves them awhile, to know further of their state by some other means. Meanwhile Uriel, descending on a sunbeam, warns Gabriel, who had in charge the gate of Paradise, that some evil Spirit had escaped the deep, and passed at noon by his sphere, in the shape of a good angel, down to Paradise, discovered after by his furious gestures in the Mount. Gabriel promises to find him ere morning. Night coming on, Adam and Eve discourse of going to their rest; their bower described; their evening worship. Gabriel, drawing forth his bands of night-watch to walk the round of Paradise, appoints two strong angels to Adam's bower, lest the evil Spirit should be there doing some harm to Adam or Eve sleeping; there they find him at the ear of Eve, tempting her in a dream, and bring him, though unwilling, to Gabriel; by whom questioned, he scornfully answers, prepares resistance, but, hindered by a sign from Heaven, flies out of Paradise.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK IV.

H for that warning voice, which he who saw The Apocalypse heard cry in Heaven aloud, Then when the Dragon, put to second rout, Came furious down to be revenged on men, Woe to the inhabitants on earth! that now. While time was, our first parents had been warned The coming of their secret foe, and scaped, Haply so scaped, his mortal snare! For now Satan, now first inflamed with rage, came down, The tempter ere the accuser of mankind, 10 To wreak on innocent frail Man his loss Of that first battle, and his flight to Hell. Yet not rejoicing in his speed, though bold Far off and fearless; nor with cause to boast, Begins his dire attempt, which nigh the birth 15 Now rolling boils in his tumultuous breast, And like a devilish engine back recoils Upon himself; horror and doubt distract

His troubled thoughts, and from the bottom stir The hell within him; for within him Hell He brings, and round about him, nor from Hell One step, no more than from himself, can fly By change of place. Now conscience wakes despair, That slumbered, wakes the bitter memory

25. Of what he was, what is, and what must be,— Worse; of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue. Sometimes towards Eden, which now in his view Lay pleasant, his grieved look he fixes sad; Sometimes towards Heaven, and the full-blazing sun,

30 Which now sat high in his meridian tower;
Then, much revolving, thus in sighs began:—
"O thou! that, with surpassing glory crowned,
Lookest from thy sole dominion like the god
Of this new world; at whose sight all the stars

35 Hide their diminished heads; to thee I call, But with no friendly voice, and add thy name, O Sun! to tell thee how I hate thy beams, That bring to my remembrance from what state I fell, how glorious once above thy sphere;

40 Till pride and worse ambition threw me down, Warring in Heaven against Heaven's matchless King! Ah, wherefore? he deserved no such return From me, whom he created what I was In that bright eminence, and with his good

45 Upbraided none; nor was his service hard.
What could be less than to afford him praise,
The easiest recompense, and pay him thanks?
How due! Yet all his good proved ill in me,
And wrought but malice; lifted up so high

I sdeined subjection, and thought one step higher Would set me highest, and in a moment quit The debt immense of endless gratitude. So burdensome still paying, still to owe; Forgetful what from him I still received,

5. And understood not that a grateful mind By owing owes not, but still pays, at once Indebted and discharged; what burden then? Oh! had his powerful destiny ordained Me some inferior Angel, I had stood

Then happy; no unbounded hope had raised Ambition. Yet why not? some other Power As great might have aspired, and me, though mean, Drawn to his part; but other Powers as great Fell not, but stand anghaken, from within 65 Or from without to all temptations armed.

Hadst thou the same free will and power to stand? Thou hadst. Whom hast thou then, or what, to accuse, But Heaven's free love dealt equally to all? Be then his love accursed! since, love or hate,

70 To me alike it deals eternal woe.

Nay, cursed be thou! since against his thy will

Chose freely what it now so justly rues.

Me miserable! which way shall I fly
Infinite wrath and infinite despair?

75 Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell; And, in the lowest deep, a lower deep, Still threatening to devour me, opens wide, To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heaven. O, then, at last relent! Is there no place

80 Left for repentance, none for pardon left?—
None left but by submission; and that word
Disdain forbids me, and my dread of shame
Among the Spirits beneath, whom I seduced
With other promises and other vaunts

Than to submit, boasting I could subdue
The Omnipotent. Ay me! they little know
How dearly I abide that boast so vain,
Under what torments inwardly I groan;
While they adore me on the throne of Hell,

With diadem and sceptre high advanced,
The lower still I fall, only supreme
In misery; such joy ambition finds.—
But say I could repent, and could obtain
By act of grace my former state; how soon

95 Would height recall high thoughts, how soon unsay What feigned submission swore! Ease would recant Vows made in pain, as violent and void;—
For never can true reconcilement grow
Where woulds of deadly hate have pierced so deep;—

Which would but lead me to a worse relapse
And heavier fall; so should I purchase dear
Short intermission bought with double smart.
This knows my punisher; therefore as far
From granting he, as I from begging peace.

105 All hope excluded thus, behold, instead
Of us, outcast, exiled, his new delight,
Mankind, created, and for him this world.
So farewell hope, and with hope farewell fear.
Farewell remorse! all good to me is lost;

110 Evil, be thou my good; by thee at least

Divided empire with Heaven's King I hold, By thee, and more than half, perhaps, will reign; As man ere long, and this new world shall know."

Thus while he spake, each passion dimmed his face,

(Thrice changed with pale,) ire, envy, and despair;

Which marred his borrowed visage, and betrayed

Him counterfeit, if any eye beheld;

For Heavenly minds from such distempers foul

Are ever clear. Whereof he soon aware

120 Each perturbation smoothed with outward calm, Artificer of fraud! and was the first That practised falsehood under saintly show, Deep malice to conceal, couched with revenge.

Yet not enough had practised to deceive

125 Uriel, once warned; whose eye pursued him down
The way he went, and on the Assyrian mount
Saw him disfigured, more than could befall
Spirit of happy sort; his gestures fierce
He marked, and mad demeanour, then alone,

130 As he supposed, all unobserved, unseen.
So on he fares; and to the border comes
Of Eden, where delicious Paradise,
Now nearer, crowns with her enclosure green,
As with a rural mound, the champaign head

Of a steep wilderness; whose hairy sides
With thicket overgrown, grotesque and wild,
Accèss denied; and overhead up-grew
Insuperable height of loftiest shade,
Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm,

140 A sylvan scene, and, as the ranks ascend,
Shade above shade, a woody theatre
Of stateliest view. Yet higher than their tops
The verdurous wall of Paradise up-sprung;
Which to our general sire gave prospect large

145 Into his nether empire neighbouring round.
And higher than that wall a circling row
Of goodliest trees loaden with fairest fruit,
Blossoms and fruits at once of golden hue,
Appeared, with gay enamelled colours mixed;

On which the sun more glad impressed his beams
Than in fair evening cloud, or humid bow,
When God hath showered the earth; so lovely seemed
That landscape; and of pure now purer air
Meets his approach, and to the heart inspires

155 Vernal delight and joy, able to drive

All sadness but despair; now gentle gales Fanning their odoriferous wings, dispense Native perfumes, and whisper whence they stole Those balmy spoils. As when to them who sail

100 Beyond the Cape of Hope, and now are past
Mozambic, off at sea north-east winds blow
Sabean odours from the spicy shore
Of Araby the Blest; with such delay

Well pleased they slack their course, and many a league Cheered with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles; So entertained those odorous sweets the Fiend, Who came their bane; though with them better pleased Than Asmodëus with the fishy fume

That drove him, though enamoured, from the spouse

170 Of Tobit's son, and with a vengeance sent
From Media post to Egypt, there fast bound.
Now to the ascent of that steep savage hill
Satan had journeyed on, pensive and slow,
But further way found none, so thick entwined;

As one continued brake, the undergrowth
Of shrubs and tangling bushes had perplexed
All path of man or beast that passed that way.
One gate there only was, and that looked east
On the other side; which when the Arch-felon saw,

180 Due entrance he disdained, and in contempt
At one slight bound high overleaped all bound
Of hill, or highest wall, and sheer within Lights on his feet. As when a prowling wolf,
Whom hunger drives to seek new haunt for prey,

185 Watching where shepherds pen their flocks at eve, In hurdled cotes amid the field secure, Leaps o'er the fence with ease into the fold; Or as a thief, bent to unhoard the cash Of some rich burgher, whose substantial doors,

190 Cross-barred and bolted fast, fear no assault,
In at the window climbs, or o'er the tiles;
So clomb this first grand thief into God's fold;
So since into his church lewd hirelings climb.
Thence up he flew, and on the tree of Life,

195. (The middle tree and the highest there that grew,)
Sat like a cormorant; yet not true life
Thereby regained, but sat devising death
To them who lived; nor on the virtue thought
Of that life-giving plant, but only used

200 For prospect what, well used, had been the pledge

Of immortality. So little knows Any, but God aloxe, to value right The good before him, but perverts best things To worst abuse, or to their meanest use.

205, Beneath him, with new wonder, now he views,
To all delight of human sense exposed
In narrow room, Nature's whole wealth, yea more,
A Heaven on earth! For blissful Paradise
Of God the garden was, by him in the east

210 Of Eden planted; Eden stretched her line From Auran eastward to the royal towers Of great Seleucia, built by Grecian kings, Or where the sons of Eden long before Dwelt in Telassar. In this pleasant soil

215 His far more pleasant garden God ordained.
Out of the fertile ground he caused to grow
All trees of noblest kind for sight, smell, taste;
And all amid them stood the, Tree of Life,
High eminent, blooming ambrosial fruit

220 Of vegetable gold; and next to life,
Our death, the Tree of Knowledge, grew fast by:
Knowledge of good bought dear by knowing ill!
Southward through Eden went a river large,
Nor changed his course, but through the shaggy hill

Passed underneath ingulfed; for God had thrown
That mountain as his garden-mould, high raised
Upon the rapid current, which, through veins
Of porous earth with kindly thirst up-drawn,
Rose a fresh fountain, and with many a rill

230 Watered the garden; thence united fell
Down the steep glade, and met the nether flood,
Which from his darksome passage now appears;
And now divided into four main streams,
Runs diverse, wandering many a famous realm

235 And country, whereof here needs no account;
But rather to tell how, if Art could tell,—
How from that sapphire fount the crisped brooks,
Rolling on orient pearl and sands of gold,
With mazy error under pendent shades,

240 Ran nectar, visiting each plant, and fed
Flowers worthy of Paradise, which not nice art
In beds and curious knots, but Nature boon
Poured forth profuse on hill, and dale, and plain,
Both where the morning sun first warmly smote

245 'The open field, and where the unpierced shade

Imbrowned the noon-tide bowers. Thus was this place A happy rural seat of various view; Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm; Others whose fruit, burnished with golden rind,

250 Hung amiable,—Hesperian fables true,
If true, here only,—and of delicious taste.
Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks
(frazing the tender herb, were interposed;
Or palmy hillock, or the flowery lap

255 Of some irriguous valley spread her store;
Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose.
Another side, umbrageous grots, and caves
Of cool recess, o'er which the mantling vine
Lays forth her purple grape, and gently creeps

Luxuriant; meanwhile murmuring waters fall
Down the slope hills, dispersed; or in a lake,
That to the fringed bank, with myrtle crowned,
Her crystal mirror holds, unite their streams.
The birds their choir apply; airs, vernal airs,

Breathing the smell of field and grove, attune
The trembling leaves, while universal Pan,
Knit with the Graces and the Hours in dance,
Led on the eternal Spring. Not that fair field
Of Enna, where Prosérpine gathering flowers,

270 Herself a fairer flower, by gloomy Dis
Was gathered, which cost Ceres all that pain
To seek her through the world; nor that sweet grove
Of Daphné by Orontes, and the inspired
Castalian spring, might with this Paradise

275 Of Eden strive; nor that Nyseian isle, Girt with the river Triton, where old Cham, Whom Gentiles Ammon call and Libyan Jove, Hid Amalthea, and her florid son, Young Bacchus, from his stepdame Rhea's eye;

280 Nor, where Abassin kings their issue guard,
Mount Amara, though this by some supposed
True Paradise, under the Ethiop line
By Nilus' head, enclosed with shining rock,
A whole day's journey high, but wide remote

285 From this Assyrian garden, where the Fiend Saw undelighted all delight, all kind Of living creatures new to sight and strange. Two of far nobler shape, erect and tall, Godlike erect, with native honour clad,

290 In naked majesty seemed lords of all,

And worthy seemed; for in their looks divine The image of their glorious Maker shone, Truth, wisdom, sanctitude severe and pure, (Severe, but in true filial freedom placed,)

295 Whence true authority in men; though both Not equal, as their sex not equal seemed; For contemplation he and valour formed, For softness she, and sweet attractive grace; He for God only, she for God in him.

300 His fair large front, and eye sublime, declared Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks
Round from his parted forelock manly hung
Clustering, but not beneath his shoulders broad;
She are a will down to the slander wait

She, as a veil, down to the slender waist

305 Her unadorned golden tresses wore
Dishevelled, but in wanton ringlets waved,
As the vine curls her tendrils, which implied
Subjection, but required with gentle sway,
And by her yielded, by him best received,

310 Yielded with coy submission, modest pride,
And sweet, reluctant, amorous delay.
Nor those mysterious parts were then concealed;
Then was not guilty shame; dishonest shame
Of nature's works, honour dishonourable;

315 Sin-bred, how have ye troubled all mankind With shows instead, mere shows of seeming pure, And banished from Man's life his happiest life Simplicity and spotless innocence!

So passed they naked on, nor shunned the sight

So passed they naked on, nor shunned the sight 320 Of God or Angel, for they thought no ill; So hand in hand they passed, the loveliest pair

That ever since in love's embraces met; Adam, the goodliest man of men since born His sons; the fairest of her daughters, Eve.

325 Under a tuft of shade, that on a green
Stood whispering soft, by a fresh fountain-side,
They sat them down; and, after no more toil
Of their sweet gardening labour than sufficed
To recommend cool Zephyr, and made ease

330 More easy, wholesome thirst and appetite
More grateful, to their supper fruits they fell,
Nectarine fruits, which the compliant boughs
Yielded them, sidelong as they sat recline
On the soft downy bank, damasked with flowers.

335 The savoury pulp they chew, and in the rind,

Still as they thirsted, scoop the brimming stream; Nor gentle purpose, nor endearing smiles Wanted, nor youthful dalliance as beseems Fair couple, linked in happy nuptial league,

340 Alone as they. About them frisking played
All beasts of the earth, since wild, and of all chase
In wood or wilderness, forest or den;
Sporting the lion ramped, and in his paw
Dandled the kid; bears, tigers, onnces, pards,

345 Gambolled before them; the unwieldy elephant,
To make them mirth, used all his might, and wreathed
His lithe proboscis; close the serpent sly,
Insinuating, wove with Gordian twine
His braided train, and of his fatal guile

Gave proof unheeded; others on the grass
Conched, and, now filled with pasture, gazing sat,
Or bedward ruminating; for the sun,
Declined, was hasting now with prone career
To the Ocean-isles, and in the ascending scale

355 Of heaven the stars that usher evening rose;
When Satan, still in gaze as first he stood,
Scarce thus at length failed speech recovered sad:—
"O Hell! what do mine eyes with grief behold?
Into our room of bliss thus high advanced

360 Creatures of other mould; earth-born perhaps, Not Spirits, yet to heavenly Spirits bright Little inferior; whom my thoughts pursue With wonder, and could love, so lively shines In them divine resemblance, and such grace

365 The hand that formed them on their shape hath poured. Ah, gentle pair! ye little think how nigh Your change approaches, when all these delights Will vanish, and deliver ye to woe; More woe, the more your taste is now of joy.

370 Happy! but for so happy ill secured
Long to continue; and this high seat, your heaven,
Ill-fenced for Heaven to keep out such a foe
As now is entered; yet no purposed foe
To you, whom I could pity thus forlorn,

375 Though I unpitied. League with you I seek,
And mutual amity, so strait, so close,
That I with you must dwell, or you with me
Henceforth; my dwelling haply may not please,
Like this fair Paradise, your sense, yet such

380 Accept your Maker's work; he gave it me,

Which I as freely give; Hell shall unfold, To entertain you two, her widest gates, And send forth all her kings; there will be room, (Not like these narrow limits,) to receive 385 Your numerous offspring; if no better place, Thank him who puts me loth to this revenge On you, who wrong me not, for him who wronged. And should I at your harmless innocence Melt, as I do, yet public reason just,

 390° Honour and empire, with revenge enlarged By conquering this new world, compels me now To do, what else, though damned, I should abhor." So spake the Fiend, and with necessity,

The tyrant's plea, excused his devilish deeds. Then, from his lofty stand on that high tree,

395 Down he alights among the sportful herd Of those four-footed kinds, -himself now one. Now other, as their shape served best his end-Nearer to view his prey, and unespied

400 To mark what of their state he more might learn. By word or action marked; about them round A lion now he stalks with fiery glare; Then, as a tiger, who by chance hath spied, In some purlien, two gentle fawns at play,

405 Straight conches close; then rising changes oft His conchant watch, as one who chose his ground, Whence rushing he might surest seize them both, Griped in each paw; when Adam, first of men, To first of women, Eve, thus moving speech

410 Turned him all ear to hear new utterance flow :--"Sole partner, and sole part, of all these joys! Dearer thyself than all; needs must the Power That made us, and for us this ample world, Be infinitely good, and of his good

415 As liberal and free as infinite: That raised us from the dust, and placed us here In all this happiness, who at his hand Have nothing merited, nor can perform Aught whereof he hath need; he who requires

420 From us no other service than to keep This one, this easy charge, 'Of all the trees In Paradise that bear delicious fruit So various, not to taste that only Tree Of Knowledge, planted by the Tree of Life;'

So near grows death to life! what'er death is.

Some dreadful thing no doubt; for well thou knowest God hath pronounced it death to taste that tree, The only sign of our obedience left, Among so many signs of power and rule

430 Conferred upon us, and dominion given
Over all other creatures that possess
Earth, air, and sea. Then let us not think hard
One easy prohibition, who enjoy
Free leave so large to all things else, and choice

435 Unlimited of manifold delights;
But let us ever praise him, and extol
His bounty, following our delightful task,
To prune these growing plants, and tend these flowers;
Which were it toilsome, yet with thee were sweet."

To whom thus Eve replied:—" O thou for whom, And from whom, I was formed, flesh of thy flesh, And without whom am to no end; my guide And head! what thou hast said is just and right. For we to him indeed all praises owe,

And daily thanks; I chiefly; who enjoy
So far the happier lot, enjoying thee
Pre-eminent by so much odds; while thou
Like consort to thyself canst no where find.
That day I oft remember, when from sleep

450 I first awaked, and found myself reposed
Under a shade on flowers, much wondering where
And what I was, whence thither brought, and how.
Not distant far from thence a murmuring sound
Of waters issued from a cave, and spread

Into a liquid plain, then stood unmoved,
Pure as the expanse of heaven; I thither went,
With unexperienced thought, and laid me down
On the green bank, to look into the clear
Smooth lake, that to me seemed another sky.

As I bent down to look, just opposite
A shape within the watery gleam appeared,
Bending to look on me; I started back;
It started back; but pleased I soon returned;
Pleased it returned as soon with answering looks

Mine eyes till now, and pined with vain desire,
Had not a voice thus warned me: 'What thou seest,
What there thou seest, fair creature, is thyself;
With thee it came and goes; but follow me,

470 And I will bring thee where no shadow stays

Thy coming and thy soft embraces, he Whose image thou art; him thou shalt enjoy Inseparably thine, to him shalt bear Multitudes like thyself, and thence be called 475 Mother of human race. What could I do But follow straight, invisibly thus led? Till I espied thee, fair indeed, and tall, Under a platane; yet, methought, less fair, Less winning soft, less amiably mild,

Than that smooth watery image. Back I turned;
Thou following criedst aloud, 'Return, fair Eve,
Whom fliest thou; Whom thou fliest, of him thou art,
His flesh, his bone; to give thee being I lent
Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart,

485 Substantial life, to have thee by my side Henceforth an individual solace dear; Part of my soul, I seek thee; and thee claim, My other half.'—With that, thy gentle hand Seized mine; I yielded, and from that time see

490 How beauty is excelled by manly grace,
And wisdom, which alone is truly fair."
So spake our general mother, and, with eyes
Of conjugal attraction unreproved,
And meek surrender, half-embracing leaned

495 On our first father; half her swelling breast Naked met his, under the flowing gold Of her loose tresses hid; he, in delight Both of her beauty and submissive charms, Smiled with superior love, (as Jupiter

500 On Juno smiles, when he impregns the clouds
That shed May flowers) and pressed her matron lip
With kisses pure. Aside the Devil turned
For envy, yet with jealous leer malign
Eyed them askance; and to himself thus plained:—

"Sight hateful, sight tormenting! Thus these two, Imparadised in one another's arms, (The happier Eden!) shall enjoy their fill Of bliss on bliss; while I to Hell am thrust, Where neither joy nor love, but fierce desire,

510 Among our other torments not the least,
Still unfulfilled, with pain of longing pines.
Yet let me not forget what I have gained
From their own mouths; all is not theirs, it seems;
One fatal tree there stands, of Knowledge called,

515 Forbidden them to taste. Knowledge forbidden?

Suspicious, reasonless. Why should their Lord Envy them that? Can it be sin to know? Can it be death? And do they only stand By ignorance? Is that their happy state, 520 The proof of their obedience and their faith?

O fair foundation laid whereon to build
Their ruin! Hence I will excite their minds
With more desire to know, and to reject
Envious commands, invented with design

525 To keep them low, whom knowledge might exalt Equal with gods; aspiring to be such,
They taste and die. What likelier can ensue?
But first, with narrow search I must walk round
This garden, and no corner leave unspied;

530 A chance but chance may lead where I may meet Some wandering Spirit of Heaven, by fountain-side, Or in thick shade retired, from him to draw What further would be learned. Live while ye may, Yet happy pair! Enjoy, till I return,

Short pleasures, for long woes are to succeed!"
So saying, his proud step he scornful turned,
But with sly circumspection, and began,
Through wood, through waste, o'er hill, o'er dale, his roam.
Meanwhile in utmost longitude, where heaven

540 With earth and ocean meets, the setting sun Slowly descended, and with right aspect Against the eastern gate of Paradise Levelled his evening rays. It was a rock Of alabaster, piled up to the clouds,

545 Conspicuous far, winding with one ascent Accessible from earth, one entrance high; The rest was craggy cliff, that overhung Still as it rose, impossible to climb. Betwixt these rocky pillars Gabriel sat,

550 Chief of angelic guards, awaiting night.

About him exercised heroic games

The unarmed youth of heaven; but nigh at hand
Celestial armoury, shields, helms, and spears,
Hung high, with diamond flaming, and with gold.

555 Thither came Uriel, gliding through the even
On a sunbeam, swift as a shooting star
In autumn thwarts the night, when vapours fired
Impress the air, and shows the mariner
From what point of his compass to beware
560 Impetuous wind. He thus began in haste:—

"Gabriel! To thee thy course by lot hath given . Charge, and strict watch, that to this happy place No evil thing approach, or enter in. This day, at height of noon, came to my sphere 565A Spirit, zealous, as he seemed, to know More of the Almighty's works, and chiefly man, God's latest image. I described his way, Bent all on speed, and marked his aery gait; But, in the mount that lies from Eden north, 570 Where he first lighted, soon discerned his looks Alien from Heaven, with passions foul obscured. Mine eye pursued him still, but under shade Lost sight of him. One of the banished crew, I fear, hath ventured from the deep, to raise 575 New troubles; him thy care must be to find." To whom the winged warrior thus returned: "Uriel! No wonder if thy perfect sight, Amid the sun's bright circle where thou sittest, See far and wide. In at this gate none pass 580° The vigilance here placed, but such as come Well known from Heaven; and since meridian hour No creature thence; if Spirit of other sort, So minded, have o'erleaged these earthly bounds On purpose, hard thou knowest it to exclude 585 Spiritual substance with corporeal bar. But if within the circuit of these walks In whatsoever shape he lurk, of whom Thou tellest, by morrow dawning I shall know." So promised he; and Uriel to his charge 590° Returned on that bright beam, whose point now raised Bore him slope downward to the sun, now fallen Beneath the Azores; whether the prime orb, Incredible how swift, had thither rolled Diurnal, or this less voluble earth, 595By shorter flight to the east, had left him there Arraying with reflected purple and gold The clouds that on his western throne attend. Now came still evening on, and twilight grey Had in her sober livery all things clad; 600 Silence accompanied; for beast, and bird, They to their grassy couch, these to their nests, Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale; She all night long her amorous descant sung;

Silence was pleased. Now glowed the firmament

With living sapphires: Hesperus, that led

The starry host, rode brightest, till the Moon, Rising in clouded majesty, at length, Apparent queen, unveiled her peerless light, O And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.

When Adam thus to Eve: "Fair consort! the hour Of night, and all things now retired to rest, Mind us of like repose; since God hath set Labour and rest, as day and night, to men Successive; and the timely dew of sleep,

Our eyelids. Other creatures all day long
Rove idle, nnemployed, and less need rest;
Man hath his daily work of body or mind
Appointed, which declares his dignity,

620 And the regard of Heaven on all his ways;
While other animals unactive range,
And of their doings God takes no account.
To-morrow, ere fresh morning streak the east
With first approach of light, we must be risen,

625 And at our pleasant labour, to reform
You flowery arbours, youder alleys green,
Our walk at noon, with branches overgrown,
That mock our scant manuring, and require.
More hands than ours to lop their wanton growth;

Those blossoms also, and those dropping gums,
That lie bestrown, unsightly and unsmooth,
Ask riddance, if we mean to tread with ease;
Meanwhile, as nature wills, night bids us rest."
To whom thus Eve, with perfect beauty adorned:

635 "My author, and disposer! What thou biddest Unargued I obey; so God ordains.
God is thy law, thou mine; to know no more Is woman's happiest knowledge, and her praise.
With thee conversing I forget all time,

640 All seasons, and their change;—all please alike. Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet, With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the sun, When first on this delightful land he spreads His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower,

645 Glistering with dew; fragrant the fertile earth
After soft showers; and sweet the coming on
Of grateful evening mild; then, silent night,
With this her solemn bird, and this fair moon,
And these the gems of Heaven, her starry train.

650 But neither breath of morn, when she ascends

With charm of earliest birds; nor rising sun On this delightful land; nor herb, fruit, flower, Glistering with dew; nor fragrance after showers; Nor grateful evening mild; nor silent night,

655 With this her solemn bird; nor walk by moon,
Of glittering starlight, without thee is sweet.
But wherefore all night long shine these? For whom
This glorious sight, when sleep hath shut all eyes?"
To whom our general ancestor replied:

"Daughter of God and man, accomplished Eve,
Those have their course to finish round the earth
By morrow evening, and from land to land
In order, though to nations yet unborn,
Ministering light prepared, they set and rise;

665 Lest total darkness should by night regain
Her old possession, and extinguish life
In nature and all things, which these soft fires
Not only enlighten, but with kindly heat
Of various influence foment and warm,

670 Temper or nourish, or in part shed down
Their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow
On earth, made hereby apter to receive
Perfection from the sun's more potent ray.
These, then, though unbeheld in deep of night,

Shine not in vain; nor think, though men were none,
That Heaven would want spectators, God want praise.
Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth
Unseen, both when we wake and when we sleep;
All these with ceaseless praise his works behold

Of echoing hill, or thicket, have we heard Celestial voices, to the midnight air, (Sole, or responsive each to other's note,) Singing their great Creator! Oft in bands

While they keep watch, or nightly rounding walk,
With heavenly touch of instrumental sounds
In full harmonic number joined, their songs
Divide the night, and lift our thoughts to heaven."
Thus talking, hand in hand, alone they passed

On to their blissful bower. It was a place
Chosen by the sovereign Planter, when he framed
All things to man's delightful use; the roof,
Of thickest covert, was inwoven shade,
Laurel and myrtle, and what higher grew

695 Of firm and fragrant leaf; on either side

Acanthus, and each odorous bushy shrub, Fenced up the verdant wall; each beauteous flower, Iris all hues, roses, and jessamine, Reared high their flourished heads between, and wrought

Reared high their flourished heads between, and wrong!

Mosaic; underfoot the violet,
Crocus, and hyacinth, with rich inlay
Broidered the ground, more coloured than with stone
Of costliest emblem. Other creature here,
Beast, bird, insect, or worm, durst enter none;

705 Such was their awe of man! In shadier bower,
More sacred and sequestered, though but feigned,
Pan or Sylvanus never slept, nor nymph
Nor Fannus haunted. Here, in close recess,
With flowers, garlands, and sweet-smelling herbs,

710 Esponséd Eve decked first her nuptial bed, And heavenly choirs the hymenéan sung, What day the genial angel to our sire Brought her, in naked beauty more adorned, More lovely, than Pandora, whom the gods

715 Endowed with all their gifts, and O! too like In sad event! when, to the unwiser son Of Japhet brought by Hermes, she ensnared Mankind with her fair looks, to be avenged On him who had stole Jove's authentic fire.

720 Thus, at their shady lodge arrived, both stood,
Both turned, and under open sky adored
The God that made both sky, air, earth, and heaven,
Which they beheld, the moon's resplendent globe,
And starry pole: "Thou also madest the night,

725 Maker Omnipotent! and thou the day,
Which we, in our appointed work employed,
Have finished, happy in our mutual help,
And mutual love, the crown of all our bliss
Ordained by thee, and this delicious place,

730 For us too large, where thy abundance wants Partakers, and uncropped falls to the ground. But thou hast promised from us two a race To fill the earth, who shall with us extol Thy goodness infinite, both when we wake,

735 And when we seek, as now, thy gift of sleep."
This said unanimous, and other rites
Observing none, but adoration pure,
Which God likes best, into their inmost bower
Handed they went; and, eased the putting off

740 These troublesome disguises which we wear,

Straight side by side were laid; nor turned, I ween, Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites Mysterious of connubial love refused; Whatever hypocrites austerely talk

745 Of purity, and place, and innocence,
Defaming as impure what God declares
Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all.
Our maker bids increase; who bids abstain
But our destroyer, foe to God and man?

750 Hail, wedded love! mysterious law, true source
Of human offspring, sole propriety
In Paradise of all things common else!
By thee adulterous lust was driven from men
Among the bestial herds to range; by thee,

755 Founded in reason, loyal, just, and pure,
Relations dear, and all the charities
Of father, son, and brother, first were known.
Far be it, that I should write thee sin, or blame,
Or think thee unbefitting holiest place,

760 Perpetual fountain of domestic sweets,
Whose bed is undefiled and chaste pronounced,
Present, or past, as saints and patriarchs used.
Here Love his golden shafts employs, here lights
His constant lamp, and waves his purple wings;

765 Reigns here and revels; not in the bought smile Of harlots, loveless, joyless, unendeared, Casual fruition; nor in court-amours, Mixed dance, or wanton mask, or midnight ball, Or serenate, which the starved lover sings

770 To his proud fair, best quitted with disdain.
These, lulled by nightingales, embracing slept;
And on their naked limbs the flowery roof
Showered roses, which the morn repaired. Sleep on Blessed pair; and O! yet happiest, if ye seek 775 No happier state, and know to know no more.

Now had night measured with her shadowy cone Half-way up hill this vast sublunar vault;

And from their ivory port the cherubim,

Forth issuing at the accustomed hour, stood armed

780 To their night watches in warlike parade,
When Gabriel to his next in power thus spake:
"Uzziel! half these draw off, and coast the south
With strictest watch; these other wheel the north;
Our circuit meets full west." As flame they part,

785 Half wheeling to the shield, half to the spear.

From these, two strong and subtle Spirits he called, That near him stood, and gave them thus in charge: " Ithuriel, and Zephon! with winged speed Search through this garden, leave unsearched no nook, 790 But chiefly where those two fair creatures lodge, Now laid perhaps asleep, secure of harm. This evening from the sun's decline arrived Who tells of some infernal Spirit seen Hitherward bent, (who could have thought?) escaped 795The bars of Hell, on errand bad, no doubt; Such, where ye find, seize fast, and hither bring." So saying, on he led his radiant files, Dazzling the moon; these to the bower direct In search of whom they sought; him there they found 800 Squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve, Assaying, by his devilish art, to reach The organs of her fancy, and with them forge Illusions, as he list, phantasms, and dreams; Or if, inspiring venom, he might taint 805 The animal spirits, that from pure blood arise Like gentle breaths from rivers pure, thence raise At least distempered, discontented thoughts, Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires, Blown up with high conceits engendering pride. 810 Him thus intent Ithnriel with his spear Touched lightly; for no falsehood can endure Touch of celestial temper, but returns Of force to its own likeness; up he starts, Discovered and surprised. As when a spark 815 Lights on a heap of nitrous powder, laid Fit for the tan, some magazine to store Against a rumoured war, the smutty grain, With sudden blaze diffused, inflames the air; So started up in his own shape the Fiend. 820Back stepped those two fair Angels, half amazed So sudden to behold the grisly king; Yet thus, unmoved with fear, accost him soon: "Which of those rebel spirits, adjudged to Hell, Comest thou, escaped thy prison? and transformed 825Why satest thou, like an enemy in wait, Here watching at the head of these that sleep?" "Know ye not then," said Satan filled with scorn,

"Know ye not me? ye knew me once no mate For you, there sitting where ye durst not soar. Not to know me argues yourselves unknown,

The lowest of your throng; or, if ye know, Why ask ye, and saperfluous begin Your message, like to end as much in vain?" To whom thus Zephon, answering scorn with scorn, "Think not, revolted Spirit! thy shape the same, 835 Or in diminished brightness to be known, As when thou stoodest in Heaven, upright and pure; That glory then, when thou no more wast good, Departed from thee; and thou resemblest now 840 Thy sin, and place of doom, obscure and foul. But come, for thou, be sure, shalt give account To him who sent us, whose charge is to keep This place inviolable, and these from harm.' So spake the chernb; and his grave rebuke, 815 Severe in youthful beauty, added grace Invincible; abashed the Devil stood, And felt how awful goodness is, and saw Virtue in her shape how lovely; saw, and pined His loss; but chiefly to find here observed His lustre visibly impaired; yet seemed Undaunted. "If I must contend," said he, "Best with the best, the sender not the sent, Or all at once; more glory will be won, Or less be lost." "Thy fear," said Zephon bold, 855 "Will save us trial what the least can do Single against thee wicked, and thence weak." The Fiend replied not, overcome with rage; But, like a proud steed reined, went haughty on, Champing his iron curb; to strive or fly 860 He held it vain; awe from above had quelled His heart, not else dismayed. Now drew they nigh The western point, where those half-rounding guards Just met, and closing stood in squadron joined, Awaiting next command. To whom their chief, 865Gabriel, from the front thus called aloud: "O friends! I hear the tread of nimble feet Hasting this way, and now by glimpse discern Ithuriel and Zephon through the shade, And with them comes a third of regal port, 870 But faded splendour wan; who, by his gait And fierce demeanour, seems the Prince of Hell, Not likely to part hence without contest;

He scarce had ended, when those two approached, And brief related whom they brought, where found,

Stand firm, for in his look defiance lowers."

How busied, in what form and posture conched.

To whom with stern regard thus Gabriel spake:
"Why hast thou, Satan, broke the bounds prescribed
To thy transgressions, and disturbed the charge

880 Of others, who approve not to transgress
By thy example, but have power and right
To question thy bold entrance on this place;
Employed, it seems, to violate sleep, and those Whose dwelling God hath planted here in bliss?"

To whom thus Satan with contemptuous brow:
"Gabriel, thou hadst in Heaven the esteem of wise,
And such I held thee; but this question asked
Puts me in doubt. Lives there who loves his pain?
Who would not, finding way, break loose from Hell.

890 Though thither doomed? Thou wouldst thyself, no doubt, And boldly venture to whatever place Farthest from pain, where thou mightest hope to change Torment with ease, and soonest recompense Dole with delight, which in this place I sought;

895 To thee no reason, who knowest only good,
But eyil hast not tried; and wilt object
His will who bound us? Let him surer bar
His iron gates, if he intends our stay
In that dark durance; thus much what was asked.
900 The rest was true, they found me where they say;

But that implies not violence or harm."

Thus he in scorn. The warlike Angel moved,
Disdainfully half-smiling, thus replied:

"O loss of one in Heaven to judge of wise,
Since Satan fell, whom folly overthrew,
And now returns him from his prison scaped,
Gravely in doubt whether to hold them wise
Or not, who ask what boldness brought him thither,
Unlicensed, from his bounds in Hell prescribed!

910 So wise he judges it to fly from pain
However, and to scape his punishment.
So judge thou still, presumptuous, till the wrath,
Which thou incurrest by flying, meet thy flight
Sevenfold, and scourge that wisdom back to Hell,

915 Which taught thee yet no better, that no pain Can equal anger infinite provoked.

But wherefore thou alone? wherefore with thee Came not all Hell broke loose? Is pain to them Less pain, less to be fled? or thou than they 920 Less hardy to endure? Courageous chief!

935

The first in flight from pain, hadst thou alleged To thy deserted host this cause of flight, Thou surely hadst not come sole fugitive." To which the Fiend thus answered, frowning stern: "Not that I less endure, or shrink from pain, Insulting angel! well thou knowest I stood Thy fiercest, when in battle to thy aid The blasting vollied thunder made all speed, And seconded thy else not dreaded spear. But still thy words at random, as before, Argue thy inexperience what behoves, (From hard assays and ill successes past,) A faithful leader, not to hazard all Through ways of danger by himself untried; I therefore, I alone, first undertook To wing the desolate abyss, and spy This new-created world, whereof in Hell Fame is not silent; here in hope to find Better abode, and my afflicted powers

940 To settle here on earth, or in mid air;
Though for possession put to try once more
What thou and thy gay legions dare against;
Whose easier business were to serve their Lord
High up in Heaven, with songs to hymn his throne,
945 And practised distances to cringe, not fight."

945 And practised distances to cringe, not fight."
To whom the warrior Angel soon replied:
"To say and straight unsay, pretending first
Wise to fly pain, professing next the spy,
Argues no leader but a liar traced,

950 Satan! and couldst thou 'faithful' add? O name,
O sacred name of faithfulness profaned!
Faithful to whom? to thy rebellious crew?
Army of fiends, fit body to fit head!
Was this your discipline and faith engaged,

955 Your military obedience, to dissolve
Allegiance to the acknowleded Power supreme?
And thou, sly hypocrite! who now wouldest seem
Patron of liberty, who more than thou
Once fawned, and cringed, and servilely adored

960 Heaven's awful Monarch? wherefore, but in hope To dispossess him, and thyself to reign?
But mark what I areed thee now—Avaunt!
Fly thither whence thou fledst. If from this hour Within these hallowed limits thou appear,

965 Back to the infernal pit I drag thee chained,

And seal thee so, as henceforth not to scorn The facile gates of Hell too slightly barred."

So threatened he; but Satan to no threats Gave heed, but, waxing more in rage, replied:

970 "Then when I am thy captive talk of chains,
Proud limitary Cherub! but ere then
Far heavier load thyself except to feel
From my prevailing arm; though Heaven's King
Ride on thy wings, and thou with thy compeers,

975 Used to the yoke, drawest his triumphant wheels In progress through the road of Heaven star-paved."

While thus he spake, the angelic squadron bright Turned fiery red, sharpening in mooned horns Their phalanx, and began to hem him round

980 With ported spears, as thick as when a field
Of Ceres ripe for harvest waving bends
Her bearded grove of ears, which way the wind
Sways them; the careful ploughman doubting stands
Lest on the threshing-floor his hopeful sheaves

985 Prove chaff. On the other side, Satan, alarmed, Collecting all his might, dilated stood, Like Teneriff, or Atlas, unremoved; His stature reached the sky, and on his crest Sat horror plumed; nor wanted in his grasp

990 What seemed both spear and shield. Now dreadful deeds
Might have ensued; nor only Paradise
In this commotion, but the starry cope
Of heaven, perhaps, or all the elements
At least, had gone to wrack, disturbed and torn

995 With violence of this conflict, had not soon
The Eternal, to prevent such horrid fray,
Hung forth in Heaven his golden scales, (yet seen
Betwixt Astrea and the Scorpion sign,
Wherein all things created first he weighed,

1000 The pendulous round earth, with balanced air
In counterpoise; now ponders all events,
Battles, and realms;) in these he put two weights,
The sequel each of parting and of fight;
The latter quick upflew, and kicked the beam;

1005 Which Gabriel spying, thus bespake the Fiend:
"Satan, I know thy strength, and thou knowest mine,
Neither our own, but given; what folly then
To boast what arms can do? since thine no more
Than Heaven permits, nor mine, though doubled now

1010 To trample thee as mire; for proof look up,

1015

And read thy lot in you celestial sign,
Where thou art weighed and shown how light, how weak,
If thou resist." The Fiend looked up, and knew
His mounted scale aloft; nor more; but fled
Murmuring, and with him fled the shades of night.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK V.

- THE ARGUMENT.

Morning approached, Eve relates to Adam her troublesome dream: he likes it not, yet comforts her. They come forth to their day labours; their morning hymn at the door of their bower. God, to render man inexcusable, sends Raphael to admonish him of his obedience; of his free estate; of his enemy near at hand, who he is, and why his enemy; and whatever else may avail Adam to know. Raphael comes down to Paradise; his appearance described; his coming discerned by Adam afar off, sitting at the door of his bower; he goes out to meet him, brings him to his lodge, entertains him with the choicest fruits of Paradise got together by Eve; their discourse at table. Raphael performs his message, minds Adam of his state and of his enemy; relates, at 'Adam's request, who that enemy is, and how he came to be so, beginning from his first revolt in Heaven and the occasion thereof; how he drew his legions after him to the parts of the north, and there incited them to rebel with him, persuading all but only Abdicl, a scraph, who in argument dissuades and opposes him, then forsakes him.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK V.

OW Morn, her rosy steps in the eastern clime Advancing, sowed the earth with orient pearl, When Adam waked, so customed, for his sleep Was aery light, from pure digestion bred,

5 And temperate vapours bland, which the only sound Of leaves and fuming rills, Aurora's fan, Lightly dispersed, and the shrill matin song Of birds on every bough; so much the more His wonder was to find unwakened Eve

10 With tresses discomposed, and glowing cheek, As through unquiet rest. He, on his side leaning half-raised, with looks of cordial love, Hung over her enamoured, and beheld Beauty, which, whether waking or asleep,

15 Shot forth peculiar graces; then, with voice Mild as when Zephyrus on Flora breathes, Her hand soft touching, whispered thus: "Awake, My fairest, my espoused, my latest found, Heaven's last best gift, my ever-new delight!

Awake! the morning shines, and the fresh field Calls us; we lose the prime, to mark how spring Our tended plants, how blows the citron grove, What drops the myrrh, and what the balmy reed, How Nature paints her colours, how the bee
Sits on the bloom extracting liquid sweet."
Such whispering waked her, but with startled eye
On Adam, whom embracing, thus she spake:
"O sole in whom my thoughts find all repose,

My glory, my perfection! glad I see

Thy face, and morn returned; for I this night
(Such night till this I never passed) have dreamed.—

If dreamed,—not, as I oft am wont, of thee,
Works of day past, or morrow's next design,
But of offence and trouble, which my mind

35 Knew never till this irksome night. Methought, Close at mine ear one called me forth to walk With gentle voice; I thought it thine. It said, 'Why sleepest thou, Eve? now is the pleasant time, The cool, the silent, save where silence yields

40 To the night-warbling bird, that now awake Tunes sweetest his love-laboured song; now reigns Full-orbed the moon, and with more pleasing light Shadowy sets off the face of things, in vain, If none regard. Heaven wakes with all his eyes,

5 Whom to behold but thee, Nature's desire?
In whose sight all things joy, with ravishment
Attracted by thy beauty still to gaze.'
I rose as at thy call, but found thee not;
To find thee I directed then my walk;

50 And on, methought, alone I passed through ways
That brought me on a sudden to the tree
Of interdicted knowledge; fair it seemed,
Much fairer to my fancy than by day;
And, as I wondering looked, beside it stood

55 One shaped and winged like one of those from Heaven By us oft seen; his dewy locks distilled Ambrosia. On that tree he also gazed; And, 'O fair plant,' said he, 'with fruit surcharged, Deigns none to ease thy load and taste thy sweet, 60 Nor god, nor man? Is knowledge so despised?

Or envy, or what reserve, forbids to taste?
Forbid who will, none shall from me withhold
Longer thy offered good, why else set here?
This said, he paused not, but with venturous arm

65 He plucked, he tasted; me damp horror chilled At such bold words vouched with a deed so bold; But he thus, overjoyed: 'O fruit divine, Sweet of thyself, but much more sweet thus cropped! Forbidden here, it seems, as only fit
For gods, yet able to make gods of men;
And why not gods of men, since good, the more
Communicated, more abundant grows,
The author not impaired, but honoured more?
Here, happy creature, fair angelic Eve,

75 Partake thou also; happy though thou art,
Happier thou mayest be, worthier canst not be;
Take this, and be henceforth among the gods
Thyself a goddess, not to earth confined,
But sometimes in the air, as we, sometimes

Ascend to Heaven, by merit thine, and see
What life the gods live there, and such live thou.'
So saying, he drew nigh, and to me held—
Even to my mouth,—of that same fruit held part
Which he had plucked; the pleasant savoury smell

85 So quickened appetite, that I, methought,
Could not but taste. Forthwith up to the clouds
With him I flew, and underneath beheld
The earth outstretched immense, a prospect wide
And various;—wondering at my flight and change

90 To this high exaltation, suddenly
My guide was gone, and I, methought, sunk down,
And fell asleep; but O, how glad I waked
To find this but a dream!" Thus Eve her night
Related, and thus Adam answered sad:—

95 "Best image of myself, and dearer half,
The trouble of thy thoughts this night in sleep
Affects me equally; nor can I like
This uncouth dream, of evil sprung I fear;
Yet evil whence? in thee can harbour none,

100 Created pure. But know, that in the soul Are many lesser faculties, that serve Reason as chief; among these Fancy next Her office holds; of all external things, Which the five watchful senses represent,

105 She forms imaginations, acry shapes,
Which Reason, joining or disjoining, frames
All what we affirm or what deny, and call
Our knowledge or opinion; then retires
Into hor private cell when Nature rests.

110 Oft in her absence mimic Fancy wakes
To imitate her, but, misjoining shapes,
Wild work produces oft, and most in dreams,
Ill matching words and deeds long past or late.

Some such resemblances, methinks, I find
Of our last evening's talk in this thy dream,
But with addition strange; yet be not sad;
Evil into the mind of god or man
May come and go, so unapproved, and leave
No spot or blame behind; which gives me hope

120 That what in sleep thou didst abhor to dream Waking thou never wilt consent to do.

Be not disheartened then, nor cloud those looks,
That wont to be more cheerful and serene
Than when fair Morning first smiles on the world:

And let us to our fresh employments rise
Among the groves, the fountains, and the flowers
That open now their choicest bosomed smells,
Reserved from night, and kept for thee in store."

So cheered he his fair spouse, and she was cheered;

130 But silently a gentle tear let fall
From either eye, and wiped them with her hair;
Two other precious drops, that ready stood,
Each in their crystal sluice, he ere they fell
Kissed, as the gracious signs of sweet remorse,

135 And pions awe, that feared to have offended.
So all was cleared, and to the field they haste.
But first, from under shady arborous roof
Soon as they forth were come to open sight
Of day-spring, and the sun,—who scarce up-risen,

140 With wheels yet hovering o'er the ocean-brim,
Shot parallel to the earth his dewy ray,
Discovering in wide landscape all the east
Of Paradise and Eden's happy plains,—
Lowly they bowed adoring, and began

145 Their orisons, each morning duly paid
In various style; for neither various style
Nor holy rapture wanted they to praise
Their Maker, in fit strains pronounced or sung
Unmeditated, such prompt eloquence

150 Flowed from their lips, in prose or numerous verse, More tuneable than needed lute or harp To add more sweetness; and they thus began: "These are thy glorious works, Parent of good!

Almighty! thine this universal frame,

Thus wondrous fair; thyself how wondrous then!

Unspeakable, who sittest above these Heavens

To us invisible, or dimly seen

In these thy lowest works; yet these declare

Thy goodness beyond thought, and power givine.

Speak, ye who best can tell, ye Sons of Light,
Angels,—for ye behold him, and with songs
And choral symphonies, day without night,
Circle his throne rejoicing,—ye in Heaven.
On Earth join all ye creatures to extol

165 Him first, him last, him midst, and without end.
Fairest of Stars, last in the train of night,
If better thou belong not to the dawn,
Sure pledge of day, that crownest the smiling morn
With thy bright circlet, praise him in thy sphere,

170 While day arises, that sweet hour of prime.

Thou Sun, of this great world botheye and soul,
Acknowledge him thy greater; sound his praise
In thy eternal course, both when thou climbest,
And when high noon hast gained, and when thou fallest.

175 Moon, (that now meetest the orient sun, now fliest,)
With the fixed Stars, fixed in their orb that flies;
And ye five other wandering Fires, that move
In mystic dance, not without song, resound
His praise, who out of darkness called up light.

180 Air, and ye Elements, the eldest birth
Of nature's womb, that in quaternion run
Perpetual circle, multiform, and mix
And nourish all things, let your ceaseless change
Vary to our great Maker still new praise.

Ye Mists and Exhalations, that now rise
From hill or steaming lake, dusky or grey,
Till the sun paint your fleecy skirts with gold,
In honour to the world's great Author rise;
Whether to deck with clouds the uncoloured sky,

190 Or wet the thirsty earth with falling showers,
Rising or falling still advance his praise.
His praise, ye Winds, that from four quarters blow,
Breathe soft or loud; and wave your tops, ye Pines,
With every plant, in sign of worship wave.

195 Fountains, and ye that warble, as ye flow,
Melodious murmurs, warbling tune his praise.
Join voices, all ye living Souls; ye Birds,
That singing up to Heaven-gate ascend,
Bear on your wings and in your notes his praise.

200 Ye that in waters glide, and ye that walk The earth, and stately tread, or lowly creep, Witness if I be silent, morn or even, To hill or valley, fountain, or fresh shade,

Made vocal by my song, and taught his praise. Hail, universal Lord! be bounteous still 205 To give us only good; and, if the night Have gathered aught of evil, or concealed, Disperse it, as now light dispels the dark!" So prayed they innocent, and to their thoughts 210 Firm peace recovered soon, and wonted calm. On to their morning's rural work they haste. Among sweet dews and flowers; where any row Of fruit-trees over-woody reached too far Their pampered boughs, and needed hands to check Fruitless embraces; or they led the vine 215 To wed her elm; she, spoused, about him twines Her marriageable arms, and with her brings Her dower, the adopted clusters, to adorn His barren leaves. Them thus employed beheld 220 With pity Heaven's high King, and to him called Raphael, the sociable Spirit, that deigned To travel with Tobias, and secured His marriage with the seventimes-wedded maid. "Raphael," said he, "thou hearest what stir on earth 225 Satan, from Hell scaped through the darksome gulf, Hath raised in Paradise, and how disturbed This night the human pair; how he designs In them at once to ruin all mankind. Go therefore, half this day as friend with friend 230 Converse with Adam, in what bower or shade Thou findest him, from the heat of noon retired, To respite his day-labour with repast Or with repose; and such discourse bring on, As may advise him of his happy state, 235 Happiness in his power left free to will, Left to his own free will, his will, though free, Yet mutable; whence warn him to beware He swerve not, too secure; tell him, withal, His danger, and from whom; what enemy, Late fallen himself from Heaven, is plotting now The fall of others from like state of bliss; By violence? no, for that shall be withstood; But by deceit and lies. This let him know, Lest wilfully transgressing he pretend Surprisal, unadmonished, unforewarned." 245

> So spake the Eternal Father, and fulfilled All justice; nor delayed the winged Saint After his charge received; but from among

Thousand celestial Ardours, where he stood
Veiled with gorgeous wings, up springing light,
Flew through the midst of Heaven; the angelic choirs,
On each hand parting, to his speed gave way
Through all the empyreal road; till, at the gate
Of Heaven arrived, the gate self-opened wide,

255 On golden hinges turning, as by work
Divine the sovran Architect had framed.
From hence,—no cloud or, to obstruct his sight,
Star interposed however small,—he sees,
Not unconform to other shining globes,

260 Earth, and the garden of God, with cedars crowned Above all hills. As when by night the glass Of Galileo, less assured, observes ... Imagined lands and regions in the moon; Or pilot, from amidst the Cyclades

265 Delos or Samos first appearing, kens
A cloudy spot. Down thither prone in flight
He speeds, and through the vast ethereal sky
Sails between worlds and worlds, with steady wing
Now on the polar winds, then with quick fan

270 Winnows the buxom air; till, within soar
Of towering eagles, to all the fowls he seems
A phoenix, gazed by all, as that sole bird,
When, to enshrine his reliques in the Sun's
Bright temple, to Egyptian Thebes he flies.

At once on the eastern cliff of Paradise
He lights, and to his proper shape returns,
A Scraph winged; six wings he wore to shade
His lineaments divine; the pair that clad
Each shoulder broad came mantling o'er his breast

280 With regal ornament; the middle pair Girt like a starry zone his waist, and round Skirted his loins and thighs with downy gold And colours dipped in heaven; the third his feet Shadowed from either heel with feathered mail,

285 Sky-tinetured grain. Like Maia's son he stood,
And shook his plumes, that heavenly fragrance filled
The circuit wide. Straight knew him all the bands
Of Angels under watch; and to his state,
And to his message high, in honour rise;

290 For on some message high they guessed him bound.
Their glittering tents he passed, and now is come
Into the blissful field, through groves of myrrh,
And flowering odours, cassia, nard, and balm;

A wilderness of sweets; for Nature here
Wantoned as in her prime, and played at will
Her virgin fancies, pouring forth more sweet,
Wild above rule or art, enormous bliss.
Him through the spicy forest onward come
Adam discerned, as in the door he sat

300 Of his cool bower, while now the mounted sun
Shot down direct his fervid rays to warm
Earth's inmost womb, more warmth than Adam needs;
And Eve within, due at her hour, prepared
For dinner sayoury fruits, of taste to please

True appetite, and not disrelish thirst
Of nectarous draughts between, from milky stream,
Berry or grape; to whom thus Adam called:

"Haste hither, Eve, and, worth thy sight, behold, Eastward among those trees, what glorious shape

310 Comes this way moving; seems another morn
Risen on mid-noon; some great behest from Heaven
To us perhaps he brings, and will vouchsafe
This day to be our guest. But go with speed,
And what thy stores contain bring forth, and pour

315 Abundance, fit to honour and receive
Our heavenly stranger; well we may afford
Our givers their own gifts, and large bestow
From large bestowed, where nature multiplies
Her fertile growth, and by disburdening grows

320 More fruitful, which instructs us not to spare."

To whom thus Eve: "Adam, earth's hallowed mould,
Of God inspired, small store will serve, where store,
All seasons, ripe for use hangs on the stalk;
Save what by frugal storing firmness gains

325 To nourish, and superfluous moist consumes;
But I will haste, and from each bough and brake,
Each plant and juiciest gourd, will pluck such choice
To entertain our angel-guest, as he Beholding shall confess, that here on Earth

330 God hath dispensed his bounties as in Heaven."
So saying, with despatchful looks in haste
She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent

What choice to choose for delicacy best, What order, so contrived as not to mix

Tastes, not well joined, inelegant, but bring
Taste after taste, upheld with kindliest change;
Bestirs her then, and from each tender stalk
Whatever Earth, all-bearing mother, yields

In India East or West, or middle shore, 340 In Pontus, or the Punic coast, or where Alcinous reigned, fruit of all kinds, in coat
Rough or smooth rined, or bearded husk, or shell,
She gathers, tribute large, and on the board
Heaps with unsparing hand; for drink the grape

345 She crushes, inoffensive must, and meaths
From many a berry; and from sweet kernels pressed
She tempers dulcet creams; nor these to hold
Wants her fit vessels pure; then strews the ground
With rose and odours from the shrub unfumed.

350 Meanwhile our primitive great sire, to meet
His godlike guest, walks forth, without more train
Accompanied than with his own complete
Perfections; in himself was all his state,
More solemn than the tedious pomp that waits

On princes, when their rich retinue long
Of horses led, and grooms besmeared with gold,
Dazzles the crowd, and sets them all agape.
Nearer his presence, Adam, though not awed,
Yet with submiss approach and reverence meek,

360 As to a superior nature, bowing low,
Thus said: "Native of Heaven! for other place
None can than Heaven such glorious shape contain;
Since, by descending from the thrones above,
Those happy places thou hast deigned awhile

To want, and honour these, vouchsafe with us
Two only, who yet by sovran gift possess
This spacious ground, in yonder shady bower
To rest, and what the garden choicest bears
To sit and taste, till this meridian heat

370 Be over, and the sun more cool decline."

Whom thus the angelic Virtue answered mild:

"Adam! I therefore came; nor art thou such Created, or such place hast here to dwell,
As may not oft invite, though Spirits of Heaven,

375 To visit thee; lead on then where thy bower
O'ershades; for these midhours, till evening rise,
I have at will." So to the sylvan lodge
They came, that like Pomona's arbour smiled,
With flowerets decked and fragrant smells; but Eve,

380 Undecked save with herself, more lovely fair
Than wood-nymph, or the fairest goddess feigned
Of three that in mount Ida naked strove,
Stood to entertain her guest from Heaven; no veil

390

She needed, virtue-proof; no thought infirm 385 Altered her cheek. On whom the Angel 'Hail!' Bestowed, the holy salutation used Long after to Blessed Mary, second Eve.

"Hail mother of mankind! whose fruitful womb Shall fill the world more numerous with thy sons, Than with these various fruits the trees of God Have heaped this table." Raised of grassy turf

Their table was, and mossy seats had round, And on her ample square from side to side All autumn piled, though Spring and Autumn here

Danced hand in hand. Awhile discourse they hold, 395No fear lest dinner cool; when thus began Our author: "Heavenly stranger! please to taste These bounties, which our Nourisher,—from whom All perfect good, unmeasured out, descends,—

400 To us for food and for delight hath caused The earth to yield; unsavoury food perhaps To spiritual natures; only this I know, That one celestial Father gives to all."

To whom the Angel: "Therefore what he gives

405 (Whose praise be ever sung!) to man in part Spiritual, may of purest Spirits be found No ingrateful food; and food alike those pure Intelligential substances require,

As doth your rational; and both contain

410 Within them every lower faculty Of sense, whereby they hear, see, smell, touch, taste; Tasting concoct, digest, assimilate, And corporeal to incorporeal turn. For know, whatever was created needs

415 To be sustained and fed; of elements The grosser feeds the purer, earth the sea, Earth and the sea feed air, the air those fires Ethereal, and, as lowest, first the moon;

Whence, in her visage round, those spots, unpurged

420Vapours not yet into her substance turned. Nor doth the moon no nourishment exhale From her moist continent to higher orbs. The sun, that light imparts to all, receives From all his alimental recompense

425 In humid exhalations; and at even Sups with ocean. Though in Heaven the trees Of life ambrosial fruitage bear, and vines Yield nectar; though from off the boughs each morn We brush mellifluous dews, and find the ground
Covered with pearly grain; yet God hath here
Varied his bounty so with new delights,
As may compare with Heaven; and to taste
Think not I shall be nice." So down they sat,
And to their viands fell; nor seemingly

435 The Angel, nor in mist, the common gloss
Of theologians, but with keen despatch
Of real hunger, and concoctive heat
To transubstantiate; what redounds transpires
Through Spirits with ease; nor wonder, if by fire

440 Of sooty coal the empiric alchemist
Can turn, or holds it possible to turn,
Metals of drossiest ore to perfect gold,
As from the mine. Meanwhile at table Eve
Ministered naked, and their flowing cups

445 With pleasant liquors crowned. O innocence Deserving Paradise! if ever, then,
Then had the sons of God excuse to have been Enamoured at that sight; but in those hearts Love unlibidinous reigned, nor jealousy

450 Was understood, the injured lover's hell.

Thus when with meats and drinks they had sufficed
Not burdened nature, sudden mind arose
In Adam, not to let the occasion pass,
Given by this great conference, to know

455 Of things above his world, and of their being Who dwell in Heaven, whose excellence he saw Transcend his own so far, whose radiant forms—Divine effulgence,—whose high power so far Exceeded human; and his wary speech

460 Thus to the empyreal minister he framed:

"Inhabitant with God! now know I well
Thy favour in this honour done to man,
Under whose lowly roof thou hast vouchsafed
To enter, and these earthly fruits to taste,

465 Food not of Angels, yet accepted so,
As that more willingly thou couldst not seem
At Heaven's high feasts to have fed; yet what compare?"
To whom the winged hierarch replied:
"O Adam! one Almighty is, from whom

All things proceed, and up to him return,
If not depraved from good, created all
Such to perfection, one first matter all,
Endued with various forms, various degrees

Of substance, and, in things that live, of life;
But more refined, more spirituous, and pure,
As nearer to him placed, or nearer tending,
Each in their several active spheres assigned,
Till body up to spirit work, in bounds
Proportioned to each kind. So from the root

480 Springs lighter the green stalk, from thence the leaves
More aery, last the bright consummate flower
Spirits odórous breathes; flowers and their fruit,
Man's nourishment, by gradual scale sublimed;

To vital spirits aspire, to animal,

485 To intellectual; give both life and sense, Fancy and understanding; whence the soul Reason receives, and reason is her being, Discursive, or intuitive; discourse. Is oftest yours, the latter most is ours,

490 Differing but in degree, of kind the same.
Wonder not, then, what God for you saw good
If I refuse not, but convert, as you,
To proper substance; time may come, when men

With angels may participate, and find

495 No inconvenient diet; nor too light fare;
And from these corporal nutriments, perhaps,
Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit,
Improved by tract of time, and winged ascend
Ethereal, as we, or may, at choice,

500 Here or in heavenly Paradises dwell;
If ye be found obedient, and retain Unalterably firm his love entire,
Whose progeny you are. Meanwhile enjoy
Your fill what happiness this happy state

505 Can comprehend, incapable of more."

To whom the patriarch of mankind replied:
"O-favourable Spirit, propitious guest!
Well hast thou taught the way that may direct
Our knowledge and the scale of nature set

510 From centre to circumference, whereon, In contemplation of created things, By steps we may ascend to God. But say, What meant that caution joined, 'If ye be found Obedient?' Can we want obedience, then,

515 To him, or possibly his love desert,
Who formed us from the dust, and placed us here
Full, to the utmost measure, of what bliss
Human desires can seek or apprehend?"

To whom the Angel: "Son of Heaven and Earth,

520 Attend! That thou art happy, owe to God;
That thou continuest such, owe to thyself,
That is, to thy obedience; therein stand.
This was that caution given thee; be advised.
God made thee perfect, not immutable;

And good he made thee, but to persewere
He left it in thy power; ordained thy will
By nature free, not over-ruled by fate
luextricable, or strict necessity;
Our voluntary service he requires,

530 Not our necessitated; such with him
Finds no acceptance, nor can find; for how
Can hearts not free be tried whether they serve Willing or no, who will but what they must
By destiny, and can no other choose?

535 Myself, and all the angelic host, that stand In sight of God enthroned, our happy state Hold, as you yours, while our obedience holds; On other surety none; freely we serve, Because we freely love, as in our will

540 To love or not; in this we stand or fall;
And some are fallen,—to disobedience fallen,
And so from Heaven to deepest Hell! O fall
From what high state of bliss into what woe!"
To whom our great progenitor: "Thy words

545 Attentive, and with more delighted ear,
Divine instructor, I have heard, than when Cherubic songs by night from neighbouring hills
Aerial music send. Nor knew I not
To be, both will and deed, created free;

550 Yet that we never shall forget to love
Our Maker, and obey him, whose command
Single is yet so just, my constant thoughts
Assured me, and still assure; though what thou tellest
Hath passed in Heaven some doubt within me move,

555 But more desire to hear, if thou consent,
The full relation, which must needs be strange,
Worthy of sacred silence to be heard.
And we have yet large day, for scarce the sun
Hath finished half his journey, and scarce begins

560 His other half in the great zone of heaven."

Thus Adam made request; and Raphael,
After short pause assenting, thus began:

"High matter thou enjoinest me, O prime of men!

10

Sad task and hard; for how shall I relate 565To human sense the invisible exploits Of warring Spirits? how, without remorse, The ruin of so many, glorious once And perfect while they stood? how, last, unfold - The secrets of another world, perhaps 570 Not lawful to reveal? Yet for thy good This is dispensed; and what surmounts the reach Of human sense I shall delineate so, By likening spiritual to corporal forms, As may express them best; though what if earth 575 Be but the shadow of Heaven, and things therein Each to other like, more than on earth is thought? As yet this world was not, and Chaos wild rests Reigned where these heavens now roll, where earth now · Upon her centre poised; when, on a day, (For time, though in eternity, applied To motion, measures all things durable By present, past, and future) on such day

As Heaven's great year brings forth, the empyreal host

Of Angels, by imperial summons called,
585 Innumerable before the Almighty's throne
Forthwith from all the ends of Heaven appeared
Under their hierarchs in orders bright;
Ten thousand thousand ensigns high advanced,
Standards and gonfalons 'twixt van and rear

590 Stream in the air, and for distinction serve Of hierarchies, of orders, and degrees; Or in their glittering tissues bear emblazed Holy memorials, acts of zeal and love Recorded eminent. Thus, when in orbs

595 Of circuit inexpressible they stood,
Orb within orb, the Father infinite,
By whom, in bliss embosomed, sat the Son,
Amidst, as from a flaming mount, whose top
Brightness had made invisible, thus spake:

'Hear, all ye Angels, progeny of light,
Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers!
Hear my decree, which unrevoked shall stand.
This day I have begot whom I declare
My only Son, and on this holy hill

605 Him have anointed, whom ye now behold At my right hand; your head I him appoint; And by myself have sworn, to him shall bow All knees in-Heaven, and shall confess him Lord; Under his great vicegerent reign abide United as one individual soul,
For ever happy. Him who disobeys,
Me disobeys, breaks union, and that day,
Cast out from God and blessed vision, falls
Into utter darkness, deep engulfed, his place

Ordained, without redemption, without end.'
So spake the Omnipotent, and with his words
All seemed well pleased; all seemed, but were not all.
That day, as other solemn days they spent

In song and dance about the sacred hill;
Mystical dance, which yonder starry sphere
Of planets and of fixed in all her wheels
Resembles nearest, mazes intricate,
Eccentric, intervolved, yet regular
Then most, when most irregular they seem;

625 And in their motions harmony divine So smooths her charming tones, that God's own ear Listens delighted. Evening now approached; (For we have also our evening and our morn,—

We ours for change delectable, not need;)
630 Forthwith from dance to sweet repast they turn
Desirous; all in circles as they stood,
Tables are set, and on a sudden piled
With Angels' food, and rubied nectar flows

In pearl, in diamond, and massy gold,
Fruit of delicious vines, the growth of Heaven.
On flowers reposed, and with fresh flowerets crowned,
They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet
Quaff immortality and joy, secure
Of surfeit, where full measure only bounds

640 Excess, before the all-bounteons King, who showered With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy.

Now, when ambrosial night with clouds exhaled From that high mount of God, whence light and shade Spring both, the face of brightest Heaven had changed

To grateful twilight, (for night comes not there In darker veil) and roseate dews disposed All but the unsleeping eyes of God to rest; Wide over all-the plain, and wider far Than all this globous earth in plain outspread,

650 (Such are the courts of God) the angelic throng,
Dispersed in bands and files, their camp extend
By living streams among the trees of life,
Pavilions numberless, and sudden reared.

Celestial tabernacies, where they slept
655 Fanned with cool winds, save those who, in their course,
Melodious hymns about the sovran throne

Alternate all night long. But not so waked Satan (so call him now, his former name Is heard no more in Heaven;) he, of the first,

660 If not the first Archangel, great in power,
In favour, and pre-eminence, yet fraught
With envy against the Son of God,—that day
Honoured by his great Father, and proclaimed
Messiah, King Anointed,—could not bear

Through pride that sight, and thought himself impaired.
Deep malice thence conceiving, and disdain,
Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour
Friendliest to sleep and silence, he resolved
With all his legions to dislodge, and leave

670 Unworshipped, unobeyed, the throne supreme,—Contemptuous; and his next subordinate Awakening, thus to him in secret spake:

'Sleepest thou, companion dear? What sleep can close

Thy eye-lids, and rememberest what decree
Of yesterday, so late, hath passed the lips
Of Heaven's Almighty? Thou to me thy thoughts
Wast wont, I mine to thee was wont, to impart;
Both waking we were one; how then can now
Thy sleep dissent? New laws thou seest imposed;

New laws from him who reigns, new minds may raise
In us who serve, new counsels, to debate
What doubtful may ensue; more in this place
To utter is not safe. Assemble thou
Of all those myriads which we lead the chief;

Tell them that by command, ere yet dim night Her shadowy cloud withdraws, I am to haste, And all who under me their banners wave, Homeward with flying march where we possess The quarters of the North; there to prepare 390 Fit entertainment to receive our King,

The great Messiah, and his new commands,
Who speedily through all the hierarchies
Intends to pass triumphant, and give laws.

So spake the false Archangel, and infused
Bad influence into the unwary breast
Of his associate; he together calls,
Or several, one by one, the regent Powers,
Under him regent; tells, as he was taught,

That, the Most High commanding, now ere night,
Now ere dim night had disencumbered Heaven,
The great hierarchal standard was to move;
Tells the suggested cause, and casts between Ambiguous words and jealousies, to sound
Or taint integrity. But all obeyed

705 The wonted signal, and superior voice
Of their great Potentate; for great indeed
His name, and high was his degree in Heaven;
His countenance, as the morning star that guides
The starry flock, allured them, and with lies

710 Drew after him the third part of Heaven's host.

Meanwhile the Eternal Eye, whose sight discerns
Abstrasest thoughts, from forth his holy mount,
And from within the golden lamps that burn
Nightly before him, saw without their light

715 Rebellion rising; saw, in whom, how spread Among the sons of morn, what multitudes Were banded to oppose his high decree; And, smiling, to his only Son thus said:

'Son! thou in whom my glory I behold

720 In full resplendence, Heir of all my might, Nearly it now concerns us to be sure Of our omnipotence, and with what arms We mean to hold what anciently we claim Of deity or empire; such a foe

725 Is rising, who intends to erect his throne Equal to ours, throughout the spacious north; Nor so content, hath in his thought to try In battle, what our power is, or our right. Let us advise, and to this hazard draw

730 With speed what force is left, and all employ
In our defence, lest unawares we lose
This our high place, our sanctuary, our hill.'
To whom the Son, with calm aspect and clear,
Lightning divine, ineffable, serene,

735 Made answer: 'Mighty Father! thou thy foes
Justly hast in derision, and, secure,
Laughest at their vain designs and tumults vain,
Matter to me of glory, whom their hate
Illustrates, when they see all regal power

740 Given me to quell their pride, and in event Know whether I be dextrous to subdue Thy rebels, or be found the worst in Heaven.' So spake the Son; but Satan with his Powers

Far was advanced on winged speed, an host Innumerable as the stars of night, Or stars of morning, dew-drops, which the sun Impearls on every leaf and every flower.

Impearls on every leaf and every flower. Regions they passed, the mighty regencies Of Seraphim, and Potentates, and Thrones,

750 In their triple degrees; regions to which All thy dominion, Adam, is no more Than what this garden is to all the earth And all the sea from one entire globose

Stretched into longitude; which having passed,
At length into the limits of the North
They came, and Satan to his royal seat,
High on a hill, far blazing, as a mount

Raised on a mount, with pyramids and towers From diamond quarries hewn, and rocks of gold;

760 The palace of great Lucifer, (so call That structure in the dialect of men Interpreted,) which, not long after, he Affecting all equality with God, In imitation of that mount whereon

765 Messiah was declared in sight of Heaven,
The Mountain of the Congregation called;
For thither he assembled all his train,
Pretending so commanded, to consult
About the great reception of their King

770 Thither to come; and with calumnious art
Of counterfeited truth thus held their ears:
Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers

If these magnific titles yet remain Not merely titular, since by decree

775 Another now hath to himself engrossed
All power, and us eclipsed, under the name
Of King Anointed; for whom all this haste
Of midnight march, and hurried meeting here,
This only to consult, how we may best,

780 With what may be devised of honours new,
Receive him coming to receive from us
Knee-tribute yet unpaid, prostration vile!
Too much to one, but double how endured,—
To one and to his image now proclaimed?

785 But what if better counsels might erect
Our minds, and teach us to cast off this yoke!
Will ye submit your necks, and choose to bend
The supple knee? Ye will not, if I trust

To know ye right, or if ye know yourselves
790 Natives and sons of Heaven possessed before
By none; and if not equal all, yet free,
Equally free; for orders and degrees
Jar not with liberty, but well consist.
Who can in reason, then, or right, assume

795 Monarchy over such as live by right
His equals, if in power and splendour less,
In freedom equal? or can introduce
Law and edict on us, who without law
Err not? much less for this to be our Lord.

800 And look for adoration, to the abuse
Of those imperial titles, which assert
Our being ordained to govern, not to serve!'
Thus far his bold discourse without control

Had audience; when among the Seraphim Abdiel, than whom none with more zeal adored

The Deity, and divine commands obeyed, Stood up, and in a flame of zeal severe The current of his fury thus opposed:

'O argument blasphèmous, false and proud!

810 Words which no ear ever to hear in Heaven Expected, least of all from thee, ingrate, In place thyself so high above thy peers.

Canst thou with impious obloquy condemn The just decree of God, pronounced and sworn,

815 That to his only Son, by right endued
With regal sceptre, every soul in Heaven
Shall bend the knee, and in that honour due
Confess him rightful King? Unjust, thou sayest,
Flatly unjust, to bind with laws the free,

820 And equal over equals to let reign,
One over all with unsucceeded power.
Shalt thou give law to God? shalt thou dispute
With him the points of liberty, who made
Thee what thou art, and formed the Powers of Heaven

825 Such as he pleased, and circumscribed their being? Yet, by experience taught, we know how good, And of our good, and of our dignity How provident he is; how far from thought To make us less, bent rather to exalt

830 Our happy state, under one Head more near United. But to grant it thee unjust,
That equal over equals monarch reign;—
Thyself, though great and glorious, dost thou coun

Or all angelic nature joined in one, Equal to him, begotten Son? by whom, 835 As by his Word, the mighty Fasher made All things, even thee, and all the Spirits of Heaven By him created in their bright degrees, Crowned them with glory, and to their glory named Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers, 840 Essential Powers; nor by his reign obscured, But more illustrious made; since he, the Head, One of our number thus reduced becomes: His laws our laws; all honour to him done 845 Returns our own. Cease then this impious rage, And tempt not these; but hasten to appease The incensed Father, and the incensed Son, While pardon may be found, in time besought.' So spake the fervent Angel; but his zeal 850 -None seconded, as out of season judged, Or singular and rash; whereat rejoiced The Apostate, and more haughty thus replied: 'That we were formed then sayest thou? and the work Of secondary hands, by task transferred 855 From Father to his Son? Strange point and new! Doctrine which we would know whence learned; who saw When this creation was? rememberest thou Thy making, while the Maker gave thee being? We know no time when we were not as now; 860 Know none before us, self-begot, self-raised By our own quickening power, when fatal course Had circled his full orb, the birth mature Of this our native Heaven, ethereal sons. Our puissance is our own; our own right hand 865Shall teach us highest deeds, by proof to try Who is our equal; then thou shalt behold Whether by supplication we intend Address, and to begirt the Almighty throne Beseeching or besieging. This report, 870 These tidings, carry to the anointed King, And fly, ere evil intercept thy flight.' He said, and, as the sound of waters deep, Hoarse murmur echoed to his words applause Through the infinite host; nor less for that 875 The flaming Scraph, fearless, though alone,

'O alienate from God, O Spirit accursed, Forsaken of all good! I see thy fall

Encompassed round with foes, thus answered bold:

Determined, and thy hapless crew involved
In this perfidious fraud, contagion spread
Both of thy crime and punishment; henceforth
No more be troubled how to quit the yoke
Of God's Messiah; those indulgent laws
Will uot be now youchsafed; other decrees

Against thee are gone forth without recall;
That golden sceptre, which then didst reject,
Is now an iron rod to bruise and break
Thy disobedience. Well thou didst advise;
Yet not for thy advice or threats I fly

890 These wicked tents devoted, lest the wrath Impendent, raging into sudden flame, Distinguish not; for soon expect to feel His thunder on thy head, devouring fire. Then who created thee lamenting learn,

895 When who can uncreate thee thou shalt know So spake the Scraph Abdiel, faithful found Among the faithless, faithful only he; Among innumerable false, unmoved, Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,

900 His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal;
Nor number, nor example, with him wrought
To swerve from truth, or change his constant mind.
Though single. From amidst them forth he passed,
Long way through hostile scorn, which he sustained

905 Superior, nor of violence feared aught;
And with retorted scorn his back he turned
On those proud towers to swift destruction doomed.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK VI.

THE ARGUMENT.

RAPHAEL continues to relate how Michael and Gabriel were sent forth to battle against Satan and his Angels. The first fight described; Satan and his powers retire under night; he calls a council; invents devilish engines, which, in the second day's fight, put Michael and his Angels to some disorder; but they at length, pulling up mountains, overwhelmed both the force and machines of Satan; vet the tumult not so ending, God, on the third day, sends Messiah, his Son, for whom he had reserved the glory of that victory. He, in the power of his Father, coming to the place, and causing all his legions to stand still on either side, with his chariot and thunder driving into the midst of his enemies, pursues them, unable to resist, towards the wall of Heaven; which opening, they leap down, with horror and confusion, into the place of punishment prepared for them in the deep. Messiah returns with triumph to his Father.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK VI.

LL night the dreadless Angel, unpursued, [till Morn, Through Heaven's wide champaign held his way; Waked by the circling Hours, with rosy hand

Unbarred the gates of light. There is a cave
Within the mount of God, fast by his throne,
Where light and darkness, in perpetual round,
Lodge and dislodge by turns, which makes through Heaven
Grateful vicissitude, like day and night;
Light issues forth, and at the other door

10 Obsequious darkness enters, till her hour
To veil the Heaven; though darkness there might well
Seem twilight here. And now went forth the Morn,
Such as in highest Heaven, arrayed in gold
Empyreal; from before her vanished Night,

15 Shot through with orient beams; when all the plain, Covered with thick embattled squadrons bright, Chariots, and flaming arms, and fiery steeds, Reflecting blaze on blaze, first met his view; War he perceived—war in procinct; and found

Already known what he, for news, had thought
To have reported; gladly then he mixed
Among those friendly Powers, who him received
With joy and acclamations loud, that one—
That of so many myriads fallen, yet one

25 Returned not lost. On to the sacred hill
They led him high applauded, and present
Before the seat supreme; from whence a voice,
From midst a golden cloud, thus mild was heard:

'Servant of God, well done! well hast thou fought
The better fight, who single hast maintained
Against revolted multitudes the cause
Of truth, in word mightier than they in arms;
And for the testimony of truth hast borne
Universal reproach, far worse to bear

35 Than violence; for this was all thy care,
To stand approved in sight of God, though worlds
Judged thee perverse; the easier conquest now
Remains thee, aided by this host of friends,
Back on thy foes more glorious to return,

Han scorned thou didst depart; and to subdue By force, who reason for their law refuse,—
Right reason for their law, and for their King Messiah, who by right of merit reigns.
Go, Michael, of celestial armies prince!

45 And thou, in military prowess next,
Gabriel! Lead forth to battle these my sons
Invincible; lead forth my armèd Saints,
By thousands and by millions, ranged for fight,
Equal in number to that godless crew

50 Rebellious; them with fire and hostile arms Fearless assault; and, to the brow of Heaven Pursuing, drive them out from God and bliss, Into their place of punishment,—the gulf, Of Tartarus, which ready opens wide

55 His fiery chaos to receive their fall.'
So spake the Sovran Voice, and clouds began
To darken all the hill, and smoke to roll,
In dusky wreaths, reluctant flames, the sign
Of wrath awaked; nor with less dread the loud

60 Ethereal trumpet from on high gan blow.
At which command the Powers militant
'That stood for Heaven, in mighty quadrate joined
Of union irresistible, moved on
In silence their bright legions, to the sound

65 Of instrumental harmony, that breathed Heroic ardour to adventurous deeds, Under their godlike leaders, in the cause Of God and his Messiah. On they move Indissolubly firm; nor obvious hill,

70 Nor straitening vale, nor wood nor stream, divides Their perfect ranks; for high above the ground Their march was, and the passive air upbore Their nimble tread. As when the total kind Of birds, in orderly array on wing,

75 Came summoned over Eden to receive
Their names of thee; so over many a tract
Of Heaven they marched, and many a province wide,
Tenfold the length of this terrene. At last,
Far in the horizon to the north, appeared

80 From skirt to skirt a fiery region, stretched
In battailous aspect, and, nearer view—
Bristled with upright beams innumerable
Of rigid spears, and helmets thronged, and shields
Various, with boastful argument portrayed,

The banded powers of Satan hasting on
With furious expedition; for they weened
That self-same day, by fight or by surprise,
To win the mount of God, and on his throne
To set the envier of his state, the proud

90 Aspirer; but their thoughts proved fond and vain In the midway. Though strange to us it seemed At first, that Angel should with Angel war, And in fierce hosting meet, who wont to meet So oft in festivals of joy and love

95 Unanimous, as sons of one great Sire,
Hymning the Eternal Father; but the shout
Of battle now began, and rushing sound
Of onset ended soon each milder thought.
High in the midst, exalted as a God,

100 The Apostate in his sun-bright chariot sat,
Idol of majesty divine, enclosed
With flaming Cherubim and golden shields;
Then lighted from his gorgeous throne, for now
'Twixt host and host but narrow space was left—

105 A dreadful interval,—and front to front
Presented stood in terrible array
Of hideous length; before the cloudy van,
On the rough edge of battle ere it joined,
Satan, with vast and haughty strides advanced,
110 Came towering, armed in adamant and gold.

Abdiel that sight endured not, where he stood Among the mightiest, bent on highest deeds; And thus his own undaunted heart explores:

'O Heaven! that such resemblance of the Highest

115 Should yet remain, where faith and realty
Remain not; wherefore should not strength and might
There fail where virtue fails, or weakest prove
Where boldest, though to sight unconquerable?
His puissance, trusting in the Almighty's aid,

120 I mean to try, whose reason I have tried Unsound and false; nor is it aught but just, That he, who in debate of truth had won, Should win in arms, in both disputes alike Victor; though brutish that contest and foul,

125 When reason had to deal with force; yet so Most reason is that reason overcome.'
So pondering, and from his armed peers

Forth stepping opposite, half-way he met His daring foe, at this prevention more 130 Incensed, and thus securely him defied:

 'Proud! art thou met? Thy hope was to have reached
 The height of thy aspiring unopposed,
 The throne of God unguarded, and his side
 Abandoned, at the terror of thy power,

135 Or potent tongue. Fool! not to think how vain Against the Omnipotent to rise in arms; Who, out of smallest things, could without end Have raised incessant armies to defeat Thy folly; or, with solitary hand,

140 Reaching beyond all limit, at one blow,
Unaided, could have finished thee, and whelmed
Thy legions under darkness. But thou seest
All are not of thy train; there be, who faith
Prefer, and piety to God, though then

145 To thee not visible, when I alone
Seemed in thy world erroneous to dissent
From all; my sect thou seest; now learn too late
How few sometimes may know, when thousands err.
Whom the grand foe, with scornful eye askance,

150 Thus answered: 'Ill for thee, but in wished hour Of my revenge, first sought for, thou returnest From flight, seditious Angel! to receive Thy merited reward, the first assay Of this right hand provoked, since first that tongue,

155 Inspired with contradiction, durst oppose A third part of the gods, in synod met Their deities to assert; who, while they feel Vigour divine within them, can allow Omnipotence to none. But well thou comest

160 Before thy fellows, ambitious to win From me some plume, that thy success may show Destruction to the rest; this pause between, (Unanswered lest thou boast,) to let thee know, At first I thought that liberty and Heaven

165To heavenly souls had been all one; but now I see that most through sloth had rather serve, Ministering Spirits, trained up in feast and song! Such hast thou armed—the minstrelsy of Heaven—

Servility with freedom to contend,

170 As both their deeds compared this day shall prove.' To whom in brief thus Abdiel stern replied: 'Apostate! still thou errest, nor end wilt find Of erring, from the path of truth remote.

Unjustly thou depravest it with the name Of servitude, to serve whom God ordains, · Or Nature; God and Nature bid the same, When he who rules is worthiest, and excels Them whom he governs. This is servitude, To serve the unwise, or him who hath rebelled

180 Against his worthier, as thine now serve thee, Thyself not free, but to thyself enthralled; Yet lewdly darest our ministering upbraid. Reign thou in Hell—thy kingdom; let me serve In Heaven God ever blest, and his divine

185Behests obey, worthiest to be obeyed! Yet chains in Hell, not realms, expect; meanwhile, From me, returned, as erst thou saidst, from flight, This greeting on thy impious crest receive.' So saying, a noble stroke he lifted high,

Which hung not, but so swift with tempest fell 190 On the proud crest of Satan, that no sight, Nor motion of swift thought, less could his shield, Such ruin intercept. Ten paces huge

He back recoiled; the tenth on bended knee

195 His massy spear upstayed; as if on earth, Winds under ground, or waters forcing way, Sidelong had pushed a mountain from his seat, Half sunk with all his pines. Amazement seized The rebel Thrones, but greater rage, to see

Thus foiled their mightiest; ours joy filled, and shout, 200Presage of victory, and fierce desire. Of battle; whereat Michael bid sound The archangel trumpet; through the vast of Heaven It sounded, and the faithful armies rung

- 205 Hosanna to the Highest; nor stood at gaze
 The adverse legions, nor less hideous joined
 The horrid shock. Now storming fury rose,
 And clamour such as heard in Heaven till now
 Was never; arms on armour clashing brayed
- 210 Horrible discord, and the madding wheels
 Of brazen chariots raged; dire was the noise
 Of conflict; over head the dismal hiss
 Of fiery darts in flaming volleys flew,
 And, flying, vaulted either host with fire;
- 215 So under fiery cope together rushed
 Both battles main, with ruinous assault
 And inextinguishable rage. All Heaven
 Resounded, and, had Earth been then, all Earth
 Had to her centre shook. What wonder, when
- 220 Millions of fierce encountering Angels fought
 On either side, the least of whom could wield
 These elements, and arm him with the force
 Of all their regions! How much more of power
 Army against army numberless to raise
- 225 Dreadful combustion warring, and disturb,
 Though not destroy, their happy native seat!
 Had not the Eternal King Omnipotent,
 From his stronghold of Heaven, high overruled
 And limited their might; though numbered such
- 230 As each divided legion might have seemed
 A numerous host; in strength each armed hand
 A legion; led in fight, yet leader seemed
 Each warrior single, as in chief, expert
 When to advance, or stand, or turn the sway
- 235 Of battle, open when, and when to close
 The ridges of grim war. No thought of flight—
 None of retreat—no unbecoming deed
 That argued fear; each on himself relied,
 As only in his arm the moment lay
- 240 Of victory. Deeds of eternal fame
 Were done, but infinite; for wide was spread
 That war and various; sometimes on firm ground
 A standing fight; then, soaring on main wing,
 Tormented all the air; all air seemed then
- 245 Conflicting fire. Long time in even scale
 The battle hung; till Satan, who that day
 Prodigious power had shown, and met in arms
 No equal, ranging through the dire attack
 Of fighting Seraphim confused, at length

250 Saw where the sword of Michael smote, and felled Squadrons at once; with huge two-handed sway Brandished aloft, the horrid edge came down, Wide-wasting! Such destruction to withstand He hasted, and opposed the rocky orb

255 Of tenfold adamant, his ample shield,—
A vast circumference. At his approach,
The great Archangel from his warlike toil
Surceased; and, glad, as hoping here to end
Intestine war in Heaven, the Arch-foe subdued,

260 Or captive dragged in chains, with hostile frown And visage all inflamed, first thus began:

'Author of evil, unknown till thy revolt,
Unnamed in Heaven, now plenteous, as thou seest

These acts of hateful strife, hateful to all,

265 Though heaviest, by just measure, on thyself
And thy adherents; how hast thou disturbed
Heaven's blessed peace, and into Nature brought Misery, uncreated till the crime
Of thy rebellion! how hast thou instilled

Thy malice into thousands, once upright
And faithful—now proved false! But think not here
To trouble holy rest; Heaven casts thee out
From all her confines; Heaven, the seat of bliss,

Brooks not the works of violence and war.

275 Hence, then! and evil go with thee along,
Thy offspring, to the place of evil, Hell,
Thou and thy wicked crew! there mingle broils,
Ere this avenging sword begin thy doom,
Or some more sudden vengeance, winged from God,

280 Precipitate thee with augmented pain.'

So spake the prince of Angels; to whom thus The Adversary: 'Nor think thou with wind Of acry threats to awe whom yet with deeds Thou canst not. Hast thou turned the least of these

285 To flight; or if to fall, but that they rise
Unvanquished, easier to transact with me
That thou shouldst hope, imperious, and with threats
To chase me hence? Err not, that so shall end
The strife which thou callest evil, but we style

290 The strife of glory; which we mean to win,
Or turn this Heaven itself into the Hell
Thou fablest; here, however, to dwell free,
If not to reign. Meanwhile thy utmost force
(And join him named Almighty to thy aid)

I fly not, but have sought thee far and nigh.'
They ended parle, and both addressed for fight
Unspeakable; for who, though with the tongue
Of Angels, can relate, or to what things
Liken on earth conspicuous, that may lift

Human imagination to such height
Of godlike power? for likest gods they seemed,
Stood they or moved, in stature, motion, arms,—

Fit to decide the empire of great Heaven. Now waved their fiery swords, and in the air

305 Made horrid circles; two broad suns their shields
Blazed opposite, while expectation stood
In horror; from each hand with speed retired,
Where erst was thickest fight, the angelic throng,
And left large field, unsafe within the wind

310 Of such commotion; such as (to set forth Great things by small) if, Nature's concord broke, Among the constellations war were sprung, Two planets, rushing from aspect malign

Of fiercest opposition, in mid sky

Should combat, and their jarring spheres confound.
Together both, with next to almighty arm
Uplifted imminent, one stroke they aimed
That might determine, and not need repeat
As not of power at once; nor odds appeared

320 In might or swift prevention; but the sword Of Michael from the armoury of God Was given him tempered so, that neither keen, Nor solid, might resist that edge; it met The sword of Satan, with steep force to smite

Descending, and in half cut sheer; nor stayed,
But with swift wheel reverse, deep entering, shared
All his right side. Then Satan first knew pain,
And writhed him to and fro convolved; so sore
The griding sword with discontinuous wound

Passed through him; but the ethereal substance closed,
Not long divisible; and from the gash
A stream of nectarous humour issuing flowed
Sanguine, such as celestial Spirits may bleed,
And all his armour stained, erewhile so bright.

335 Forthwith on all sides to his aid was run
By angels many and strong, who interposed
Defence; while others bore him on their shields
Back to his chariot, where it stood retired
From off the files of war; there they him laid

340 Gnashing for anguish, and despite, and shame,
To find himself not matchless, and his pride
Humbled by such rebuke, so far beneath
His confidence to equal God in power.
Yet soon he healed; for Spirits that live throughout

Vital in every part, (not as frail man In entrails, heart or head, liver or reins,)
Cannot, but by annihilating, die;
Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound Receive, no more than can the fluid air.

All heart they live, all head, all eye, all ear,
All intellect, all sense; and, as they please,
They limb themselves, and colour, shape, or size
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare.

Meanwhile in other parts like deeds deserved

Memorial, where the might of Gabriel fought,)
And with fierce ensigns pierced the deep array
Of Moloch, furious king, who him defied,
And at his chariot-wheels to drag him bound
Threatened, nor from the Holy One of Heaven

360 Refrained his tongue blasphémous; but anon, Down cloven to the waist, with shattered arms And uncouth pain, fled bellowing. On each wing, Uriel, and Raphaël, his vaunting foe, Though huge, and in a rock of diamond armed,

365 Vanquished, Adramelech and Asmadai,
Two potent Thrones, that to be less than gods
Disdained, but meaner thoughts learned in their flight,
Mangled with ghastly wounds through plate and mail.
Nor stood unmindful Abdiel to annoy

370 The atheist crew, but with redoubled blow Ariel, and Arioch, and the violence Of Ramiel scorched and blasted, overthrew.

I might relate of thousands, and their names Etérnize here on earth; but those elect

375 Angels, contented with their fame in Heaven, Seek not the praise of men; the other sort, In might though wondrous and in acts of war, Nor of renown less eager, yet by doom Cancelled from Heaven and sacred memory,

380 Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell;
For strength, from truth divided and from just,
Illandable, nought merits but dispraise.
And ignominy; yet to glory aspires
Vain-glorious, and through infamy seeks fame;

385 Therefore eternal silence be their doom.

And now, their mightiest quelled, the battle swerved, With many an inroad gored; deformed rout Entered, and foul disorder; all the ground With shivered armour strown; and on a heap

390 Chariot and charioteer lay overturned,
And fiery-foaming steeds; what stood, recoiled
O'erwearied, through the faint Satanic host,
Defensive scarce; or, with pale fear surprised,
(Then first with fear surprised, and sense of pain,)

395 Fled ignominious—to such evil brought
By sin of disobedience, till that hour
Not liable to fear, or flight, or pain.
Far otherwise the inviolable Saints,
In cubic phalanx firm, advanced entire,

400 Invulnerable—impenetrably armed;
Such high advantages their innocence
Gave them above their foes—not to have sinned,
Not to have disobeyed—in fight they stood
Unwearied, unobnoxious to be pained

405 By wound, though from their place by violence moved.

Now Night her course began, and, over Heaven
Inducing darkness, grateful truce imposed,
And silence, on the odious din of war;
Under her cloudy covert both retired,

410 Victor and vanquished. On the foughten field Michaël and his Angels prevalent Encamping, placed in guard their watches round, Cherubic waving fires; on the other part, Satan, with his rebellious, disappeared,

415 Far in the dark dislodged; and, void of rest, His Potentates to council called by night; And, in the midst, thus undismayed began:

'O now in danger tried, now known in arms Not to be overpowered, companions dear!

420 Found worthy not of liberty alone,
Too mean pretence! but, what we more affect,
Honour, dominion, glory, and renown;
Who have sustained one day in doubtful fight
(And if one day, why not eternal days?)

425 What Heaven's Lord had powerfullest to send Against us from about his throne, and judged Sufficient to subdue us to his will,
But proves not so; then fallible, it seems,
Of future we may deem him, though till now

430 Omniscient thought. True is, less firmly armed,
Some disadvantage we endured, and pain
Till now not known, but, known, as soon contemned;
Since now we find this our empyreal form
Incapable of mortal injury,

435 Imperishable; and, though pierced with wound, Soon closing, and by native vigour healed. Of evil then so small, as easy think The remedy; perhaps more valid arms, Weapons more violent, when next we meet,

440 May serve to better us, and worse our foes;
Or equal what between us made the odds,
In nature none. If other hidden cause
Left them superior, while we can preserve
Unhurt our minds, and understanding sound,

445 Due search and consultation will disclose.'
He sat; and in the assembly next upstood
Nisroch, of Principalities the prime;
As one he stood escaped from cruel fight,
Sore toiled, his riven arms to havoc hewn,

450 And, cloudy in aspect, thus answering spake:
 'Deliverer from new Lords! leader to free
Enjoyment of our right as gods! yet hard
For gods, and too unequal work we find,
Against unequal arms to fight in pain,

Against unpained, impassive; from which evil
Ruin must needs ensue; for what avails
Valour or strength, though matchless, quelled with pain
Which all subdues, and makes remiss the hands
Of mightiest? Sense of pleasure we may well

460 Spare out of life perhaps, and not repine,
But live content, which is the calmest life;
But pain is perfect misery, the worst
Of evils, and, excessive, overturns
All patience. He who therefore can invent

465 With what more forcible we may offend
Our yet unwounded enemies, or arm
Ourselves with like defence, to me deserves
No less than for deliverance what we owe.'
Whereto, with look composed, Satan replied:

470 'Not uninvented that, which thou aright
Believest so main to our success, I bring.
Which of us who beholds the bright surface
Of this ethereous mould whereon we stand—
This continent of spacious Heaven, adorned

- With plant, fruit, flower ambrosial, gems, and gold—Whose eye so superficially surveys
 These things, as not to mind from whence they grow Deep under ground; materials dark and crude,
 Of spiritous and fiery spume, till touched
- 480 With Heaven's ray, and tempered, they shoot forth So beauteous, opening to the ambient light? These, in their dark nativity, the deep Shall yield us, pregnant with infernal flame; Which, into hellow engines, long and round,
- 485 Thick-rammed, at the other bore with touch of fire Dilated and infuriate, shall send forth From far, with thundering noise, among our focs Such implements of mischief, as shall dash To pieces, and o'erwhelm, whatever stands
- 490 Adverse, that they shall fear we have disarmed The Thunderer of his only dreaded bolt.

 Nor long shall be our labour; yet, ere dawn, Effect shall end our wish. Meanwhile revive; Abandon fear; to strength and counsel joined
- Think nothing hard, much less to be despaired.'

 He ended; and his words their drooping cheer
 Enlightened, and their languished hope revived;
 The invention all admired, and each, how he
 To be the inventor missed; so easy it seemed
- 500 Once found, which yet unfound most would have thought Impossible. Yet, haply, of thy race In future days, if malice should abound, Some one intent on mischief, or inspired With devilish machination, might devise
- 505 Like instrument to plague the sons of men For sin, on war and mutual slaughter bent. Forthwith from council to the work they flew; None arguing stood; innumerable hands Were ready; in a moment up they turned
- 510 Wide the celestial soil, and saw beneath
 The originals of nature in their crude
 Conception; sulphurous and nitrous foam
 They found, they mingled, and, with subtle art
 Concocted and adusted, they reduced
- 515 To blackest grain, and into store conveyed.
 Part hidden veins digged up (nor hath this earth Entrails unlike) of mineral and stone,
 Whereof to found their engines, and their balls
 Of missive ruin; part incentive reed

520 Provide, pernicious with one touch to fire. So all, ere day-spring, under conscious night, Secret they finished, and in order set, With silent circumspection, unespied.

Now when fair Morn orient in Heaven appeared,

525Up rose the victor-angels, and to arms The matin trumpet sung; in arms they stood Of golden panoply, refulgent host; Soon banded; others from the dawning hills Looked round, and scouts each coast light-armed scour,—

530 Each quarter—to descry the distant foe, Where lodged, or whither fled, or if for fight, In motion or in halt; him soon they met Under spread ensigns moving nigh, in slow But firm battalion. Back with speediest sail,

535Zophiel, of Cherubim the swiftest wing, Came flying, and in mid air aloud thus cried: 'Arm, warriors—arm for fight! the foe at hand, Whom fled we thought, will save us long pursuit This day; fear not his flight; so thick a cloud

540He comes, and settled in his face I see Sad resolution, and secure. Let each His adamantine coat gird well, and each Fit well his helm, gripe fast his orbed shield, Borne even, or high; for this day will pour down, 545If I conjecture aught, no drizzling shower, But rattling storm of arrows barbed with fire.' So warned he them, aware themselves; and soon In order, quit of all impediment,

Instant without disturb they took alarm,

550And onward moved embattled; when, behold! Not distant far with heavy pace the foe Approaching gross and huge, in hollow cube Training his devilish enginery, impaled On every side with shadowing squadrons deep,

At interview both stood 555 To hide the fraud. Awhile; but suddenly at head appeared Satan, and thus was heard commanding loud: 'Vanguard! to right and left the front unfold;

That all may see, who hate us, how we seek

Peace and composure, and, with open breast, 560 Stand ready to receive them, if they like Our overture, and turn not back perverse; But that I doubt; however, witness Heaven! Heaven, witness thou anon, while we discharge

- 565 Freely our part! Ye, who appointed stand,
 Do as you have in charge, and briefly touch
 What we propound, and loud that all may hear.'
 So scoffing in ambiguous words, he scarce
 Had ended; when to right and left the front
- 570 Divided, and to either flank retired.
 Which to our eyes discovered, new and strange,
 A triple mounted row of pillars laid
 On wheels, (for like to pillars most they seemed,
 Or hollowed bodies made of oak or fir,
- 575 With branches lopt, in wood or mountain felled,) Brass, iron, stony mould, had not their mouths
 With hideous orifice gaped on us wide,
 Portending hollow truce. At each behind
 A seraph stood, and in his hand a reed
- 580 Stood waving tipt with fire; while we, suspense, Collected stood within our thoughts amuşed;
 Not long, for sudden all, at once, their reeds,
 Put forth, and to a narrow vent applied
 With nicest touch. Immediate in a flame,
- 585 But soon obscured with smoke, all Heaven appeared,
 From those deep-throated engines belched, whose roar
 Embowelled with outrageous noise the air,
 And all her entrails tore, disgorging foul
 Their devilish glut, chained thunderbolts, and hail
- 590 Of iron globes; which, on the victor host
 Levelled, with such impetuous fury smote,
 That, whom they hit, none on their feet might stand,
 Though standing else as rocks; but down they fell
 By thousands—Angel on Archangel rolled—
- 595 The sooner for their arms; unarmed, they might Have easily, as Spirits, evaded swift By quick contraction, or remove; but now Foul dissipation followed and forced rout; Nor served it to relax their serried files.
- 600 What should they do? If on they rushed, repulse Repeated, and indecent overthrow Doubled, would render them yet more despised, And to their foes a laughter; for, in view Stood ranked of Seraphim another row,
- 605 In posture to displode their second tire
 Of thunder; back defeated to return
 They worse abhorred. Satan beheld their plight,
 And to his mates thus in derision called:
 - 'O friends! why come not on these victors proud?

610 Erewhile they fierce were coming; and when we,
To entertain them fair with open front
And breast, (what could we more?) propounded terms
Of composition, straight they changed their minds,
Flew off, and into strange vagaries fell,

Somewhat extravagant and wild; perhaps
For joy of offered peace; but I suppose,
If our proposals once again were heard,
We should compel them to a quick result.'

620 To whom thus Belial, in like gamesome mood:

'Leader! the terms we sent were terms of weight,
Of hard contents, and full of force urged home;
Such as, we might perceive, amused them all,
And stumbled many; who receives them right,

625 Had need from head to foot well understand;
Not understood (this gift they have besides,)
They show us when our foes walk not upright.'
So they among themselves in pleasant vein

Stood scoffing, heightened in their thoughts beyond
All doubt of victory; Eternal Might
To match with their inventions they presumed

So easy, and of his thunder made a scorn, And all his host derided, while they stood Awhile in trouble; but they stood not long;

Rage prompted them at length, and found them arms
Against such hellish mischief fit to oppose.
Forthwith (behold the excellence, the power,
Which God hath in his mighty Angels placed!)
Their arms away they threw, and to the hills,

640 (For Earth hath this variety from Heaven
Of pleasure situate in hill and dale,)
Light as the lightning glimpse, they ran—they flew;
From their foundations, loosening to and fro,
They plucked the seated hills, with all their load—

645 Rocks, waters, woods, and, by the shaggy tops
Uplifting, bore them in their hands. Amaze,
Be sure, and terror, seized the rebel host,
When, coming towards them, so dread they saw
The bottom of the mountains upward turned;

C50 Till on those cursed engines' triple row
They saw them whelmed, and all their confidence
Under the weight of mountains buried deep;
Themselves invaded next, and on their heads
Main promontories flung, which in the air

Came shadowing, and oppressed whole legions armed.
Their armour helped their harm, crushed in and bruised
Into their substance pent, which wrought them pain
Implacable, and many a dolorous groan,
Long struggling underneath, ere they could wind

Out of such prison, though spirits of purest light— Purest at first, now gross by sinning grown. The rest, in imitation, to like arms Betook them, and the neighbouring hills uptore; So hills amid the air encountered hills,

665 Hurled to and fro with jaculation dire,
That under ground they fought in dismal shade;
Infernal noise! war seemed a civil game
To this uproar; horrid confusion heaped
Upon confusion rose. And now all Heaven

Had gone to wrack, with ruin overspread, Had not the Almighty Father, where he sits Shrined in his sanctuary of Heaven secure, Consulting on the sum of things, foreseen This tumult, and permitted all, advised;

That his great purpose he might so fulfil,
To honour his anointed Son, avenged
Upon his enemies, and to declare
All power on him transferred; whence to his Son,
The Assessor of his throne; he thus began:

'Effulgence of my glory, Son beloved!
Son, in whose face invisible is beheld
Visibly, what by Deity I am,
And in whose hand what by decree I do,
Second Omnipotence! two days are past

685 (Two days, as we compute the days of Heaven) Since Michael, and his Powers, went forth to tame These disobedient; sore hath been their fight, As likeliest was, when two such foes met armed; For to themselves I left them; and, thou knowest,

690 Equal in their creation they were formed,
Save what sin hath impaired? which yet hath wrought
Insensibly, for I suspend their doom;
Whence in perpetual fight they needs must last
Endless, and no solution will be found.

695 War wearied hath performed what war can do,
And to disordered rage let loose the reins,
With mountains, as with weapons, armed; which makes
Wild work in Heaven, and dangerous to the main.
Two days are therefore past, the third is thine;

- 700 For thee I have ordained it, and thus far
 Have suffered, that the glory may be thine
 Of ending this great war, since none but thou
 Can end it. Into thee such virtue and grace
 Immense I have transfused, that all may know
- 705 In Heaven and Hell thy power above compare;
 And this perverse commotion governed thus,
 To manifest thee worthiest to be Heir
 Of all things, to be Heir, and to be King
 By sacred unction, thy deserved right.
- 710 Go then, thou Mightiest! in thy Father's might;
 Ascend my chariot, guide the rapid wheels
 That shake Heaven's basis, bring forth all my war,
 My bow and thunder, my almighty arms
 Gird on, and sword upon thy puissant thigh;
- 715 Pursue these sons of darkness; drive them out From all Heaven's bounds into the utter deep; There let them learn, as likes them, to despise God, and Messiah his anointed King.'

He said, and on his Son with rays direct

720 Shone full; he all his Father full expressed Ineffably into his face received;
And thus the filial Godhead answering spake:

'O Father! O Supreme of heavenly Thrones! First, Highest, Holiest, Best! Thou always seekest

- 725 To glorify thy Son, I always thee,
 As is most just; this I my glory account,
 My exaltation, and my whole delight,
 That thou in me, well pleased, declarest thy will Fulfilled, which to fulfil is all my bliss.
- 730 Sceptre and power, thy giving, I assume;
 And gladlier shall resign, when in the end
 Thou shalt be all in all, and I in thee
 For ever; and in me all whom thou lovest.
 But whom thou hatest, I hate, and can put on
- 735 Thy terrors, as I put thy mildness on,
 Image of thee in all things; and shall soon,
 Armed with thy might, rid Heaven of these rebelled,
 To their prepared ill mansion driven down,
 To chains of darkness, and the undying worm;
- 740 That from thy just obedience could revolt,
 Whom to obey is happiness entire.
 Then shall thy Saints unmixed, and from the impure
 Far separate, circling thy holy mount,
 Unfeigned hallelujahs to thee sing,

- 745 Hymns of high praise, and I among them chief.'
 So said, he, o'er his sceptre bowing, rose
 From the right hand of Glory where he sat;
 And the third sacred morn began to shine,
 Dawning through Heaven. Forth rushed with whirlwind sound
- 750 The chariot of paternal Deity,
 Flashing thick flames, wheel within wheel undrawn,
 Itself instinct with spirit, but convoyed
 By four cherubic shapes; four faces each
 Had wondrous; as with stars, their bodies all,
- 755 And wings, were set with eyes; with eyes the wheels Of beryl, and careering fires between.

 Over their heads a crystal firmament,

 Whereon a sapphire throne, inlaid with pure Amber, and colours of the showery arch.
- 760 He, in celestial panoply all armed
 Of radiant Urim, work divinely wrought,
 Ascended; at his right hand Victory
 Sat eagle-winged; beside him hung his bow
 And quiver with three-bolted thunder stored;
- 765 And from about him fierce effusion rolled
 Of smoke, and bickering flame, and sparkles dire.
 Attended with ten thousand thousand Saints,
 He onward came; far off his coming shone;
 And twenty thousand (I their number heard)
- 770 Chariots of God, half on each hand, were seen.
 He on the wings of Cherub rode sublime
 On the crystalline sky, in sapphire throned,
 Illustrious far and wide, but by his own
 First seen; them unexpected joy surprised,
- 775 When the great ensign of Messiah blazed Aloft, by angels borne—his sign in Heaven; Under whose conduct Michael soon reduced His army, circumfused on either wing, Under their Head embodied all in one.
- 780 Before him Power Divine his way prepared;
 At his command the uprooted hills retired
 Each to his place; they heard his voice, and went Obsequious; Heaven his wonted face renewed,
 And with fresh flowerets hill and valley smiled.
- 785 This saw his hapless foes, but stood obdured,
 And to rebellious fight rallied their powers,
 Insensate hope conceiving from despair.
 In heavenly Spirits could such perverseness dwell?

But to convince the proud what signs avail,
790 Or wonders move the obdurate to relent?
They, hardened more by what might most reclaim,
Grieving to see his glory, at the sight
Took envy; and, aspiring to his height,
Stood re-embattled fierce, by force or fraud

795 Weening to prosper, and at length prevail
Against God and Messiah, or to fall
In universal ruin last; and now
To final battle drew, disdaining flight,
Or faint retreat; when the great Son of God

To all his host on either hand thus spake:

'Stand still, in bright array, ye Saints! here stand,
Ye angels armed! this day from battle rest;
Faithful hath been your warfare, and of God
Accepted, fearless in his righteous cause;

805 And as ye have received, so have ye done Invincibly. But of this cursed crew The punishment to other hand belongs; Vengcance is his, or whose he sole appoints. Number to this day's work is not ordained,

810 Nor multitude; stand only, and behold God's indignation on these godless poured By me. Not you, but me, they have despised, Yet envied; against me is all their rage, Because the Father, to whom in Heaven supreme

Kingdom, and power, and glory appertains,
Hath honoured me according to his will.
Therefore to me their doom he hath assigned;
That they may have their wish, to try with me
In battle which the stronger proves, they all,

820 Or I alone against them; since by strength
They measure all, of other excellence
Not emulous, nor care who them excels;
Nor other strife with them do I vouchsafe.'
So spake the Son; and into terror changed

825 His countenance, too severe to be beheld,
And full of wrath bent on his enemies.
At once the Four spread out their starry wings
With dreadful shade contiguous; and the orbs
Of his fierce chariot rolled, as with the sound

830 Of torrent floods, or of a numerous host. He on his impious foes right onward drove, Gloomy as night; under his burning wheels The steadfast Empyrean shook throughout,

- All but-the throne itself of God. Full soon
 835. Among them he arrived, in his right hand
 Grasping ten thousand thunders, which he sent
 Before him, such as in their souls infixed
 Plagues; they, astonished, all resistance lost,
 All courage; down their idle weapons dropt;
- O'er shields, and helms, and helmèd heads he rode
 Of Thrones and mighty Seraphim prostrate,
 That wished the mountains now might be again
 Thrown on them, as a shelter from his ire.
 Nor less, on either side, tempestnous fell
- 845 His arrows, from the fourfold-visaged Four,
 Distinct with eyes, and from the living wheels
 Distinct alike with multitude of eyes;
 One spirit in them ruled; and every eye
 Glared lightning, and shot forth pernicious fire
- Among the accursed, that withered all their strength,
 And of their wonted vigour left them drained—
 Exhausted—spiritless—afflicted—fallen!
 Yet half his strength he put not forth, but checked
 His thunder in mid volley; for he meant
- 855 Not to destroy, but root them out of Heaven.
 The overthrown he raised; and, as a herd
 Of goats or timorous flock together thronged,
 Drove them before him thunder-struck, pursued
 With terrors and with furies, to the bounds
- 860 And crystal wall of Heaven; which, opening wide,
 Rolled inward, and a spacious gap disclosed
 Into the wasteful deep; the monstrous sight
 Struck them with horror backward; but far worse
 Urged them behind; headlong themselves they threw
- 865 Down from the verge of Heaven; eternal wrath
 Burned after them to the bottomless pit.
 Hell heard the insufferable noise Hell saw
 Heaven ruining from Heaven, and would have fled
- Affrighted; but strict Fate had cast too deep
 Her dark foundations, and too fast had bound.
 Nine days they fell; confounded Chaos roared,
 And felt tenfold confusion in their fall

Through his wild anarchy; so huge a rout Incumbered him with ruin; Hell at last 875 Yawning received them whole, and on them closed;—Hell, their fit habitation, fraught with fire Unquenchable, the house of woe and pain.

Disburdened Heaven rejoiced, and soon repaired

Her mural breach, returning whence it rolled.

Sole victor, from the expulsion of his foes,
Messiah his triumphal chariot turned.

To meet him all his saints, who silent stood
Eye-witnesses of his almighty acts,
With jubilee advanced; and, as they went,

Shaded with branching palm, each order bright,
Sung triumph, and him sung victorious King,
Son, Heir, and Lord! to him dominion given,
Worthiest to reign. He, celebrated, rode Triumphant through mid Heaven, into the courts

And temple of his mighty Father throned
On high! who into glory him received,
Where now he sits at the right hand of bliss.
Thus, measuring things in Heaven by things on Earth,

At thy request, and that thou mayest beware By what is past, to thee I have revealed

What might have else to human race been hid; The discord which befell, and war in Heaven Among the angelic Powers, and the deep fall Of those too high aspiring, who rebelled

900 With Satan:—he, who envies now thy state, Who now is plotting how he may seduce Thee also from obedience, that, with him Bereaved of happiness, thou mayest partake His punishment, eternal misery;

905 Which would be all his solace and revenge,
As a despite done against the Most High,
Thee once to gain companion of his woe.
But listen not to his temptations; warn
Thy weaker; let it profit thee to have heard,

910 By terrible example, the reward Of disobedience. Firm they might have stood, Yet fell. Remember! and fear to transgress."

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK VII.

THE ARGUMENT.

Raphael, at the request of Adam, relates how and wherefore this world was first created; that God, after the expelling of Satan and his Angels out of Heaven, declared his pleasure to create another world, and other creatures to dwell therein; sends his Son with glory, and attendance of Angels, to perform the work of creation in six days; the Angels celebrate with hymns the performance thereof, and his re-ascension into Heaven.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK VII.

ESCEND from Heaven, Urania! by that name If rightly thou art called, whose voice divine Following, above the Olympian hill I soar,

Above the flight of Pegasean wing.

The meaning, not the name, I call; for thou
Nor of the Muses nine, nor on the top
Of old Olympus dwellest; but, heavenly-born,
Before the hills appeared or fountain flowed,
Thou with eternal Wisdom didst converse.

10 Wisdom thy sister, and with her didst play In presence of the Almighty Father, pleased With thy celestial song. Up led by thee Into the Heaven of Heavens I have presumed, An earthly guest, and drawn empyreal air,

Thy tempering; with like safety guided down Return me to my native element;
Lest from this flying steed unreined, (as once Bellerophon, though from a lower clime)
Dismounted, on the Aleian field I fall,

20 Erroneous there to wander, and forlorn. Half yet remains unsung, but narrower bound Within the visible diurnal sphere. Standing on earth, not rapt above the pole,

13

40

More safe I sing with mortal voice, unchanged
To hoarse or mute, though fallen on evil days,
On evil days though fallen, and evil tongues,
In darkness, and with dangers compassed round,
And solitude; yet not alone, while thou
Visitest my slumbers nightly, or when morn

30 Purples the east. Still govern thou my song, Urania! and fit audience find though few.
But drive far off the barbarous dissonance
Of Bacchus and his revellers, the race
Of that wild rout that tore the Thracian bard

35 In Rhodope, where woods and rocks had ears
To rapture, till the savage clamour drowned
Both harp and voice; nor could the Muse defend
Her son. So fail not thou, who thee implores;
For thou art heavenly, she an empty dream.

Say, Goddess, what ensued when Raphael, The affable Archangel, had forewarned Adam by dire example to beware Apostasy, by what befell in Heaven To those apostates, lest the like befall

45 In Paradise to Adam or his race, Charged not to touch the interdicted tree, If they transgress, and slight that sole command, So easily obeyed, amid the choice Of all tastes else to please their appetite,

50 Though wandering. He with his consorted Eve
The story heard attentive, and was filled
With admiration and deep muse, to hear
Of things so high and strange, things to their thought
So unimaginable as hate in Heaven,

And war so near the peace of God in bliss,
With such confusion; but the evil, soon
Driven back, redounded as a flood on those
From whom it sprung, impossible to mix
With blessedness. Whence Adam soon repealed

60 The doubts that in his heart arose; and now Lcd on, yet sinless, with desire to know What nearer might concern him, how this world Of heaven and earth conspicuous first began, When, and whereof created, for what cause,

65 What within Eden, or without was done Before his memory,—as one, whose drouth Yet scarce allayed, still eyes the current stream, Whose liquid murmur heard new thirst excites,— Proceeded thus to ask his heavenly guest:

70 "Great things, and full of wonder in our ears,
Far differing from this world, thou hast revealed,
Divine interpreter, by favour sent
Down from the Empyrean to forewarn
Us timely of what might else have been our loss,

75 Unknown, which human knowledge could not reach; For which to the infinitely Good we owe Immortal thanks, and his admonishment Receive with solemn purpose to observe Immutably his sovran will, the end

80 Of what we are. But since thou hast vouchsafed Gently for our instruction to impart Things above earthly thought, which yet concerned Our knowing, as to highest Wisdom seemed,
Deign to descend now lower, and relate

What may no less perhaps avail us known;
How first began this heaven, which we behold
Distant so high, with moving fires adorned
Innumerable, and this which yields or fills
All space, the ambient air wide interfused,

90 Embracing round this florid earth; what cause Moved the Creator, in his holy rest Through all eternity, so late to build In Chaos, and, the work begun, how soon Absolved; if unforbid thou mayest unfold

95 What we not to explore the secrets ask
Of his eternal empire, but the more
To magnify his works, the more we know.
And the great light of day yet wants to run
Much of his race though steep. Suspense in heaven,

Held by thy voice, thy potent voice, he hears,
And longer will delay to hear thee tell
His generation, and the rising birth
Of Nature from the unapparent deep;
Or if the star of evening and the moon

105 Haste to thy audience, Night with her will bring Silence, and Sleep listening to thee will watch; Or we can bid his absence, till thy song End, and dismiss thee ere the morning shine."

Thus Adam his illustrious guest besought;

110 And thus the godlike Angel answered mild:

"This also thy request, with caution asked,
Obtain; though to recount almighty works
What words or tongue of Seraph can suffice.

- Or heart of man suffice to comprehend?
 Yet what thou canst attain, which best may serve
 To glorify the Maker, and infer
 Thee also happier, shall not be withheld
 Thy hearing; such commission from above
 I have received, to answer thy desire
- 120 Of knowledge within bounds; beyond abstain
 To ask, nor let thine own inventions hope
 Things not revealed, which the invisible King.
 Only omniscient, hath suppressed in night,
 To none communicable in earth or Heaven.
- 125 Enough is left besides to search and know.
 But Knowledge is as food, and needs no less
 Her temperance over appetite, to know
 In measure what the mind may well contain;
 Oppresses else with surfeit, and soon turns
- 130 Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind.

 Know then, that, after Lucifer from Heaven
 (So call him, brighter once amidst the host Of Angels, than that star the stars among)
 Fell with his flaming legions through the deep
- 135 Into his place, and the great Son returned Victorious with his Saints, the Omnipotent Eternal Father from his throne beheld Their multitude, and to his Son thus spake:

 'At least our envious foe hath failed, who thought
- 140 All like himself rebellious, by whose aid
 This inaccessible high strength, the seat
 Of Deity supreme, us dispossessed,
 He trusted to have seized, and into fraud
 Drew many, whom their place knows here no more.
- 145 Yet far the greater part have kept, I see,
 Their station; Heaven, yet populous, retains Numbers sufficient to possess her realms
 Though wide, and this high temple to frequent
 With ministeries due, and solemn rites.
- 150 But, lest his heart exalt him in the harm Already done, to have dispeopled Heaven— My damage fondly deemed,—I can repair That detriment, if such it be to lose Self-lost, and in a moment will create
- 155 Another world, out of one man a race
 Of men innumerable, there to dwell,
 Not here, till, by degrees of merit raised,
 They open to themselves at length the way

Up hither, under long obedience tried,
And Earth be changed to Heaven, and Heaven to Earth,
One kingdom, joy, and union, without end.
Meanwhile inhabit lax, ye Powers of Heaven!
And thou, my Word, begotten Son! by thee
This I perform; speak thou, and be it done!

165 My overshadowing Spirit and might with thee I send along; ride forth, and bid the deep Within appointed bounds be heaven and earth; Boundless the deep, because I am who fill Infiniteder now recovers the space.

Infinitude; nor vacuous the space,

170 Though I uncircumscribed myself retire,
And put not forth my goodness, which is free
To act or not. Necessity and Chance
Approach not me, and what I will is fate.'

So spake the Almighty, and to what he spake
His Word, the Filial Godhead, gave effect.
Immediate are the acts of God, more swift
Than time or motion, but to human ears
Cannot without process of speech be told,

So told as earthly notion can receive.

Great triumph and rejoicing was in Heaven
When such was heard declared the Almighty's will.
Glory they sung to the Most High, good will
To future men, and in their dwellings peace—
Glory to Him, whose just avenging ire

185 Had driven out the ungodly from his sight
And the habitations of the just; to Him
Glory and praise, whose wisdom had ordained
Good out of evil to create—instead
Of Spirits malign, a better race to bring

190 Into their vacant room, and thence diffuse
His good to worlds and ages infinite!

So sang the Hierarchies. Meanwhile the Son On his great expedition now appeared, Girt with omnipotence, with radiance crowned

195 Of majesty divine, sapience and love Immense, and all his Father in him shone. About his chariot numberless were poured Cherub and Seraph, Potentates and Thrones, And Virtues, winged Spirits, and chariots winged

200 From the armoury of God, where stand of old Myriads, between two brazen mountains lodged Against a solemn day, harnessed at hand, Celestial equipage; and now came forth Spontaneous, for within them Spirit lived,
Attendant on their Lord. Heaven opened wide
Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound
On golden hinges moving, to let forth
The King of Glory, in his powerful Word
And Spirit coming to create new worlds.

On heavenly ground they stood, and from the shore They viewed the vast immeasurable abyss Outrageous as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild, Up from the bottom turned by furious winds, And surging waves, as mountains, to assault

215 Heaven's height, and with the centre mix the pole.

'Silence, ye troubled Waves, and thou Deep, peace!'
Said then the Omnific Word; 'your discord end!'
Nor stayed; but, on the wings of Cherubim
Uplifted, in paternal glory rode

220 Far into Chaos, and the world unborn;
For Chaos heard his voice. Him all his train
Followed in bright procession, to behold
Creation, and the wonders of his might.
Then stayed the fervid wheels; and in his hand

225 He took the golden compasses, prepared In God's eternal store, to circumscribe This universe, and all created things.

One foot he centred, and the other turned Round through the vast profundity obscure,

230 And said, 'Thus far extend—thus far thy bounds—This be thy just circumference, O world!'
Thus God the heaven created, thus the earth,—
Matter unformed and void. Darkness profound
Covered the abyss; but on the watery calm

235 His brooding wings the Spirit of God outspread,
And vital virtue infused, and vital warmth,
Throughout the fluid mass, but downward purged
The black, tartareous, cold, infernal dregs,
Adverse to life; then founded, then conglobed

240 Like things to like, the rest to several place
Disparted, and between spun out the air,
And Earth, self-balanced, on her centre hung.
Let there be Light,' said God; and forthwith Light

Ethereal, first of things, quintessence pure,
Sprung from the deep; and from her native east
To journey through the aery gloom began,
Sphered in a radiant cloud, for yet the sun
Was not; she in a cloudy tabernacle

Sojourned the while. God saw the Light was good;
And light from darkness by the hemisphere
Divided; Light the Day, and Darkness Night
He named. Thus was the first Day even and morn;
Nor passed uncelebrated, nor unsung
By the celestial choirs, when orient light

255 Exhaling first from darkness they beheld—
Birthday of Heaven and Earth! with joy and shout
The hollow universal orb they filled,
And touched their golden harps, and hymning praised
God and his works; Creator him they sung,

260 Both when first evening was, and when first morn.

Again, God said, 'Let there be firmament Amid the waters, and let it divide The waters from the waters!' and God made The firmament, expanse of liquid, pure,

265 Transparent, elemental air, diffused
In circuit to the uttermost convex
Of this great round—partition firm and sure,
The waters underneath from those above
Dividing; for as earth, so he the world

270 Built on circumfluous waters calm, in wide Crystalline ocean, and the loud misrule Of Chaos far removed, lest fierce extremes Contiguous might distemper the whole frame; Aud Heaven he named the firmament. So even 275 And morning chorus sung the second Day.

The earth was formed, but, in the womb as yet
Of waters, embryon immature, involved,
Appeared not; over all the face of earth
Main ocean flowed, not idle, but, with warm

280 Prolific humour softening all her globe, Fermented the great mother to conceive, Satiate with genial moisture; when God said 'Be gathered now, ye waters under heaven, Into one place, and let dry land appear!'

285 Immediately the mountains huge appear Emergent, and their broad bare backs upheave Into the clouds; their tops ascend the sky. So high as heaved the tumid hills, so low Down sunk a hollow bottom, broad and deep,

290 Capacious bed of waters; thither they
Hasted with glad precipitance, uprolled,
As drops on dust conglobing from the dry;
Part rise in crystal wall, or ridge direct,

For haste; such flight the great command impressed
On the swift floods; as armies, at the call
Of trumpet (for of armies thou hast heard,)
Troop to their standard, so the watery throng,
Wave rolling after wave, where way they found,
If steep, with torrent rapture, if through plain,

300 Soft-ebbing; nor withstood them rock or hill;
But they, or under ground, or circuit wide
With serpent error wandering, found their way,
And on the washy ooze deep channels wore;
Easy, ere God had bid the ground be dry,

305 All but within those banks, where rivers now Stream, and perpetual draw their humid train.

The dry land, Earth, and the great receptacle Of congregated waters, he called Seas;

And saw that it was good, and said, 'Let the Earth

310) Put forth the verdant grass, herb yielding seed,
And fruit-tree yielding fruit after her kind,
Whose seed is in herself upon the Earth!'
He scarce had said, when the bare Earth, till then
Desert and bare, unsightly, unadorned,

315 Brought forth the tender grass, whose verdure clad Her universal face with pleasant green; Then herbs of every leaf, that sudden flowered, Opening their various colours, and made gay Her bosom, smelling sweet; and, these scarce blown,

320 Forth flourished thick the clustering vine, forth crept
The smelling gourd, up stood the corny reed
Embattled in her field; add the humble shrub,
And bush with frizzled hair implicit; last,
Rose, as in dance, the stately trees, and spread

Their branches hung with copious fruit, or gemmed
Their blossoms; with high woods the hills were crowned,
With tufts the valleys, and each fountain-side,
With borders long the rivers; that Earth now
Seemed like to Heaven, a seat where Gods might dwell,

330 Or wander with delight, and love to haunt
Her sacred shades; though God had yet not rained
Upon the Earth, and man to till the ground
None was, but from the earth a dewy mist
Went up, and watered all the ground, and each

Plant of the field, which, ere it was in the earth, God made, and every herb, before it grew On the green stem. God saw that it was good; So even and morn recorded the third Day.

Again the Almighty spake, 'Let there be Lights
340 High in the expanse of Heaven, to divide
The day from night; and let them be for signs,
For seasons, and for days, and circling years;
And let them be for lights, as I ordain
Their office in the firmament of heaven,

345 To give light on the earth! and it was so.
And God made two great Lights, (great, for their use
To man,) the greater to have rule by day
The less by night, altern; and made the Stars,
And set them in the firmament of heaven

350 To illuminate the earth, and rule the day
In their vicissitude, and rule the night,
And light from darkness to divide. God saw,
Surveying his great work, that it was good;
For, of celestial bodies, first the Sun

355 A mighty sphere he framed, unlightsome first,
Though of ethereal mould; then formed the Moon
Globose, and every magnitude of stars,
And sowed with stars the heaven thick as a field.

Of light by far the greater part he took,

300 Transplanted from her cloudy shrine, and placed In the Sun's orb, made porous to receive And drink the liquid light, firm to retain Her gathered beams,—great palace now of light. Hither, as to their fountain, other stars

365 Repairing, in their golden urns draw light,
And hence the morning planet gilds her horns;
By tincture or reflection they augment
Their small peculiar, though, from human sight
So far remote, with diminution seen.

370 First in his east the glorious lamp was seen,
Regent of day, and all the horizon round
Invested with bright rays, jouund to run
His longitude through heaven's high road; the grey
Dawn, and the Pleiades, before him danced,

375 Shedding sweet influence. Less bright the Moon, But opposite in levelled west, was set, His mirror, with full face borrowing her light From him; for other light she needed none In that aspect, and still that distance keeps

380 Till night; then in the east her turn she shines, Revolved on heaven's great axle, and her reign With thousand lesser lights dividual holds, With thousand thousand stars, that then appeared Spangling the hemisphere. Then first adorned
With their bright luminaries, that set and rose,
Glad evening and glad morn crowned the fourth Day.
And God said, 'Let the waters generate
Reptile with spawn abundant, living soul;

And let fowl fly above the earth, with wings
390 Displayed on the open firmament of heaven!'
And God created the great whales, and each
Soul living, each that crept, which plenteously
The waters generated by their kinds;

And every bird of wing after his kind;

395 And saw that it was good, and blessed them, saying:
'Be fruitful, multiply, and, in the seas,
And lakes, and running streams, the waters fill;
And let the fowl be multiplied on the earth!'
Forthwith the sounds and seas, each creek and bay,

400 With fry innumerable swarm, and shoals
Of fish that with their fins, and shining scales,
Glide under the green wave, in sculls that oft
Bank the mid sea; part single, or with mate,
Graze the sea-weed their pasture and through of

Graze the sea-weed their pasture, and through groves
Of coral stray; or sporting with quick glance,
Show to the sun their waved coats dropt with gold;

Or, in their pearly shells at ease, attend Moist nutriment; or, under rocks, their food In jointed armour watch; on smooth the seal

'410 And bended dolphins play; part, huge of bulk, Wallowing unwieldy, enormous in their gait, Tempest the ocean; there leviathan, Hugest of living creatures, on the deep Stretched like a promontory, sleeps or swims,

And seems a moving land, and at his gills
Draws in, and at his trunk spouts out, a sea.

Meanwhile the tepid caves, and fens, and shores,
Their brood as numerous hatch, from the egg, that soon,
Bursting with kindly rupture, forth disclosed

420 Their callow young; but feathered soon and fledge
They summed their pens, and, soaring the air sublime,
With clang despised the ground, under a cloud
In prospect. There the eagle and the stork
On cliffs and cedar-tops their cyrics build.

425 Part loosely wing the region; part, more wise, In common, ranged in figure, wedge their way, Intelligent of seasons, and set forth Their aery carayan, high over seas

- Flying, and over lands, with mutual wing

 Easing their flight; so steers the prudent crane
 Her annual voyage, borne on winds; the air
 Floats as they pass, fanned with unnumbered plames.
 From branch to branch the smaller birds with song
 Solaced the woods, and spread their painted wings
- 435 Till even, nor then the solemn nightingale
 Ceased warbling, but all night tuned her soft lays.
 Others, on silver lakes and rivers, bathed
 Their downy breast; the swan, with archèd neck
 Between her white wings mantling proudly, rows
- 440 Her state with oary feet; yet oft they quit
 The dank, and, rising on stiff pennons, tower
 The mid aerial sky. Others on ground
 Walked firm; the crested cock, whose clarion sounds
 The silent hours, and the other, whose gay train
- 44.5 Adorns him, coloured with the florid hue
 Of rainbows and starry eyes. The waters thus
 With fish replenished, and the air with fowl,
 Evening and morn solémnized the fifth Day.
 The sixth, and of Creation last, arose
- 450 With evening harps and matin; when God said,

 'Let the earth bring forth soul living in her kind,
 Cattle, and creeping things, and beast of the earth,
 Each in their kind!' The Earth obeyed, and straight
 Opening her fertile womb, teemed at a birth
- 4.55 Innumerous living creatures, perfect forms,
 Limbed and full-grown. Out of the ground up rose,
 As from his lair, the wild beast, where he wons
 In forest wild, in thicket, brake, or den;
 Among the trees in pairs they rose, they walked;
- 460 The cattle in the fields and meadows green;
 Those rare and solitary, these in flocks
 Pasturing at once, and in broad herds upsprung.
 The grassy clods now calved; now half appeared
 The tawny lion, pawing to get free
- 465 His hinder parts, then springs, as broke from bonds,
 And rampant shakes his brinded mane; the ounce,
 The libbard, and the tiger, as the mole
 Rising, the crumbled earth above them threw
 In hillocks; the swift stag from underground
- 470 Bore up his branching head; scarce from his mould, Behemeth, biggest born of earth, upheaved His vastness; fleeced the flocks and bleating rose, As plants; ambiguous between sea and land,

The river-horse, and scaly crocodile.

At once came forth whatever creeps the ground,
Insect or worm. Those waved their limber fans
For wings, and smallest lineaments exact
In all the liveries decked of summer's pride,
With spots of gold and purple, azure and green;

480 These, as a line, their long dimension drew,
Streaking the ground with sinuous trace; not all
Minims of nature; some of serpent kind,
Wondrous in length and corpulence, involved
Their snaky folds, and added wings. First crept

485 The parsimonious emmet, provident
Of future, in small room large heart enclosed,
Pattern of just equality perhaps
Hereafter, joined in her popular tribes
Of commonalty. Swarming next appeared

490 The female bee, that feeds her husband drone
Deliciously, and builds her waxen cells
With honey stored. The rest are numberless,
And thou their natures knowest, and gavest them names
Needless to thee repeated; nor unknown

495 The serpent, subtlest beast of all the field, Of huge extent sometimes, with brazen eyes And hairy mane terrific, though to thee Not noxious, but obedient at thy call.

Now Heaven in all her glory shone, and rolled 500 Her motions, as the great First Mover's hand First wheeled their course; earth in her rich attire Consummate lovely smiled; air, water, earth, By fowl, fish, beast, was flown, was swum, was walked, Frequent; and of the sixth Day yet remained;

There wanted yet the master-work, the end
Of all yet done; a creature, who, not prone
And brute as other creatures, but endued
With sanctity of reason, might erect
His stature, and upright with front serene

510 Govern the rest, self-knowing, and from thence Magnanimous to correspond with Heaven, But grateful to acknowledge whence his good Descends; thither with heart, and voice, and eyes, Directed in devotion, to adore

515 And worship God Supreme, who made him chief Of all his works; therefore the Omnipotent Eternal Father (for where is not he Present?) thus to his Son audibly spake: 'Let us make now Man in our image, Man
520 In our similitude, and let them rule
Over the fish and fowl of sea and air,
Beast of the field, and over all the earth,
And every creeping thing that creeps the ground!
This said, he formed thee, Adam, thee, O Man,

Dust of the ground, and in thy nostrils breathed
The breath of life; in his own image he Created thee, in the image of God
Express, and thou becamest a living soul.
Male he created thee, but thy consort

530 Female, for race; then blessed mankind, and said, 'Be fruitful, multiply, and fill the earth; Subdue it, and throughout dominion hold Over fish of the sea, and fowl of the air, And every living thing that moves on the earth!'

535 Wherever thus created, (for no place
Is yet distinct by name,) thence, as thou knowest,
He brought thee into this delicious grove,
This garden, plauted with the trees of God,
Delectable both to behold and taste;

540 And freely all their pleasant fruit for food
Gave thee; all sorts are here that all the earth yields,
Variety without end; but of the tree,
Which, tasted, works knowledge of good and evil,
Thou mayest not; in the day thou catest, thou diest.

545 Death is the penalty imposed; beware,
And govern well thy appetite, lest Sin
Surprise thee, and her black attendant, Death.
Here finished he, and all that he had made
Viewed, and, behold, all was entirely good.

550 So even and morn accomplished the sixth Day;
Yet not till the Creator, from his work
Desisting, though unwearied, up returned,
Up to the Heaven of Heavens, his high abode,
Thence to behold this new-created world,

555 The addition of his empire—how it showed In prospect from his throne—how good—how fair, Answering his great idea. Up he rode, Followed with acclamation, and the sound Symphonious of ten thousand harps, that tuned

560 Angelic harmonies. The earth, the air Resounded—(thou rememberst, for thou heardst,)— The heavens and all the constellations rung, The planets in their stations listening stood,

14

While the bright pomp ascended jubilant. 'Open, ye everlasting gates!' they sung; 565 'Open, ye heavens, your living doors! let in The great Creator, from his work returned Magnificent, his six days' work, a world! Open, and henceforth oft; for God will deign 570 To visit oft the dwellings of just men Delighted, and with frequent intercourse Thither will send his winged messengers On errands of supernal grace.' So sung The glorious train ascending. He through Heaven, 575That opened wide her blazing portals, led To God's eternal house direct the way, A broad and ample road, whose dust is gold, And pavement stars, as stars to thee appear, Seen in the galaxy,—that milky way, 580^{-} Which nightly, as a circling zone, thou seest Powdered with stars. And now on earth the seventh Evening arose in Eden, for the sun Was set, and twilight from the east came on, Forerunning night; when at the holy mount Of Heaven's high-seated top, the imperial throne 585Of Godhead, fixed for ever firm and sure, The Filial Power arrived, and sat him down With his great Father; for he also went Invisible, yet stayed, (such privilege 590 Hath Omnipresence,) and the work ordained, Author and End of all things, and, from work Now resting, blessed and hallowed the seventh Day, As resting on that day from all his work; But not in silence holy kept; the harp Had work, and rested not; the solemn pipe, 595And dulcimer, all organs of sweet stop, All sounds on fret, by string or golden wire, Tempered soft tunings, intermixed with voice Choral or unison; of incense clouds, Fuming from golden censers, hid the mount. Creation and the six days' acts they sung: 'Great are thy works, Jehovah! infinite Thy power! What thought can measure thee, or tonous

Than from the giant Angels; thee that day
Thy thunders magnified; but to create
Is greater than created to destroy.
Who can impair thee, Mighty King, or bound

Relate thee? greater now in thy return

Thy empire? Easily the proud attempt 610 Of Spirits apostate, and their counsels vain,
Thou hast repelled, while impiously they thought
Thee to diminish, and from thee withdraw
The number of thy worshippers. Who seeks
To lessen thee, against his purpose serves

To manifest the more thy might; his evil
Thou usest, and from thence createst more good.
Witness this new-made world, another Heaven
From Heaven-gate not far, founded in view
On the clear hyaline, the glassy sea;

620 Of amplitude almost immense, with stars
Numerous, and every star perhaps a world
Of destined habitation; but thou knowest
Their seasons; among these, the seat of men,
Earth with her nether ocean circumfused,

625 Their pleasant dwelling-place. Thrice happy men, And sons of men, whom God hath thus advanced, Created in his image, there to dwell And worship him, and, in reward, to rule Over his works, on earth, in sea, or air,

630 And multiply a race of worshippers
Holy and just; thrice happy, if they know
Their happiness, and persevere upright!'
So sung they, and the Empyréan rung
With halleluiahs; thus was Sabbath kept.

And thy request think now fulfilled, that asked
How first this world and face of things began,
And what, before thy memory, was done
From the beginning, that posterity,
Informed by thee, might know. If else thou seekest

640 Aught, not surpassing human measure, say."

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK VIII.

THE ARGUMENT.

Adam inquires concerning celestial motions; is doubtfully answered, and exhorted to search rather things more worthy of knowledge; Adam assents, and, still desirous to detain Raphael, relates to him what he remembered since his own creation; his placing in Paradise; his talk with God concerning solitude and fit society; his first meeting and nuptials with Eve; his discourse with the Angel thereupon; who, after admonitions repeated, departs.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK VIII.

HE Angel ended, and in Adam's ear So charming left his voice, that he awhile Thought him still speaking, still stood fixed to hear; Then, as new-waked, thus gratefully replied: "What thanks sufficient, or what recompense Equal, have I to render thee, divine Historian, who thus largely hast allayed The thirst I had of knowledge, and vouchsafed This friendly condescension to relate 10 Things else by me unsearchable, now heard With wonder, but delight, and, as is due, With glory attributed to the high Creator? Something yet of doubt remains, Which only thy solution can resolve. 15 When I behold this goodly frame, this world, Of heaven and earth consisting, and compute Their magnitudes; this earth, a spot, a grain, An atom, with the firmament compared And all her numbered stars, that seem to roll 20 Spaces incomprehensible, (for such. Their distance argues, and their swift return Diurnal,) merely to officiate light Round this opacous earth, this punctual spot,

One day and night, in all their vast survey.
Useless besides; reasoning I oft admire,

25

How Nature, wise and frugal, could commit Such disproportions, with superfluous hand So many nobler bodies to create, Greater so manifold, to this one use,

30 For aught appears, and on their orbs impose
Such restless revolution day by day
Repeated, while the sedentary earth,
(That better might with far less compass move,)
Served by more noble than herself, attains

35 Her end without least motion, and receives,
As tribute,—such a sumless journey brought
Of incorporeal speed, her warmth and light;
Speed, to describe whose swiftness number fails."

So spake our sire, and by his countenance seemed 40 Entering on studious thoughts abstruse; which Eve Perceiving, where she sat retired in sight, With lowliness majestic from her seat, And grace that won who saw to wish her stay, Rose, and went forth among her fruits and flowers,

45 To visit how they prospered, bud and bloom,
Her nursery; they at her coming sprung,
And, touched by her fair tendance, gladlier grew.
Yet went she not as not with such discourse
Delighted, or not capable her ear

50 Of what was high; such pleasure she reserved,
Adam relating, she sole auditress;
Her husband the relater she preferred
Before the Angel, and of him to ask
Chose rather; he, she knew, would intermix

55 Grateful digressions, and solve high dispute
With conjugal caresses; from his lip
Not words alone pleased her. O! when meet now
Such pairs, in love and mutual honour joined?
With goddess-like demeanour forth she went,

60 Not unattended; for on her, as queen,
A pomp of winning Graces waited still,
And from about her shot darts of desire
Into all eyes, to wish her still in sight.
And Raphael now to Adam's doubt proposed

65 Benevolent and facile thus replied:

"To ask or search, I blame thee not; for heaven
Is as the book of God before thee set,
Wherein to read his wondrous works, and learn
His seasons, hours, or days, or months, or years.

70 This to attain, whether heaven move or earth,

Imports not, if thou reckon right; the rest From man or Angel the great Architect Did wisely to conceal, and not divulge His secrets to be scanned by them who ought Rather admire; or, if they list to try

75 Rather admire; or, if they list to try
Conjecture, he his fabric of the heavens
Hath left to their disputes, perhaps to move
His laughter at their quaint opinions wide
Hereafter, when they come to model heaven

80 And calculate the stars; how they will wield The mighty frame; how build, unbuild, contrive, To save appearances; how gird the sphere With centric and eccentric scribbled o'er, Cycle and epicycle, orb in orb.

85 Already by thy reasoning this I guess,
Who art to lead thy offspring, and supposest
That bodies bright and greater should not serve
The less not bright, nor heaven such journeys run,
Earth sitting still, when she alone receives

90 The benefit. Consider first, that great Or bright infers not excellence; the earth, Though, in comparison of heaven, so small, Nor glistering, may of solid good contain More plenty than the sun that barren shines;

95 Whose virtue on itself works no effect,
But in the fruitful earth; there first received,
His beams, unactive else, their vigour find.
Yet not to earth are those bright luminaries
Officious, but to thee, carth's habitant.

100 And for the heaven's wide circuit, let it speak
The Maker's high magnificence, who built
So spacious, and his line stretched out so far,
That man may know he dwells not in his own;
An edifice too large for him to fill,

105 Lodged in a small partition, and the rest
Ordained for uses to his Lord best known.
The swiftness of those circles attribute,
Though numberless, to his omnipotence,
That to corporeal substances could add

110 Speed almost spiritual. Me thou thinkest not slow,
Who since the morning-hour set out from Heaven,
Where God resides, and ere mid-day arrived
In Eden, distance inexpressible
By numbers that have name. But this I urge,

115 Admitting motion in the heavens, to show

Invalid that which thee to doubt it moved; Not that I so affirm, though so it seem To thee, who hast thy dwelling here on earth. God, to remove his ways from human sense,

120 Placed heaven from earth so far, that earthly sight,
If it presume, might err in things too high,
And no advantage gain. What if the sun
Be centre to the world, and other stars,
By his attractive virtue and their own

125 Incited, dance about him various rounds?

Their wandering course, now high, now low, then hid,
Progressive, retrograde, or standing still,
In six thou seest; and what if seventh to these
The planet earth, so steadfast though she seem,

130 Insensibly three different motions move?

Which else to several spheres thou must ascribe,
Moved contrary with thwart obliquities;
Or save the sun his labour, and that swift
Nocturnal and diurnal rhomb supposed,

Of day and night; which needs not thy belief,
If earth, industrious of herself, fetch day
Travelling east, and with her part averse
From the sun's beam meet night, her other part

140 Still luminous by his ray. What if that light,
Sent from her through the wide transpicuous air,
To the terrestrial moon be as a star,
Enlightening her by day, as she by night
This earth, reciprocal, if land be there,

145 Fields and inhabitants? Her spots thou seest
As clouds, and clouds may rain, and rain produce
Fruits in her softened soil, for some to eat
Allotted there; and other suns, perhaps,
With their attendant moons, thou wilt descry,

150 Communicating male and female light
(Which two great sexes animate the world,)
Stored in each orb perhaps with some that live.
For such vast room in nature unpossessed
By living soul, desert and desolate,

Only to shine, yet scarce to contribute
Each orb a glimpse of light, conveyed so far
Down to this habitable, which returns
Light back to them, is obvious to dispute.
But whether thus these things, or whether not,—

160 Whether the sun, predominant in heaven,

Rise on the earth, or earth rise on the sun; He from the east his flaming road begin, Or she from west her silent course advance With inoffensive pace, that spinning sleeps

On her soft axle, while she paces even,
And bears thee soft with the smooth air along;
Solicit not thy thoughts with matters hid;
Leave them to God above; him serve and fear.
Of other creatures, as him pleases best,

170 Wherever placed, let him dispose; joy thou In what he gives to thee—this Paradise And thy fair Eve; Heaven is for thee too high To know what passes there; be lowly wise; Think only what concerns thee and thy being;

175 Dream not of other worlds; what creatures there Live, in what state, condition, or degree; Contented that thus far hath been revealed, Not of earth only, but of highest heaven."

To whom thus Adam, cleared of doubt, replied:

180 "How fully hast thou satisfied me, pure Intelligence of Heaven, Angel serene!

And, freed from intricacies, taught to live The easiest way, nor with perplexing thoughts To interrupt the sweet of life, from which 185 God hath bid dwell far off all anxious cares,

And not molest us, unless we ourselves
Seek them with wandering thoughts, and notions vain.
But apt the mind or fancy is to rove
Unchecked, and of her roving is no end;

Till, warned, or by experience taught, she learn.
That not to know at large of things remote
From use, obscure and subtle, but to know
That which before us lies in daily life,
Is the prime wisdom; what is more, is fume,

195 Or emptiness, or fond impertinence,
And renders us, in things that most concern,
Unpractised, unprepared, and still to seek.
Therefore from this high pitch let us descend
A lower flight, and speak of things at hand

200 Useful; whence, haply, mention may arise
Of something not unseasonable to ask,
By sufferance, and thy worted favour, deigned.
Thee I have heard relating what was done
Ere my remembrance; now, hear me relate

205 My story, which perhaps thou hast not heard.

And day is not yet spent; till then thou seest How subtly to detain thee I devise. Inviting thee to hear while I relate,— Fond! were it not in hope of thy reply.

210 For, while I sit with thee, I seem in Heaven;
And sweeter thy discourse is to my ear
Than fruits of palm-tree, pleasantest to thirst
And hunger both, from labour, at the hour
Of sweet repast; they satiate, and soon fill,

Though pleasant; but thy words, with grace divine Imbued, bring to their sweetness no satiety."

To whom thus Raphael answered heavenly meek:
"Nor are thy lips ungraceful, Sire of Men!

Nor tare thy lips ungracern, sire of Me Nor tongue incloquent; for God on thee

220 Abundantly his gifts hath also poured,
Inward and outward both, his image fair;
Speaking, or mute, all comeliness and grace
Attends thee, and each word, each motion forms.
Nor less think we in Heaven of thee on earth

225 Than of our fellow-servant, and inquire Gladly into the ways of God with man; For God, we see, hath honoured thee, and set On man his equal love. Say therefore on; For I that day was absent, as befell,

230 Bound on a voyage uncouth and obscure,
Far on excursion toward the gates of Hell;
Squared in full legion (such command we had),
To see that none thence issued forth a spy,
Or enemy, while God was in his work;

235 Lest he, incensed at such cruption bold,
Destruction with creation might have mixed.
Not that they durst without his leave attempt;
But us he sends upon his high behests
For state, as sovran King; and to inure

Our prompt obedience. Fast we found, fast shut,
The dismal gates, and barricadoed strong;
But, long ere our approaching, heard within
Noise, other than the sound of dance or song;
Torment, and loud lament, and furious rage!

245 Glad we returned up to the coasts of light
Ere Sabbath evening; so we had in charge.
But thy relation now; for I attend,
Pleased with thy words no less than thou with mine.'
So spake the godlike Power, and thus our Sire:

250 "For man to tell how human life began

Is hard; for who himself beginning knew? Desire with thee still longer to converse Induced me. As new-waked from soundest sleep, Soft on the flowery herb I found me laid,

255 In balmy sweat, which with his beams the sun Soon dried, and on the reeking moisture fed. Straight toward heaven my wondering eyes I turned, And gazed awhile the ample sky, till, raised By quick instinctive motion, up I sprung,

260 As thitherward endeavouring, and upright
Stood on my feet. About me round I saw
Hill, dale, and shady woods, and sunny plains,
And liquid lapse of murmuring streams; by these,
Creatures that lived and moved, and walked or flew;

265 Birds on the branches warbling; all things smiled; With fragrance and with joy my heart o'erflowed. Myself I then perused, and limb by limb Surveyed, and sometimes went, and sometimes ran With supple joints, as lively vigour led;

270 But who I was, or where, or from what cause, Knew not. To speak I tried, and forthwith spake; My tongue obeyed, and readily could name Whate'er I saw. 'Thou sun,' said I, 'fair light, And thou enlightened earth, so fresh and gay, 275 Ye hills, and dales, ye rivers, woods, and plains, And ye that live and move, fair creatures, tell, Tell, if ye saw, how came I thus, how here! Not of myself; by some great Maker then, In goodness and in power pre-eminent.

280 Tell me how may I know him, how adore,
From whom I have that thus I move and live,
And feel that I am happier than I know?'
While thus I called, and strayed I knew not whither,
From where I first drew air, and first beheld

285 This happy light, when answer none returned,
On a green shady bank, profuse of flowers,
Pensive I sat me down; there gentle sleep
First found me, and with soft oppression seized
My drowsed sense, untroubled, though 1 thought

290 I then was passing to my former state
Insensible, and forthwith to dissolve;
When suddenly stood at my head a dream,
Whose inward apparition gently moved
My fancy to believe I yet had being,

295 And lived. One came, methought, of shape divine,

7 5

And said, 'Thy mansion wants thee, Adam; rise, First man, of men innumerable ordained First father! called by thee, I come thy guide To the garden of bliss, thy sent prepared.'

300 So saying, by the hand he took me, raised,
And, over fields and waters, as in air
Smooth sliding without step, last led me up
A woody mountain, whose high top was plain,
A circuit wide, enclosed, with goodliest trees

Of earth before scarce pleasant seemed. Each tree, Loaden with fairest fruit, that hung to the eye Tempting, stirred in me sudden appetite

To pluck and eat; whereat I waked, and found

310 Before mine eyes all real, as the dream
Had lively shadowed. Here had new begnn
My wandering, had not He, who was my guide
Up hither, from among the trees appeared,
Presence Divine! Rejoicing, but with awe,

315 In adoration at his feet I fell
Submiss. He reared me, and, 'Whom thou soughtest I am,'
Said mildly, 'Author of all this thou seest
Above, or round about thee, or beneath.
This Paradise I give thee; count it thine

320 To till and keep, and of the fruit to eat;
Of every tree that in the garden grows
Eat freely with glad heart; fear here no dearth;
But of the tree whose operation brings
Knowledge of good and ill, which I have set,

325 The pledge of thy obedience and thy faith,
Amid the garden, by the Tree of Life,
(Remember what I warn thee!) shun to taste,
And shun the bitter consequence; for know,
The day thou eatest thereof,—my sole command

330 Transgressed,—inevitably thou shalt die, From that day mortal, and this happy state Shalt lose, expelled from hence into a world Of woe and sorrow.' Sternly he pronounced The rigid interdiction, which resounds

335 Yet dreadful in mine ear, though in my choice Not to incur; but soon his clear aspect Returned, and gracious purpose thus renewed: 'Not only these fair bounds, but all the earth To thee and to thy race I give; as lords
340 Possess it, and all things that therein live,

Or live in sea or air,—beast, fish, and fowl. In sign whereof, each bird and beast behold After their kinds; I bring them to receive From thee their names, and pay the feälty

345 With low subjection; understand the same
Of fish within their watery residence,
Not hither summoned, since they cannot change
Their element, to draw the thinner air.'
As thus he spake, each bird and beast behold

350 Approaching, two and two, these cowering low With blandishment, each bird stooped on his wing. I named them as they passed, and understood Their nature; with such knowledge God endned My sudden apprehension. But in these

355 I found not what, methought, I wanted still;
And to the heavenly Vision thus presumed:

'O, by what name,—for thou above all these, Above mankind, or aught than mankind higher, Surpassest far my naming,—how may I

Adore thee, Author of this universe,
And all this good to man, for whose well-being
So amply, and with hands so liberal,
Thou hast provided all things? but with me
I see not who partakes. In solitude

365 What happiness? who can enjoy alone?
Or, all enjoying, what contentment find?'
Thus I presumptuous; and the Vision bright,

Thus I presumptuous; and the Vision bright,
As with a smile more brightened, thus replied:
'What callest thou solitude? Is not the earth

370 With various living creatures, and the air Replenished, and all these at thy command To come and play before thee? Knowest thou not Their language and their ways? They also know, And reason not contemptibly; with these 375 Find pastime, and bear rule; thy realm is large.' So spake the Universal Lord, and seemed So ordering. I, with leave of speech implored, And humble deprecation, thus replied:

'Let not my words offend thee, heavenly Power!

380 My Maker, be propitious while I speak!
Hast thou not made me here thy substitute,
And these inferior far beneath me set?
Among unequals what society
Can sort, what harmony or true delight?

385 Which must be mutual, in proportion due

Given and received; but, in disparity,
The one intense, the other still remiss,
Cannot well suit with either, but soon prove Tedious alike. Of fellowship I speak,
Such as I seek, fit to participate

390 Such as I seek, fit to participate
All rational delight, wherein the brate
Cannot be human consort; they rejoice
Each with their kind, lion with lioness;
So fitly them in pairs thou hast combined;

395 Much less can bird with beast, or fish with fowl So well converse, nor with the ox the ape; Worse, then, can man with beast, and least of all.'
Whereto the Almighty answered, not displeased:
'A nice and subtle happiness, I see,

400 Thou to thyself proposest, in the choice Of thy associates, Adam, and wilt taste No pleasure, though in pleasure, solitary. What thinkest thou, then, of me, and this my state?

Seem I to thee sufficiently possessed Of happiness, or not? who am alone

405 Of happiness, or not? who am alone
From all eternity; for none I know
Second to me or like, equal much less.
How have I then with whom to hold converse,

Save with the creatures which I made, and those To me inferior, infinite descents

410 To me inferior, infinite descents
Beneath what other creatures are to thee?'
He ceased; I lowly answered: 'To attain
The height and depth of thy eternal ways
All human thoughts come short, Supreme of things!

415 Thou in thyself art perfect, and in thee
Is no deficience found; not so is man,
But in degree—the cause of his desire
By conversation with his like to help
Or solace his defects. No need that thou

420 Shouldst propagate, already Infinite,
And through all numbers absolute, though One;
But man by number is to manifest
His single imperfection, and beget
Like of his like, his image multiplied,

425 In unity defective, which requires
Collateral love, and dearest amity.
Thou, in thy secrecy although alone,
Best with thyself accompanied, seekest not
Social communication, yet, so pleased,

430 Canst raise thy creature to what height thou wilt

Of union, or communion, deified; I, by conversing, cannot these erect From prone, nor in their ways complacence find.' Thus I emboldened spake, and freedom used-

Permissive, and acceptance found; which gained This answer from the gracious Voice Divine:

'Thus far to try thee, Adam, I was pleased;
And find thee knowing not of beests alone

And find thee knowing not of beasts alone, Which thou hast rightly named, but of thyself,

440 Expressing well the spirit within thee free,—
My image,—not imparted to the brute;
Whose fellowship therefore, numeet for thee,
Good reason was thou freely shouldst dislike;
And be so minded still.—I, ere thou spakest,

445 Knew it not good for man to be alone,
And no such company as then thou sawest
Intended thee, for trial only brought,
To see how thou couldst judge of fit and meet;
What next I bring shall please thee, be assured,—

450 Thy likeness, thy fit help, thy other self,— Thy wish exactly to thy heart's desire.'

He ended, or I heard no more; for now My earthly by his heavenly overpowered, Which it had long stood under, strained to the height

455 In that celestial colloquy sublime,
As with an object that excels the sense,
Dazzled and spent, sunk down, and sought repair
Of sleep, which instantly fell on me, called
By nature as in aid, and closed mine eyes.

460 Mine eyes he closed, but open left the cell
Of fancy, my internal sight; by which,
Abstract as in a trance, methought I saw,
Though sleeping, where I lay, and saw the Shape,
Still glorious, before whom awake I stood;

465 Who, stooping, opened my left side, and took
From thence a rib, with cordial spirits warm,
And life-blood streaming fresh; wide was the wound,
But suddenly with flesh filled up and healed.
The rib he formed and fashioned with his hands;

470 Under his forming hands a creature grew,
Man-like, but different sex, so lovely fair,
That what seemed fair in all the world, seemed now
Mean, or in her summed up, in her contained,
And in her looks, which from that time infused

475 Sweetness into my heart unfelt before,

And into all things from her air inspired The spirit of love and amorous delight. She disappeared, and left me dark; I waked, To find her, or for ever to deplore

480 Her loss, and other pleasures all abjure;
When out of hope, behold her, not far off,
Such as I saw her in my dream, adorned
With what all earth or Heaven could bestow
To make her amiable! On she came,

485 Led by her heavenly Maker, though unseen, And guided by his voice; nor uninformed Of nuptial sanctity and marriage rites. Grace was in all her steps, Heaven in her eye, In every gesture dignity and love.

490 I, overjoyed, could not forbear alond:

'This turn hath made amends; thou hast fulfilled
Thy words, Creator bounteous and benign,
Giver of all things fair! but fairest this
Of all thy gifts! nor enviest. I now see

495 Bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh, myself
Before me; Woman is her name, of Man
Extracted; for this cause he shall forego
Father and mother, and to his wife adhere;
And they shall be one flesh, one heart, one soul.'

She heard me thus; and, though divinely brought, Yet innocence, and virgin modesty,
Her virtue, and the conscience of her worth,
That would be wooed, and not unsought be won,
Not obvious, not obtrusive, but retired,

505 The more desirable, or, to say all,
Nature herself, though pure of sinful thought,
Wrought in her so, that, seeing me, she turned.
I followed her; she what was honour knew,
And, with obsequious majesty, approved

510 My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bower I led her blushing like the Morn; all heaven, And happy constellations, on that hour Shed their selectest influence; the earth Gave sign of gratulation, and each hill;

515 Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle airs
Whispered it to the woods, and from their wings
Flung rose, flung odours from the spicy shrub,
Disporting, till the amorous bird of night
Sung spousal, and bid haste the evening star
520 On his hill top to light the bridal lamp.

Thus have I told thee all my state, and brought My story to the sum of earthly bliss Which I enjoy; and must confess to find In all things else delight indeed, but such

525 As, used or not, works in the mind no change, Nor vehement desire,—these delicacies I mean of taste, sight, smell, herbs, fruits, and flowers, Walks, and the melody of birds; but here Far otherwise, transported I behold,

530 Transported touch; here passion first I felt, Commotion strange, in all enjoyments else Superior and unmoved, here only weak Against the charm of beauty's powerful glance. Or Nature failed in me, and left some part 535Not proof enough such object to sustain, Or, from my side subducting, took perhaps More than enough; at least on her bestowed Too much of ornament, in outward show Elaborate, of inward less exact.

540For well I understand, in the prime end Of Nature, her the inferior, in the mind And inward faculties, which most excel; In outward also her resembling less His image who made both, and less expressing

545 The character of that dominion given O'er other creatures. Yet, when I approach Her loveliness, so absolute she seems, And in herself complete, so well to know Her own, that what she wills to do or say,

550 Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best; All higher Knowledge in her presence falls Degraded: Wisdom in discourse with her Loses discountenanced, and like Folly shows; Authority and Reason on her wait,

555 As one intended first, not after made Occasionally; and, to consummate all. Greatness of mind, and nobleness, their seat Build in her loveliest, and create an awe About her, as a guard angelic placed."

To whom the Angel, with contracted brow: 560 "Accuse not Nature, she hath done her part; Do thou but thine, and be not diffident Of Wisdom; she deserts thee not, if thou Dismiss not her, when most thou needest her nigh,

565 By attributing overmuch to things Less excellent, as thou thyself perceivest. For, what admirest thou, what transports thee so? An outside,—fair, no doubt, and worthy well Thy cherishing, thy honouring, and thy love;

570 Not thy subjection. Weigh with her thyself;
Then value. Oft-times nothing profits more
Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right,
Well managed; of that skill the more thou knowest,
The more she will acknowledge thee her head,

575 And to realities yield all her shows;
Made so adorn for thy delight the more,
So awful, that with honour thou mayest love
Thy mate, who sees when thou art seen least wise.
But if the sense of touch, whereby mankind

580 Is propagated, seem such dear delight
Beyond all other, think the same vouchsafed
To cattle and each beast! which would not be
To them made common and divulged, if aught
Therein enjoyed were worthy to subdue

585 The soul of man, or passion in him move.
What higher in her society thou findest
Attractive, human, rational, love still;
In loving thou dost well, in passion not,
Wherein true love consists not. Love refines

590 The thoughts, and heart enlarges; hath his seat In reason, and is judicious; is the scale By which to heavenly love thou mayest ascend, Not sunk in carnal pleasure; for which cause, Among the beasts no mate for thee was found."

To whom thus, half abashed, Adam replied:
"Neither her outside formed so fair, nor aught
In procreation, common to all kinds,
(Though higher of the genial bed by far,
And with mysterious reverence, I deem),

600 So much delights me, as those graceful acts,
Those thousand decencies, that daily flow
From all her words and actions, mixed with love
And sweet compliance, which declare unfeigned
Union of mind, or in us both one soul;

605 Harmony to behold in wedded pair
More grateful than harmonious sound to the ear.
Yet these subject not; I to thee disclose
What inward thence I feel, not therefore foiled,
Who meet with various objects, from the sense
610 Variously representing, yet, still free,

Approve the best, and follow what I approve. To love thou blamest me not; for love, thou sayest, Leads up to Heaven—is both the way and guide; Bear with me then, if lawful what I ask.

Love not the heavenly Spirits, and how their love 615 Express they? by looks only? or do they mix Irradiance, virtual or immediate touch?"

To whom the Angel, with a smile that glowed

Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue,

620 Answered: "Let it suffice thee that thou knowest Us happy, and without love no happiness. Whatever pure thou in the body enjoyest,— And pure thou wert created,—we enjoy In eminence, and obstacle find none

Of membrane, joint, or limb, exclusive bars; 625 Easier than air with air, if Spirits embrace, Total they mix, union of pure with pure Desiring, nor restrained conveyance need, As flesh to mix with flesh, or soul with soul.

630But I can now no more; the parting sun, Beyond the Earth's green Cape and Verdant Isles Hespercan, sets, my signal to depart. Be strong, live happy, and love! but first of all Him whom to love is to obey, and keep 635 His great command; take heed, lest passion sway Thy judgment to do aught which else free will Would not admit; thine, and of all thy sons The weal or woe in thee is placed; beware!

I in thy persevering shall rejoice,

640 And all the Blest. Stand fast! to stand, or fall, Free in thine own arbitrement it lies. Perfect within, no outward aid require; And all temptation to transgress repel." So saying, he arose; whom Adam thus Followed with benediction: "Since to part, 645Go, heavenly guest, ethereal messenger, . Sent from whose sovran goodness I adore! Gentle to me and affable hath been Thy condescension, and shall be honoured ever

With grateful memory; thou to mankind 650Be good and friendly still, and oft return!" So parted they; the Angel up to Heaven From the thick shade, and Adam to his bower.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK IX.

THE ARGUMENT.

SATAN having compassed the earth, with meditated guile returns, as a mist, by night into Paradise; enters into the serpent sleeping. Adam and Eve in the morning go forth to their labours, which Eve proposes to divide in several places, each labouring apart; Adam consents not, alleging the danger, lest that enemy, of whom they were forewarned, should attempt her found alone. Eve, loth to be thought not circumspect or firm enough, urges her going apart, the rather desirous to make trial of her strength; Adam at last yields. The serpent finds her alone; his subtle approach, first gazing, then speaking, with much flattery extolling Eve above all other creatures. Eve, wondering to hear the serpent speak, asks how he attained to human speech, and such understanding, not till now; the serpent answers, that by tasting of a certain tree in the garden he attained both to speech and reason, till then void of both. Eve requires him to bring her to that tree, and finds it to be the Tree of Knowledge forbidden; the serpent, now grown bolder. with many wiles and arguments, induces her at length to eat; she. pleased with the taste, deliberates awhile whether to impart thereof to Adam or not; at last brings him of the fruit; relates what persuaded her to cat thereof. Adam, at first amazed, but perceiving her lost, resolves, through vehemence of love, to perish with her; and, extenuating the trespass, eats also of the fruit; the effects thereof in them both; they seek to cover their nakedness; then fall to variance and accusation of one another.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK IX.

O more of talk where God or angel guest
With man, as with his friend, familiar used
To sit indulgent, and with him partake
Rural repast, permitting him the while Venial discourse unblamed. I now must change
Those notes to tragic; foul distrust, and breach
Disloyal, on the part of man, revolt,
And disobedience; on the part of Heaven
Now alienated, distance and distaste,

10 Anger, and just rebuke, and judgment given,
That brought into this world a world of woe,
Sin and her shadow Death, and Misery,
Death's harbinger. Sad task! yet argument
Not less, but more heroic, than the wiath?

15 Of stern Achilles on his foe pursued
Thrice fugitive about Troy wall; or rage
Of Turnus for Lavinia disesponsed;
Or Neptune's ire, or Juno's, that so long
Perplexed the Greek, and Cytherea's son;

20 If answerable style I can obtain
Of my celestial patroness, who deigns
Her nightly visitation unimplored,
And dictates to me slumbering, or inspires

Easy my unpremeditated verse, 25Since first this subject for heroic song Pleased me, long choosing and beginning late: Not sedulous by nature to indite Wars, hitherto the only argument Heroic deemed; chief mastery to dissect 30 With long and tedious havoc fabled kuights, In battles feigned; (the better fortitude Of patience and heroic martyrdom Unsung:) or to describe races and games, Or tilting furniture, emblazoned shields,

35 Impresses quaint, caparisons and steeds, ·Bases and tinsel trappings, gorgeous knights At joust and tournament; then marshalled feast Served up in hall with sewers and seneschals; The skill of artifice or office mean!

40 Not that which justly gives heroic name To person, or to poem. Me, of these Nor skilled nor studious, higher argument Remains, sufficient of itself to raise That name, unless an age too late, or cold

45 Climate, or years, damp my intended wing Depressed; and much they may, if all be mine, Not hers, who brings it nightly to my ear. The Sun was sunk, and after him the star

Of Hesperus, whose office is to bring 50 Twilight upon the earth, short arbiter "Twixt day and night; and now, from end to end, Night's hemisphere had veiled the horizon round; When Satan, who late fled before the threats Of Gabriel out of Eden, now improved

55In meditated fraud and malice,—bent On man's destruction, mangre what might hap Of heavier on himself, -fearless returned. By night he fled, and at midnight returned From compassing the earth; cautious of day,

60 Since Uriel, regent of the sun, descried His entrance, and forewarned the Chernbim That kept their watch. Thence, full of anguish, driven, The space of seven continued nights he rode With darkness; thrice the equinoctial line

65 He circled; four times crossed the car of Night From pole to pole, travérsing each colúre; On the eighth returned, and, on the coast averse From entrance or cherubic watch, by stealth.

Found unsuspected way. There was a place,
Now not, though sin, not time, first wrought the change,
Where Tigris, at the foot of Paradise,
Into a gulf shot under ground, till part
Rose up a fountain by the tree of life.
In with the river sunk, and with it rose

75 Satan, involved in rising mist; then sought
Where to lie hid. Sea he had searched and land,
From Eden over Pontus, and the pool
Mæotis, up beyond the river Ob;
Downward as far antarctic; and, in length,

West from Orontes to the Ocean barred
At Darien, (thence to the land where flows Ganges and Indus), thus the orb he roamed
With narrow search, and with inspection deep
Considered every creature, which of all

85 Most opportune might serve his wiles) and found The serpent subtlest beast of all the field. Him, after long debate, irresolute Of thoughts revolved, his final sentence chose; Fit vessel, fittest imp of fraud, in whom

90 To enter, and his dark suggestions hide From sharpest sight; for, in the wily snake Whatever sleights none would suspicious mark, As from his wit and native subtlety Proceeding, which, in other beasts observed,

95 Doubt might beget of diabolic power
Active within, beyond the sense of brute.
Thus he resolved; but first from inward grief
His bursting passion into plaints thus poured:
"O Earth, how like to Heaven, if not preferred

More justly—seat worthier of Gods, as built With second thoughts, reforming what was old!
For what God, after better, worse would build?
Terrestrial Heaven, danced round by other Heavens
That shine, yet bear their bright officious lamps,

105 (Light above light, for thee alone, as seems,)
In thee concentring all their precious beams
Of sacred influence! As God in Heaven
Is centre, yet extends to all; so thou,
Centring, receivest from all those orbs; in thee,

110 Not in themselves, all their known virtue appears
Productive in herb, plant, and nobler birth
Of creatures animate with gradual life;
Of growth, sense, reason, all summed up in man.

With what delight could I have walked thee round,
If I could joy in aught! sweet interchange
Of hill, and valley, rivers, woods, and plains,
Now land, now sea, and shores with forest crowned,
Rocks, dens, and caves! But I in none of these Find place or refuge; and the more I see

120 Pleasures about me, so much more I feel
Torment within me, as from the hateful siege
Of contraries; all good to me becomes
Bane, and in Heaven much worse would be my state
But neither here seek I, no, nor in Heaven

125 To dwell, unless by mastering Heaven's Supreme:
Nor hope to be myself less miserable
By what I seek, but others to make such
As I, though thereby worse to me redound;
For only in destroying I find case

Or won to what may work his utter loss,
For whom all this was made, all this will soon
Follow, as to him linked in weal or woe;
In woe then, that destruction wide may range!

To me shall be the glory sole among
The infernal Powers, in one day to have marred
What he—Almighty styled—six nights and days
Continued making, and who knows how long
Before had been contriving? though perhaps

140 Not longer than since I, in one night, freed
From servitude inglorious well nigh half
The angelic name, and thinner left the throng
Of his adorers. He, to be avenged,
And to repair his numbers thus impaired,

145 (Whether such virtue spent of old now failed)
More angels to create, if they at least
Are his created, or to spite us more,)
Determined to advance into our room
A creature formed of earth; and him endow,

150 (Exalted from so base original, With heavenly spoils—our spoils! (What he decreed, He effected) man he made, and for him buil Magnificent this world, and earth his seat, Hun lord pronounced, and, O indignity!

155 Subjected to his service angel-wings,
And flaming ministers to watch and tend
Their earthy charge. Of these the vigilance
I dread: and to clude, thus wrapped in mist

Of midnight vapour glide obscure, and pry

160 In every bush and brake, where hap may find
The serpent sleeping, in whose mazy folds
To hide me, and the dark intent I bring.
O foul descent! that I, who erst contended
With Gods to sit the highest, am now constrained

165 Into a beast, and, mixed with bestial slime,
This essence to incarnate and imbrute,
That to the height of deity aspired!
But what will not ambition and revenge
Descend to? Who aspires must down as low

170 As high he soared, obnoxious, first or last,
To basest things. Revenge, at first though sweet,
Bitter ere long, back on itself recoils;
Let it; I reck not (so it light well aimed (Since higher I fall short) on him who next

175 Provokes my envy this new favourite
Of Heaven—this man of clay—son of despite,
Whom, us the more to spite, his Maker raised
From dust; spite then with spite is best repaid."
So saying, through each thicket dank or dry,

180 Like a blank mist low creeping, he held on
His midnight search, where soonest he might find
The serpent; him fast sleeping soon he found
In labyrinth of many a round self-rolled,
His builth wild the self-rolled.

His head the midst, well stored with subtle wiles;

Not yet in horrid shade or dismal den,
Nor nocent yet, but, on the grassy herb,
Fearless, unfeared, he slept. In at his mouth
The Devil entered and his brutal sense,
In heart or head, possessing soon inspired
With act intelligential; but his sleep

190 With act intelligential; but his sleep
Disturbed not, waiting close the approach of morn.
Now, when as sacred light began to dawn
In Eden on the humid flowers, that breathed

Their morning incense, when all things that breathe 195 From the Earth's great altar send up silent praise

To the Creator, and his nostrils fill
With grateful smell, forth came the human pair,
And joined their vocal worship to the choir
Of creatures wanting voice; that done, partake

The season, prime for sweetest scents and airs;
Then commune, how that day they best may ply
Their growing work; for much their work outgrew
The hands' dispatch of two, gardening so wide:

And Eve first to her husband thus began: "Adam, well may we labour still to dress This garden, still to tend plant, herb, and flow Our pleasant task enjoined; but, till more han Aid us, the work under our labour grows, Luxurious by restraint; what we by day	er— ds

For solitude sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return.
But other doubt possesses me, lest harm
Befall thee severed from me; for thou knowest
What hath been warned us, what malicious foe,
Envying our happiness, and of his own

Despairing, seeks to work us woe and shame By sly assault; and somewhere nigh at hand Watches, no doubt, with greedy hope to find His wish and best advantage—us asunder, Hopeless to circumvent us joined, where each

260 To other speedy aid might lend at need;
Whether his first design be to withdraw
Our feälty from God, or to disturb
Conjugal love, than which perhaps no bliss
Enjoyed by us excites his envy more;

Or this, or worse, leave not the faithful side
That gave thee being, still shades thee and protects.
The wife, where danger or dishonour lurks,
Safest and seemliest by her husband stays,
Who guards her, or with her the worst endures."

270 To whom the virgin majesty of Eve,)
As one who loves, and some unkindness meets,
With sweet austere composure thus replied:
"Offspring of Heaven and Earth, and all Earth's Lord!
That such an enemy we have, who seeks

275 Our ruin, both by thee informed I learn,
And from the parting Angel overheard,
As in a shady nook I stood behind,
Just then returned at shut of evening flowers.
But that thou shouldst my firmness therefore doubt

280 To God, or thee, because we have a foe

May tempt it, I expected not to hear.

His violence thou fearest not, being such

As we, not capable of death or pain,

Can either not receive, or can repel.

285 His fraud is then thy fear; which plain infers
Thy equal fear, that my firm faith and love
Can by his fraud be shaken, or seduced;
Thoughts, which, how found they harbour in thy breast,
Adam, misthought of her to thee so dear?"

290 To whom with healing words Adam replied and Daughter of God and man, immortal Eve!

For such thou art, from sin and blame entire;

Not diffident of thee do I dissuade

Thy absence from my sight, but to avoid The attempt itself, intended by our foe. 295 For he who tempts, though in vain, at least asperses The tempted with dishonour foul supposed Not incorruptible of faith, not proof Against temptation; thou thyself with scorn 300And anger wouldst resent the offered wrong, Though ineffectual found; misdeem not, then, If such affront I labour to avert From thee alone, which on us both at once The enemy, though bold, will hardly dare, Or daring, first on me the assault shall light. Nor thou his malice and false guile contemn, Subtle he needs must be, who could seduce Angels, fnor think superfluous others' aid. I, from the influence of thy looks, receive Accèss in every virtue, in thy sight 310 More wise, more watchful, stronger, if need were Of outward strength; (while shame, thou looking on, Shame to be overcome or overreached, Would utmost vigour raise) and raised unite. Why shouldst not thou like sense within thee feel 315 When I am present, and thy trial choose With me, best witness of thy virtue tried?" So spake domestic Adam, in his care And matrimonial love; but Eve, who thought 320 Less attributed to her faith sincere, Thus her reply with accent sweet renewed: " If this be our condition, thus to dwell In narrow circuit, straitened by a foe, + Subtle or violent, we not endued Single with like defence wherever met, How are we happy, still in fear of harm ! But harm precedes not sink only our foe, Tempting, affronts us) with his foul esteem Of our integrity; (his foul esteem Sticks no dishonour on our front, but turns Foul on himself) then wherefore shunned or feared By us? who rather double honour gain From his surmise proved false, find peace within, Favour from Heaven, our witness, from the event. 335 [And what is faith, love, virtue, unassayed Alone, without exterior help sustained?

Left so imperfect by the Maker wise,

As not secure to single or combined. 340 Frail is our happiness, if this be so; And Eden were no Eden, thus exposed." To whom thus Adam fervently replied: "O woman! best are all things as the will Of God ordained them; his creating hand 345Nothing imperfect or deficient left Of all that he created, much less man. Or aught that might his happy state secure,) Secure from outward force; within himself (The danger lies, yet lies within his power;) Against his will he can receive no harm. But God left free the will; for what obeys Reason, is free; fand reason he made right, But bid her well be ward, and still crect, Lest, by some fair-appearing good surprised, 355She dictate false, and misinform the will To do what God expressly hath forbid. Not then mistrust, but tender love, enjoins That I should mind thee oft; and mind thou me. (Firm we subsist, yet possible to swerve;) 360 Since reason not impossibly may meet Some specious object by the fee suborned, And fall into deception unaware, Not keeping strictest watch, as she was warned. Seek not temptation, then which to avoid 365 Were better, and most likely if from me Thou sever not | trial will come unsought. Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve First thy obedience; (the other who can know, Not seeing thee attempted? who attest? 370 But, if thou think trial unsought may find Us both securer than thus warned thou seemst. Go), (for thy stay, not free, absents thee more.) Go in thy native innocence, rely On what thou hast of virtue; summon all; For God towards thee hath done his part; do thine." 375 So spake the patriarch of mankind; but Eve Persisted; yet submiss, though last, replied: "With thy permission, then, and thus forewarned, Chiefly by what thy own last reasoning words Touched only, that our trial, when least sought, 380 May find as both perhaps far less prepared, The willinger I go, nor much expect

A foe so proud will first the weaker seek;

So bent, the more shall shame him his repulse." 385 Thus saying, from her husband's hand her hand Soft she withdrew, and like a Wood-nymph light, Oread or Dryad, or of Delia's train, Betook her to the groves; but Delia's self In gait surpassed and goddess-like deport, 390 Though not, as she, with bow and quiver armed, But with such gardening tools as art, yet rude, Guiltless of fire, had formed, or angels brought. To Pales, or Pomona, thus adorned, Likest she seemed—Pomona, when she fled 395Vertumnus—or to Ceres in her prime, Yet virgin of Proscrpina from Jove. Her long, with ardent look, his eye pursued Delighted, but desiring more her stay. Oft he to her his charge of quick return 400 Repeated; she to him as oft engaged To be returned by noon amid the bower, (And all things in best order) to invite Noontide repast, or afternoon's repose, O, much deceived, much failing, hapless Eve, Of thy presumed return | event perverse! 405Thou never from that hour in Paradise Foundst either sweet repast, or sound repose; Such ambush, hid among sweet flowers and shades, Waited with hellish rancour imminent 410 To intercept thy way, or send thee back Despoiled of innocence—of faith—of bliss! For now, and since first break of dawn, the Fiend, Mere serpent in appearance, forth was come; And on his quest, where likeliest he might find 415 The only two of mankind, but in them The whole included race, his purposed prey. In bower and field he sought, where any tuft Of grove or garden-plot more pleasant lay, Their tendance, or plantation for delight; 420 By fountain or by shady rivulet. He sought them both, but wished his hap might find Eve separate; he wished, but not with hope Of what so seldom chanced; when to his wish-Beyond his hope, Eve separate he spics, Veiled in a cloud of fragrance, where she stood, 425

> Half spied, so thick the roses bushing round About her glowed, oft stooping to support Each flower of tender stalk, whose head, though gay

Carnation, purple, azure or specked with gold,
430 Hung drooping unsustained; them she upstays
Gently with myrtle band, mindless the while
Herself, though fairest unsupported flower,
From her best prop so far, and storm so nigh.
Nearer he drew, and many a walk travérsed

435 Of stateliest covert, cedar, pine, or palm;
Then voluble and bold, now hid, now seen,
Among thick-woven arborets, and flowers
Imbordered on each bank, the hand of Eye;
Spot more delicious than those gardens feigned.

440 Or of revived Adonis, or renowned Alcinous, host of old Laërtes' son, Or that, not mystic, where the sapient king Held dalliance with his fair Egyptian spouse. Much he the place admired, the person more.

445 As one who, long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick and sewers annoy the air,
Forth issuing on a summer's morn, to breathe
Among the pleasant villages and farms
Adjoined, from each thing met conceives delight—

The smell of grain, or tedded grass, or kine,
Or dairy—each rural sight—each rural sound;
If chance, with nymphlike step, fair virgin pass,
What pleasing seemed, for her now pleases more;
She most, and in her look sums all delight;

455 Such pleasure took the Serpent to behold
This flowery plat, the sweet recess of Eve
(Thus early, thus alone) Her heavenly form,—
Angelic, but more soft and feminine,—
Her graceful innocence, her every air

460 Of gesture or least action, overawed His malice, and with rapine sweet bereaved His ficreeness of the fierce intent it brought. That space the Evil One Abstracted stood From his own evil and for the time remained

465 Stupidly good; of enmity disarmed,
Of guile, of hate, of envy, of revenge!
But the hot hell that always in him burns,
Though in mid Heaven, soon ended his delight,
And tortures him now more, the more he sees

470 Of pleasure not for him ordained; then soon Fierce hate he recollects, and all his thoughts Of mischief, gratulating, thus excites:

"Thoughts, whither have ye led me? with what sweet

Compulsion thus transported to forget 475 What hither brought us! hate, not love, nor hope Of Paradise for Hell, hope here to taste Of pleasure, but all pleasure to destroy, (Save what is in destroying) other joy To me is lost. Then, let me not let pass 480 Occasion which now smiles. Behold alone The woman, opportune to all attempts! Her husband (for I view far round) not nigh, Whose higher intellectual more I shun, And strength, of conrage hanghty, and of limb 485 Heroic built, though of terrestrial mould; Foe not informidable exempt from wound, I not; so much hath Hell debased, and pain Enfeebled me, to what I was in Heaven. She fair, divinely fair, fit love for Gods! Not terrible, though terror be in love And beauty not approached by stronger hate Hate stronger, under show of love well feigned; The way which to her ruin now I tend." So spake the Enemy of mankind, enclosed In serpent, inmate bad, and toward Eve 495 Addressed his way; not with indented wave, Prone on the ground, as since, but on his rear, Circular base of rising folds, that towered Fold above fold, a surging maze, his head 500 Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes; With burnished neck of verdant gold, erect Amidst his circling spires, that on the grass Floated redundant. Pleasing was his shape And lovely; never since of serpent kind 505 Lovelier; not those that in Illyria changed Hermione and Cadmus, or the god In Epidaurus; nor to which transformed Ammonian Jove, or Capitoline, was seen, He with Olympias; this with her who bore Scipio, the height of Rome. With tract oblique 510 At first, as one who sought access but feared To interrupt, sidelong he works his way. As when a ship, by skilful steersman wrought Nigh river's mouth or foreland, where the wind 515 Veers oft, as oft so steers, and shifts her sail; So varied he, and of his tortuous train

> Curled many a wanton wreath in sight of Eve, To lure her eye. She, busied, heard the sound

Of rustling leaves, but minded not, as used
520 To such disport before her through the field,
From every beast, more duteous at her call,
Than at Circean call the herd disguised.
He, bolder now, uncalled before her stood,
But as in gaze admiring; oft he bowed

525 His turret crest, and sleek enamelled neck,
Fawning, and licked the ground whereon she trod.
His gentle dumb expression turned at length
The eye of Eve to mark his play; he, glad
Of her attention gained, with serpent-tongue

530 Organic, or impulse of vocal air,

His fraudulent temptation thus began:
"Wonder not, sovran mistress, (if perhaps Thou canst, who art sole wonder,) much less arm
Thy looks, the heaven of mildness, with disdain,

535 Displeased that I approach thee thus, and gaze Insatiate, I thus single, nor have feared Thy awful brow, more awful thus retired. Fairest resemblance of thy Maker fair! Thee all things living gaze on, all things thine

540 By gift, and thy celestial brauty adore With ravishment beheld—there best beheld, Where universally admired. But here In this enclosure wild, these beasts among, Beholders rude, and shallow to discern

545 Half what in thee is fair, one man except,
Who sees thee? (and what is one?) who shouldst be seen
A Goddess among Gods, adored and served
By Angels numberless, thy daily train."

So glozed the Tempter, and his proem tuned.

550 Into the heart of Eve his words made way,
Though at the voice much marvelling; at length,

Not unamazed, she thus in answer spake:

"What may this mean? language of man pronounced By tongue of brute, and human sense expressed!

The first at least of these I thought denied To beasts, whom God, on their creation-day, Created mute to all articulate sound; The latter I demur, for in their looks Much reason, and in their actions, oft appears.

560 Thee, Serpent, subtlest beast of all the field I knew, but not with human voice endued. Redouble then this miracle, and say, How camest thou speakable of mute, and how

m

To me so friendly grown above the rest Of brutal kind, that daily are in sight? 565 · Say, for such wonder claims attention due." To whom the guileful Tempter thus replied: "Empress of this fair world, resplendent Eve! Easy to me it is to tell thee all 570 What thou commandest, and right thou shouldst be obeyed. I was at first as other beasts that graze The trodden herb, of abject thoughts and low, As was my food, nor aught but food discerned, Or sex, and apprehended nothing high; 575Till on a day, roving the field, I chanced A goodly tree far distant to behold Laden with fruit of fairest colours mixed, Ruddy and gold. I nearer drew to gaze; When from the boughs a savoury odour blown, 580 Grateful to appetite, more pleased my sense Than smell of sweetest fennel, or the teats Of ewe or goat dropping with milk at even, Unsucked of lamb or kid, that tend their play. To satisfy the sharp desire I had Of tasting those fair apples, I resolved Not to defer: hunger and thirst at once, Powerful persuaders, quickened at the scent Of that alluring fruit, urged me so keen. About the mossy trunk I wound me soon; 590For, high from ground, the branches would require Thy utmost reach, or Adam's; round the tree All other beasts that saw, with like desire Longing and envying stood, but could not reach. Amid the tree now got, where plenty hung Tempting so nigh, to pluck and eat my fill 595I spared not; for such pleasure, till that hour, At feed, or fountain, never had I found. Sated at length, ere long I might perceive Strange alteration in me to degree 600 Of reason in my inward powers and speech Wanted not long though to this shape retained. Thenceforth to speculations high or deep I turned my thoughts, and, with capacious mind, Considered all things visible in Heaven, Or earth, or middle, all things fair, and good; But all that fair, and good, in thy divine Semblance, and in thy beauty's heavenly ray,

United I beheld; no fair to thine

Equivalent, or second! which compelled

Me thus, though importune perhaps, to come
And gaze, and worship thee, of right declared
Sovran of creatures, universal Dame!"

So talked the spirited sly Snake; and Eve,
Yet more amazed, unwary thus replied:

"Serpent, thy overpraising leaves in doubt

The virtue of that fruit, in thee first proved.

But say, where grows the tree? from hence how far?

For many are the trees of God that grow

In Paradise, and various, yet unknown

620 To us; in such abundance lies our choice,
As leaves a greater store of fruit untouched,
Still hanging incorruptible, till men
Grow up to their provision, and more hands
Help to disburden Nature of her bearth."

To whom the wily Adder, blithe and glad:

"Empress! the way is ready, and not long;
Beyond a row of myrtles, on a flat,
Fast by a mountain, one small thicket past
Of blowing myrrh and balm. If thou accept

630 My conduct, I can bring thee thither soon?'
"Lead then," said Eve. He, leading, swiftly rolled
In tangles and made intricate seem straight,
To mischief swift! Hope elevates, and joy—
Brightens his creat. As when a wandering fire,

Compact of unctuous vapour, which the night Condenses, and the cold environs round, Kindled through agitation to a flame, (Which oft, they say, some evil spirit attends,) Hovering and blazing with delusive light,

Misleads the amazed night-wanderer from his way
To bogs and mires, and oft through pond or pool,
There swallowed pp and lost, from succour far;
So glistered the dire Snake, and into fraud

Led Eve, our credulous mother, to the tree

Of prohibition, root of all our woe;

Which when she saw, thus to her guide she spake:

"Serpent, we might have spared our coming hither,

Fruitless to me, though fruit be here to excess,
The credit of whose virtue rest with thee;
Wondrous indeed, if cause of such effects!

But of this tree we may not taste, nor touch; God so commanded, and left that command Sole daughter of his voice; the rest, we live

Law to ourselves; our reason is our law." To whom the Tempter guilefully replied: " Indeed! hath God then said that of the fruit Of all these garden-trees ye shall not eat, Yet lords declared of all in earth or air ?" To whom thus Eve yet sinless: " Of the fruit 660 Of each tree in the garden we may eat; But of the fruit of this fair tree amidst The garden, God hath said, 'Ye shall not eat Thereof, nor shall ye touch it, lest ye die." She scarce had said, though brief, when now, more bold 665 The Tempter, but with show of zeal and love To man, and indignation at his wrong, New part puts on; and, as to passion moved, Fluctuates disturbed, yet comely, and in act Raised, as of some great matter to begin. 670 As when of old some orator renowned, In Athens, or free Rome, where eloquence Flourished, since mute to some great cause addressed, Stood in himself collected, while each part, Motion, each act, won andience ere the tongue, 675 / Sometimes in height began as no delay Of preface brooking, through his zeal of right; So standing, moving, or to height apprown, The Tempter, all impassioned, thus began: "O sacred, wise, and wisdom-giving Plant, 680 Mother of science! now I feel thy power Within me clear, not only to discern Things in their causes, but to trace the ways Of highest agents, deemed however wise. Queen of this universe! do not believe 685 Those rigid threats of death; ye shall not die, How should you? By the fruit ? it gives you life To knowledge. By the Threatener? look on me,-Me, who have touched and tasted; yet both live, And life more perfect have attained than fate 690 Meant me, by venturing higher than my lot. Shall that be shut to man, which to the beast Is open? or will God incense his ire For such a petty trespass, and not praise Rather your dauntless virtue, whom the pain 695 Of death denounced, (whatever thing death be,) Deterred not from achieving what might lead To happier life—knowledge of good and evil? Of good, how just? of evil, (if what is evil

Be real,) why not known, since easier shunned?)
God therefore cannot hurt ye, and be just;
Not just, not God—nor feared then, nor obeyed;
Your fear itself of death removes the fear,
Why then was this forbid? Why, but to awe?
Why, but to keep ye low and ignorant,
His worshippers? He knows, that in the day

705 His worshippers? He knows, that in the day Ye eat thereof, your eyes, that seem so clear, Yet are but dim, shall perfectly be then Opened and cleared, and ye shall be as Gods, Knowing both good and evil, as they know.

710 That ye should be as Gods, since I as man, Internal man, is but proportion meet 1, of brute, human; ye, of human, Gods.
(So ye shall die perhaps, by putting off Human, to put on Gods); death to be wished,

715 Though threatened, which no worse than this can bring!
And what are Gods, that man may not become
As they, participating godlike food?

(The Gods are first, and that advantage use
On our belieft that all from them proceeds.)

720 I question it; for this fair earth I see,
Warmed by the sun, producing every kind;
Them nothing. If they all things, who enclosed
Knowledge of good and evil in this tree,
That whose eats thereof forthwith attains

725 Wisdom without their leave? and wherein lies
The offence, that man should thus attain to know?
What can your knowledge hurt him, or this tree
Impart against his will, if all be his?
Or is it envy? and can envy dwell

730 In heavenly breasts? These, these and many more Causes import your need of this fair fruit.
Goddess humane, reach then, and freely taste."
He ended; and his words, replete with guile,

Into her heart too easy entrance won.

735 Fixed on the fruit she gazed, which to behold Might tempt alone (and in her ears the sound Yet rung of his persuasive words) impregned With reason, to her seeming, and with truth.

Meanwhile the hour of noon drew on, and waked

740 An eager appetite, raised by the smell So savoury of that fruit, which with desire, Inclinable now grown to touch or taste, Solicited her longing eye; yet first,

Pausing awhile, thus to herself she mused: "Great are thy virtues, doubtless, best of fruits! 745 Though kept from man, and worthy to be admired; Whose taste, too long forborne, at first assay Gave elocution to the mute, and taught The tongue not made for speech to speak thy praise. 750 Thy praise he also, who forbids thy use, Conceals not from us, naming thee the Tree Of Knowledge—knowledge both of good and evil,— Forbids us then to taste; but his forbidding Commends thee more, while it infers the good 755 By thee communicated, and our want; For good unknown sure is not had; or, had And yet unknown, is as not had at all. In plain, then, what forbids he but to know— Forbids us good—forbids us to be wise? (Such prohibitions bind not.) (But if death Bind us with after-bands, what profits then Our inward freedom?) In the day we eat Of this fair fruit, our doom is, we shall die! (How dies the Serpent?) he hath eaten and lives, And knows, and speaks, and reasons, and discerns, Irrational till then! For us alone Was death invented? or to us denied This intellectual food, for beasts reserved? For beasts it seems; yet that one beast which first 770 Hath tasted envies not, but brings with joy The good befallen him, author unsuspect, Friendly to man, far from deceit or guile. What fear I then? (rather, what know to fear Under this ignorance of good or evil, 775 Of God, or death, of law, or penalty? Here grows the cure of all, this fruit divine, Fair to the eye, inviting to the taste, Of virtue to make wise. What hinders then To reach, and feed at once both body and mind?" 780 So saying, her rash hand, in evil hour, Forth reaching to the fruit, she plucked, she eat! Earth felt the wound, and Nature from her seat, Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe, That all was lost! Back to the thicket slunk 785 The guilty Serpent; and well might for Eve, Intent now wholly on her tastel nought else

Regarded; such delight till then, as seemed, In fruit she never tasted, whether true Or fancied so, through expectation high
Of knowledge; nor was Godhead from her thought.
Greedily she engorged without restraint,
(And knew not eating death.) Satiate at length,
And heightened as with wine, jocund and boon,
Thus to herself she pleasingly began:

795 "O sovran, virtuous, precious of all trees

In Paradise! of operation blest
To sapience, hitherto obscured, infamed,
And thy fair fruit let hang, as to no end
Created; but henceforth my early care,

800 Not without song, each morning, and due praise,
Shall tend thee, and the fertile burden ease
Of thy full branches offered free to all;
Till, dieted by thee, I grow mature
In knowledge, as the Gods, who all things know;

Though others envy what they cannot give,
For, had the gift been theirs, it had not here
Thus grown. (Experience, next, to thee I owe, Best guide) not following thee, I had remained
In ignorance; thou openest Wisdom's way

And givest access, though secret she retire.

And I perhaps am secret; Heaven is high,
High, and remote to see from thence distinct
Each thing on earth; and other care, perhaps,
May have diverted from continual watch

815 Our great Forbidder, safe with all his spies
About him. But to Adam in what sort
Shall I appear? Shall I to him make known
As yet my change, and give him to partake
Full happiness with me, or rather not,

820 But keep the odds of knowledge in my power Without copartner? so to add what wants In female sex, the more to draw his love, And render me more equal, and perhaps, A thing not undesirable, sometime

Superior, for, inferior, who is free?
This may be well. But what if God have seen,
And death ensue? then I shall be no more!
And Adam, wedded to another Eve,

Shall live with her enjoying, I extinct;

830 A death to think! Confirmed then I resolve,
Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe;

So dear I love him, that with him all deaths
I could endure, without him live no life."

So saying, from the tree her step she turned; 835 (But first low reverence done,) as to the Power That dwelt within, whose presence had infused Into the plant sciential sap, derived From nectar, drink of Gods. Adam the while, Waiting desirous her return, had wove 840 Of choicest flowers a garland, to adorn Her tresses, and her rural labours crown, As reapers oft are wont their harvest queen. Great joy he promised to his thoughts, and new Solace in her return, so long delayed. Yet oft his heart, divine of something ill,) (Misgave him) he the faltering measure felt; And forth to meet her went, the way she took That morn when first they parted; by the Tree Of Knowledge he must pass; there he her met, 850 (Scarce from the tree returning) in her hand A bough of fairest fruit, that downy smiled,) New gathered, and ambrosial smell diffused. To him she hasted; in her face excuse Came prologue and apology toprompt 855 Which, with bland words at will, she thus addressed: "Hast thon not wondered, Adam, at my stay? Thee I have missed, and thought it long, deprived Thy presence; agony of love till now Not felt—nor shall be twice; for never more 860 Mean I to try, what rash untried I sought, The pain of absence from thy sight. But strange Hath been the cause, and wonderful to hear; This Tree is not, as we are told, a tree Of danger tasted, nor to evil unknown 865 Opening the way, but of divine effect To open eyes, and make them Gods who taste; And hath been tasted such.) The Serpent wise, Or not restrained as we, or not obeying,) Hath eaten of the fruit, and is become, Not dead, as we are threatened, but thenceforth Endued with human voice and human sense, (Reasoning to admiration) and with me Persuasively hath so pretailed, that I Have also tasted, and have also found The effects to correspond, opener mine eyes, 875 Dim erst, dilated spirits, ampler heart,

And growing up to godhead; which for thee Chiefly I sought, without thee can despise.

For bliss, as thou hast part, to me is bliss; 880 Tedious, unshared with thee, and odious soon. Thou therefore also taste, that equal lot May join us—equal joy, as equal love; Lest, thou not tasting, different degree Disjoin us) and (I then too late renonnce Deity for thee, when fate will not permit.") 885 Thus Eve, with countenance blithe, her story told; But in her cheek distemper flushing glowed. On the other side, Adam, soon as he heard The fatal trespass done by Eve, amazed, 890 Astonied stood and blank, while horror chill Ran through his veins, and all his joints relaxed; From his slack hand the garland wreathed for Eve Down dropt, and all the faded roses shed; Speechless he stood and pale; till thus, at length, 895 First to himself he inward silence broke: "O fairest of creation! last and best Of all God's works! creature in whom excelled Whatever can to sight or thought be formed, Holy, divine, good, amiable, or sweet! 900 How art thou lost! how on a sudden lost, Defaced, deflowered, and now to death devote! Rather, how hast thou yielded to transgress The strict forbiddance, how to violate The sacred fruit forbidden! Some cursed fraud 905 Of enemy hath beguiled thee, yet unknown, And me with thee hath ruined; for with thee Certain my resolution is to die. How can I live without thee? how forego Thy sweet converse, and love so dearly joined, 910 To live again in these wild woods forlorn? Should God create another Eve, and I Another rib afford, yet loss of thee Would never from my heart. No, no! I feel The link of nature draw me; flesh of flesh, 915 Bone of my bone thou art; and from thy state Mine never shall be parted, bliss or woe!" So having said, as one from said dismay Recomforted, and, after thoughts disturbed, Submitting to what seemed remediless, 920 Thus in calm mood his words to Eve he turned: "Bold deed thou hast presumed, adventurous Eve!

And peril great provoked, who thus hast dared

Had it been only coveting to eve

	Miles and finite manual to abotingness
005	That sacred fruit—sacred to abstinence;
925	Much more to taste it, under ban to touch.
	But past who can recall, or done undo?
	(Not God omnipotent, nor Fate!) Yet so
	Perhaps thou shalt not die; perhaps the fact
	Is not so heinous now, -foretasted fruit, -
930	Profaned first by the Serpent,—by him first
	Made common, and unhallowed, ere our taste,
	Nor yet on him found deadly; he yet lives;
	Lives, as thou saidst, and gains to live, as man,
	Higher degree of life; (inducement strong
935	Higher degree of life; (inducement strong To us,) as likely, tasting, to attain
	Proportional ascent; which cannot be
	But to be Gods, or Augels—Demigods.
	Nor can I think that God, Creator wise,
	Though threatening, will in carnest so destroy
940	Us his prime creatures, dignified so high,
	Set over all his works; which, in our fall,
	For us created, needs with us must fail,
	Dependent made; so God shall uncreate—
	Be frustrate, do, undo, and labour lose;
945	Not well conceived of God, who, though his power
• 10	Creation could repeat, yet would be loth
	Us to abolish, lest the Adversary
	Triumph, and say, 'Fickle their state whom God
	Most favours! who can please him long? Me first
950	He ruined, now mankind; whom will he next?'—
000	Matter of scorn, not to be given the Foc.
	However, I with thee have fixed my lot,
	Certain to undergo like doom; if death
	Consort with thee, death is to me as life;
955
200	So forcible within my heart I feel
	The bond of nature draw me to my own—
	My own in thee, for what thou art is mine;
	Our state cannot be severed, we are one,
960	One flesh; to lose thee were to lose myself."
900	So Adam; and thus Eve to him replied:
	"O glorious trial of exceeding love,
	Illustrious evidence, example high!
	Engaging me to emulate; but, short
065	Of thy perfection, how shall I attain,
965	Adam? from whose dear side I boast me sprung,
	And gladly of our union hear thee speak,
	One heart, one soul in both; whereof good proof
	This day affords, declaring thee resolved,

Rather than death, or aught than death more dread,
Shall separate us, linked in love so dear,
To undergo with me one guilt, one crime,
If any be, of tasting this fair fruit;
Whose virtue (for of good still good proceeds,
Direct, or by occasion) hath presented
This happy trial of thy lave, which else

975 This happy trial of thy love, which else So eminently never had been known.

Were it I thought death menaced would ensue This my attempt, I would sustain alone The worst, and not persuade thee,—rather die

980 Deserted, than oblige thee with a fact Pernicious to thy peace, chiefly assured Remarkably so late of thy so true, So faithful, love unequalled; but I feel Far otherwise the event; not death, but life

985 Augmented, opened eyes, new hopes, new joys,
Taste so divine, that what of sweet before
Hath touched my sense, flat seems to this and harsh.
On my experience, Adam, freely taste,
And fear of death deliver to the winds."

990 So saying, she embraced him, and for joy Tenderly wept; much won, that he his love Had so ennobled, as of choice to incur Divine displeasure for her sake, or death. In recompense (for such compliance bad 995 Such recompense best merits,) from the bough She gave him of that fair enticing fruit With liberal hand; he scrupled not to cat, Against his better knowledge, not deceived, But fondly overcome with female charm.

1000 Earth trembled from her entrails, as again
In pangs, and Nature gave a second groan;
Sky lowered, and, muttering thunder, some sad drops
Wept at completing of the mortal sin
Original! while Adam took no thought,

1005 Eating his fill, nor Eve to iterate
Her former trespass feared, the more to soothe
Him with her loved society; that now,
As with new wine intoxicated both,
They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel

1010 Divinity within them, breeding wings
Wherewith to scorn the earth. But that false fruit
Far other operation first displayed,
Carnal desire inflaming; he on Eve

Began to cast lascivious eyes; she him

As wantonly repaid; in lust they burn;

Till Adam thus gan Eve to dalliance move:

"Eve! now I see thou art exact of taste
And elegant;—of sapience no small part,
Since to each meaning savour we apply,

1020 And palate call judicious. I the praise
Yield thee, so well this day thou hast purveyed.
Much pleasure we have lost, while we abstained
From this delightful fruit, nor known till now
True relish, tasting; if such pleasure be

In things to us forbidden, it might be wished For this one tree had been forbidden ten.
But come, so well refreshed, now let us play, As meet is, after such delicious fare;
For never did thy beauty, since the day

1030 I saw thee first and wedded thee, adorned With all perfections, so inflame my sense With ardour to enjoy thee, fairer now Than ever, bounty of this virtuous tree!"

So said he, and forbore not glance or toy

Of amorous intent, well understood

Of Eve, whose eye darted contagious fire.

Her hand he seized, and to a shady bank,

Thick over-head with verdant roof embowered,

He led her nothing loth; flowers were the couch,

1040 Pansics, and violets, and asphodel,
And hyacinth,—earth's freshest, softest lap.
There they their fill of love and love's disport
Took largely,—of their mutual guilt the seal,
The solace of their sin; till dewy sleep

Oppressed them, wearied with their amorous play.
Soon as the force of that fallacious fruit,
That with exhibitanting vapour bland
About their spirits had played, and immost powers
Made err, was now exhaled, and grosser sleep,

1050 Bred of unkindly fumes, with conscious dreams
Encumbered, now had left them, up they rose
As from unrest, and, each the other viewing,
Soon found their eyes how opened, and their minds
How darkened. Innocence, that, as a veil,

1055 Had shadowed them from knowing ill, was gone;
Just confidence, and native righteousness,
And honour, from about them, naked left
To guilty Shame; he covered, but his robe

Uncovered more. So rose the Danite strong,
Herculean Samson, from the harlot-lap
Of Philistéan Dalilah, and waked
Shorn of his strength; they, destitute and bare
Of all their virtue. Silent, and in face
Confounded, long they sat, as strucken mute;

Till Adam, though not less than Eve abashed,
At length gave utterance to these words constrained:

"O Eve! in evil hour thou didst give ear To that false worm, of whomsoever taught To counterfeit man's voice, true in our fall,

1070 False in our promised rising; since our eyes
Opened we find indeed, and find we know
Both good and evil,—good lost, and evil got!
Bad fruit of knowledge, if this be to know,
Which leaves us naked thus, of honour void,

1075 Of innocence, of faith, of purity,
Our wonted ornaments now soiled and stained,
And in our faces evident the signs
Of foul concupiscence; whence evil store,
Even shame, the last of evils; of the first

1080 Be sure then. How shall I behold the face
Henceforth of God or Angel, erst with joy
And rapture so oft beheld? Those heavenly shapes
Will dazzle now this earthly with their blaze
Insufferably bright. O might I here

1085 In solitude live savage, in some glade
Obscured, where highest woods, impenetrable
To star or sunlight, spread their umbrage broad,
And brown as evening! Cover me, ye pines!
Ye cedars, with innumerable boughs

1090 Hide me, where I may never see them more!
But let us now, as in bad plight, devise
What best may for the present serve to hide
The parts of each from other, that seem most
To shame obnoxious, and unseemliest seen;

1095 Some tree, whose broad smooth leaves together sewed,
And girded on our loins, may cover round
Those middle parts, that this new-comer, Shame,
There sit not, and reproach us as unclean."
So counselled he, and both together went

1100 Into the thickest wood; there soon they chose
The fig-tree, not that kind for fruit renowned,
But such as, at this day, to Indians known,
In Malabar or Deccan, spreads her arms

18

Branching so broad and long that in the ground
The bended twigs take root, and daughters grow
About the mother-tree, a pillared shade
High over-arched, and echoing walks between;
There oft the Indian herdsman, shunning heat,
Shelters in cool, and tends his pasturing herds

1110 At loop-holes cut through thickest shade. Those leaves
They gathered, broad as Amazonian targe,
And, with what skill they had, together sewed,
To gird their waist; vain covering, if to hide
Their guilt and dreaded shame! O how unlike 1115 To that first naked glory! Such of late

Columbus found the American, so girt
With feathered cincture; naked else and wild
Among the trees on isles and woody shores.
Thus fenced, and, as they thought, their shame in part

1120 Covered, but not at rest or ease of mind,
They sat them down to weep; nor only tears
Rained at their eyes, but high winds worse within Began to rise—high passions, anger, hate,
Mistrust, suspicion, discord; and shook sore

Their inward state of mind, calm region once
And full of peace, now tost and turbulent!
For Understanding ruled not, and the Will Heard not her lore, both in subjection now
To sensual Appetite, who, from beneath,

1130 Usurping, over sovran Reason claimed Superior sway. From thus distempered breast, Adam, estranged in look and altered style, Speech intermitted thus to Eve renewed:

"Would thou hadst hearkened to my words, and stayed

1135 With me, as I besought thee, when that strange Desire of wandering, this unhappy morn, I know not whence possessed thee! we had then Remained still happy; not, as now, despoiled Of all our good—shamed, naked, miserable!

1140 Let none henceforth seek needless cause to approve
The faith they owe; when earnestly they seek Such proof, conclude they then begin to fail."
To whom, soon moved with touch of blame, thus Eye:

"What words have passed thy lips, Adam severe?

1145 Imputest thou that to my default or will
Of wandering, as thou callest it, which who knows
But might as ill have happened, thou being by,
Or to thyself perhaps? Hadst thou been there,

Or here the attempt, thou couldst not have discerned
1150 Fraud in the Serpent, speaking as he spake;
No ground of enmity between us known,
Why he should mean me ill or seek to harm.
Was I to have never parted from thy side?
As good have grown there still a lifeless rib.

1155 Being as I am, why didst not thou, the head, Command me absolutely not to go, Going into such danger, as thou saidst?

Too facile then, thou didst not much gainsay; Nay, didst permit, approve, and fair dismiss.

Hadst thou been firm and fixed in thy dissent,
Neither had I transgressed, nor thou with me."
To whom, then first incensed, Adam replied:
"Is this the love, is this the recompense
Of mine to thee, ingrateful Eve, expressed

1165 Immutable, when thou wert lost, not I,
Who might have lived, and joyed immortal bliss,
Yet willingly chose rather death with thee?
And am I now upbraided as the cause
Of thy transgressing? not enough severe,

It seems, in thy restraint. What could I more?
I warned thee, I admonished thee, foretold
The danger and the lurking enemy
That lay in wait; beyond this, had been force,
And force upon free will hath here no place.

1175 But confidence then bore thee on, secure
Either to meet no danger, or to find
Matter of glorious trial; and perhaps
I also erred, in overmuch admiring
What seemed in thee so perfect, that I thought

1180 No evil durst attempt thee; but I rue
That error now, which is become my crime,
And thou the accuser! Thus it shall befall
Him who, to worth in women overtrusting,
Lets her will rule; restraint she will not brook;

1185 And, left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
She first his weak indulgence will accuse."
Thus they in mutual accusation spent
The fruitless hours, but neither self-condemning;
And in their vain contést appeared no end.

THE ARGUMENT.

Man's transgression known, the guardian Angels forsake Paradisc. and return up to Heaven to approve their vigilance, and are approved; God declaring that the entrance of Satan could not be by them prevented. He sends his Son to judge the transgressors, who descends and gives sentence accordingly; then in pity clothes them both, and re-ascends. Sin and Death, sitting till then at the gates of Hell, by wondrous sympathy feeling the success of Satan in this new world, and the sin by man there committed, resolve to sit no longer confined in Hell, but to follow Satan, their sire, up to the place of man. To make the way easier from Hell to this world to and fro, they pave a broad highway or bridge over Chaos, according to the track that Satan first made; then, preparing for earth, they meet him, proud of his success, returning to Hell; their mutual gratulation. Satan arrives at Pandemonium; in full assembly relates, with boasting, his success against man; instead of applause is entertained with a general hiss by all his audience, transformed with himself also suddenly into serpents, according to his doom given in Paradise; then, deluded with a show of the forbidden tree springing up before them, they, greedily reaching to take of the fruit, chew dust and bitter ashes. The proceedings of Sin and Death. God foretells the final victory of his Son over them, and the renewing of all things; but, for the present, commands his Angels to make several alterations in the heavens and elements. Adam, more and more perceiving his fallen condition, heavily bewails; rejects the condolement of Eve; she persists, and at length appeares him; then, to evade the ourse likely to fall on their offspring, proposes to Adam violent ways, which he approves not, but conceiving better hope, puts her in mind of the late promise made them, that her seed should be revenged on the Serpent, and exhorts her, with him, to seek peace with the offended Deity by repentance and supplication.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK X.

EANWHILE the heinous and despiteful act
Of Satan done in Paradise, and how
He in the serpent had perverted Eve,
Her husband she, to taste the fatal fruit,

5 Was known in Heaven; for what can scape the eye Of God all-seeing, or deceive his heart Omniscient? who, in all things wise and just, Hindered not Satan to attempt the mind Of Man, with strength entire, and free-will armed.

10 Complete to have discovered and repulsed
Whatever wiles of foe or seeming friend.
For still they knew, and ought to have still remembered,
The high injunction not to taste that fruit,
Whoever tempted; which they not obeying

15 Incurred, (what could they less?) the penalty; And, manifold in sin, deserved to fall.

Up into Heaven, from Paradise, in haste The angelic gnards ascended, mute and sad For Man; for of his state by this they knew, Much wondering how the subtle Fiend had st

20 Much wondering how the subtle Fiend had stolen Entrance unseen. Soon as the unwelcome news From earth arrived at Heaven-gate, displeased All were who heard; dim sadness did not spare That time celestial visages, yet, mixed

25 With pity, (violated not their bliss.)

About the new-arrived, in multitudes
The ethereal people ran, to hear and know
How all befell. They towards the throne supreme,
Accountable, made haste, to make appear,

With righteous plea, their utmost vigilance, And easily approved; when the Most High Eternal Father, from his secret cloud Amidst, in thunder uttered thus his voice:

"Assembled Angels, and ye Powers returned
From unsuccessful charge! be not dismayed,
Nor troubled at these tidings from the earth,
Which your sincerest care could not prevent,
(Foretold so lately what would come to pass,)
When first the Tempter crossed the gulf from Hell.

40 I told ye then he should prevail, and speed On his bad errand; man should be seduced, And flattered out of all, believing lies Against his Maker; no decree of mine Concurring to necessitate his fall,

45 Or touch with lightest moment of impulse His free will, to her own inclining left In even scale. But fallen he is; and now What rests, but that the mortal sentence pass On his transgression—death denounced that day?

50 Which he presumes already vain and void,
Because not yet inflicted, as he feared,
By some immediate stroke; but soon shall find
Forbearance no acquittance, ere day end.
(Justice shall not return, as bounty, scorned.)

55 But whom send I to judge them? Whom but thee, Vicegerent Son? To thee I have transferred All judgment, whether in Heaven, or Earth, or Hell. Easy it may be seen that I intend Mercy colleague with justice, sending thee,

60 Man's friend, his Mediator—his designed Both ransom and Redeemer voluntary, And destined Man himself, to judge Man fallen." So spake the Father; and, unfolding bright

Toward the right hand his glory, on the Son
Blazed forth unclouded Deity; he full
Resplendent all his Father manifest
Expressed, and thus divinely answered mild:

"Father Eternal! thine is to decree;
Mine both in Heaven and Earth to do thy will
Supreme; that thou in me, thy Son beloved,

Mayest ever rest well pleased. I go to judge On earth these thy transgressors; but thou knowest, (Whoever judged, the worst on me must light, When time shall be; for so I undertook

When time shall be; for so I undertook

Before thee, and, not repenting, this obtain
Of right, that I may mitigate their doom
On me derived; yet I shall temper so
Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfied, and thee appease.

Attendance none shall need, nor train, where none Are to behold the judgment, but the judged—
Those two; the third best absent is condemned, .
Convict by flight, and rebel to all law;

Conviction to the Serpent none belongs.")

Thus saying, from his radiant seat he rose Of high collateral glory.) Him Thrones, and Powers, Princedoms, and Dominations ministrant.)
Accompanied to Heaven-gate; from whence Eden and all the coast in prospect lay.

90 Down he descended straight; the speed of Gods
Time counts not, though with swiftest minutes winged.

Now was the sun in western cadence low From noon, and gentle airs, due at their hour, To fan the Earth now waked, and usher in

95 The evening cool, when he from wrath more cool Came—the mild Judge and Intercessor both—
To sentence Man. The voice of God they heard Now walking in the garden, by soft winds
Brought to their ears while day declined; they heard,

100 And from his presence hid themselves among The thickest trees, both man and wife, till God, Approaching, thus to Adam called aloud:

Where art thou, Adam, wont with joy to meet My coming seen far off? I miss thee here,

Not pleased, (thus entertained with solitude,)
Where obvious duty erewhile appeared unsought;
Or come I less conspicuous, or what change
Absents thee, or what chance detains? Come forth!"
He came; and with him Eve, more loth, though first

110 To offend, discountenanced both, and discomposed.
Love was not in their looks, either to God
Or to each other, but apparent guilt,
And shame, and perturbation, and despair,
Anger, and obstinacy, and hate, and guile.

115 Whence Adam, faltering long, thus answered brief:

"I heard thee in the garden, and of thy voice Afraid, being naked, hid myself." To whom The gracious Judge, without révile, replied:

"My voice thou oft hast heard, and hast not feared,

120 But still rejoiced; how is it now become
So dreadful to thee? That thou art naked, who Hath told thee? Hast thou eaten of the tree,
Whereof I gave thee charge thou shouldst not eat?"
To whom thus Adam, sore beset, replied:

125 "O Heaven! in evil strait this day I stand
Before my Judge, either to undergo Myself the total crime, or to accuse
My other self, the partner of my life;
Whose failing, while her faith to me remains,

130 I should conceal, and not expose to blame
By my complaint; but strict necessity
Subdues me, and calamitous constraint;
Lest on my head both sin and punishment,
However insupportable, be all

135 Devolved; though, should I hold my peace, yet thou Wouldst easily detect what I conceal.

This woman, whom thou madest to be my help,
And gavest me as thy perfect gift, so good,
So fit, so acceptable, so divine,

140 That from her hand I could suspect no ill, And what she did, whatever in itself, Her doing seemed to justify the deed,— She gave me of the tree, and I did eat,"

To whom the Sovran Presence thus replied:

"Was she thy God, that her thou didst obey
Before his voice? or was she made thy guide,

Superior, or but equal, that to her Thou didst resign thy manhood, and the place Wherein God set thee above her, made of thee,

150 And for thee, whose perfection far excelled Hers in all real dignity? Adorned She was indeed, and lovely, to attract Thy love, not thy subjection; and her gifts Were such, as under government well seemed—

155 Unseemly to bear rule; which was thy part
And person, hadst thou known thyself aright."
So having said, he thus to Eve in few:
"Say, Woman, what is this which thou hast done?"

To whom sad Eve, with shame nigh overwhelmed,

160 Confessing soon, yet not before her Judge

Bold or loquacious, thus abashed replied:
"The Serpent me beguiled, and I did eat!"
Which, when the Lord God heard, without delay

To judgment he proceeded on the accused

165 Serpent, though brute, unable to transfer
The guilt on him who made him instrument
Of mischief, and polluted from the end
Of his creation; justly then accursed
As vitiated in nature. More to know

170 Concerned not man (since he no farther knew),
Nor altered his offence; yet God at last
To Satan, first in sin, his doom applied;
Though in mysterious terms, judged as then best;
And on the Serpent thus his curse let fall:

175 "Because thou hast done this, thou art accursed Above all cattle, each beast of the field; Upon thy belly grovelling thou shalt go, And dust shalt eat all the days of thy life. Between thee and the Woman I will put

180 Enmity, and between thine and her seed;
Her seed shall bruise thy head, thou bruise his heel.'
So spake this oracle, then verified,
When Jesus, son of Mary, second Eve,

Saw Satan fall, like lightning, down from Heaven,

Prince of the air; then, rising from his grave, Spoiled Principalities and Powers, triumphed In open show; and, with ascension bright, Captivity led captive through the air, The realm itself of Satan, long usurped;

Whom he shall tread at last under our feet; Even he, who now foretold his fatal bruise, And to the woman thus his sentence turned: "Thy sorrow I will greatly multiply

195

By thy conception; (children thou shalt bring In sorrow forth), and to thy husband's will

Thine shall submit; he over thee shall rule."
On Adam last thus judgment he pronounced:
"Because thou hast hearkened to the voice of thy wife,

And eaten of the tree, concerning which

200 I charged thee, saying, 'Thou shalt not eat thereof,'
Cursed is the ground for thy sake; thou in sorrow
Shalt eat thereof all the days of thy life;
Thorns also and thistles it shall bring thee forth
Unbid; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field;
205 In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,

Till thou return unto the ground; for thou Out of the ground wast taken, know thy birth, For dust thou art, and shalt to dust return."

So judged he Man, both Judge and Saviour sent,
And the instant stroke of death, denounced that day,
Removed far off; then, pitying how they stood
Before him naked to the air, that now
Must suffer change, disdained not to begin
Thenceforth the form of servant to assume,

As when he washed his servants' feet, so now, As father of his family, he clad
Their nakedness with skins of beasts, or slain,
Or, as the snake, with youthful coat repaid;
And thought not much to clothe his enemies.

220 Nor he their outward only, with the skins
Of beasts, but inward nakedness, much more
Opprobrious, with his robe of righteousness
Arraying, covered from his Father's sight.
To him with swift ascent he up returned,

Into his blissful bosom reassumed
In glory as of old; to him appeased,
All, though all knowing, what had passed with man

Recounted, mixing, intercession sweet.

Meanwhile, ere thus (was sinned and judged) on earth,

Meanwhile, ere thus (was sinned and judged)
230 Within the gates of Hell sat Sin and Death,
In counterview within the gates, that now
Stood open wide, belching outrageous flame
Far into Chaos, since the Fiend passed through,
Sin opening; who thus now to Death began:

235 "O Son! why sit we here each other viewing Idly, while Satan, our great author, thrives In other worlds, and happier seat provides For us, his offspring dear! It cannot be But that success attends him; if mishap, 240 Ere this he had returned, with fury driven By his avengers, since no place like this Can fit his punishment, or their revenge.

Methinks I feel new strength within me rise, Wings growing, and dominion given me large 245 Beyond this deep; whatever draws me on,

Or sympathy, or some connatural force,
Powerful at greatest distance to unite,
With secret amity, things of like kind
By secretest conveyance. Thon, my shade

250 Inseparable, must with me along;

For Death from Sin no power can separate. But, lest the difficulty of passing back Stay his return, perhaps, over this gulf Impassable, impervious, let us try—

255 Adventurous work, yet to thy power and mine Not unagreeable—to found a path Over this main from Hell to that new world, Where Satan now prevails; (a monument Of merit high to all the infernal host)

260 Easing their passage hence, for intercourse, Or transmigration, as their lot shall lead.

Nor can I miss the way, so strongly drawn By this new-felt attraction and instinct."

Whom thus the meagre Shadow answered soon:

"Go, whither fate, and inclination strong, I leads thee; I shall not lag behind, nor err. The way, thou leading; such a scent I draw. Of carnage, prey innumerable, and taste. The savour of death from all things there that live.

270 Nor shall I to the work thou enterprisest
Be wanting, but afford thee equal aid."
So saying, with delight he snuffed the smell
Of mortal change on earth. As when a flock
Of ravenous fowl, though many a league remote,

275 Against the day of battle, to a field
Where armies lie encamped come flying, lured
With scent of living carcasses designed
For death, the following day, in bloody fight;
So scented the grim Feature, and upturned

280 His nostril wide into the murky air,
Sagacious of his quarry from so far.
Then both, from out Hell-gates, into the waste
Wide anarchy of Chaos, damp and dark,
Flew diverse; and with power (their power was great)

285 Hovering upon the waters, what they met
Solid or slimy as in raging sea
Tost up and down, together crowded drove,
From each side shoaling towards the mouth of Hell;
As when two polar winds, blowing adverse

290 Upon the Cronian sea, together drive
Mountains of ice, that stop the imagined way
Beyond Petsora eastward, to the rich
Cathaian coast. The aggregated soil
Death with his mace petrific, cold and dry,

295 As with a trident smote, and fixed as firm

As Delos, floating once; the rest his look Bound with Gorgonian rigour not to move; And with asphaltic slime; broad as the gate, Deep to the roots of Hell the gathered beach

300 They fastened; and the mole immense wrought on,
Over the foaming deep high arched, a bridge
Of length prodigious, joining to the wall
Immoveable of this now fenceless world,
Forfeit to Death; from hence a passage broad,

Smooth, easy, inoffensive, down to Hell.
So, if great things to small may be compared,
Xerxes, the liberty of Greece to yoke,
From Susa, his Memnonian palace high,
Came to the sea, and, over Hellespont

310 Bridging his way, Europe with Asia joined,
And scourged with many a stroke the indignant waves
Now had they brought the work,—by wondrous art
Pontifical,—a ridge of pendent rock,
Over the vexed abyss (following the track

315 Of Satan to the self-same place where he First lighted from his wing, and landed safe From out of Chaos), to the outside bare Of this round world; with pins of adamant And chains they made all fast—too fast they made

320 And durable! And now in little space
The confines met of empyréan Heaven,
And of this world; and, on the left hand, Hell,
With long reach interposed; three several ways,
In sight, to each of these three places led.

325 And now their way to Earth they had descried, To Paradise first tending; when, behold Satan, in likeness of an Angel bright, Betwixt the Centaur and the Scorpion steering His zenith, while the sun in Aries rose.

330 Disguised he came; but those his children dear Their parent soon discerned, though in disguise. He, after Eve seduced, unminded slunk Into the wood fast by, and, changing shape To observe the sequel, saw his guileful act

335 By Eve, though all unweeting, seconded
Upon her husband—saw their shame that sought
Vain covertures; but when he saw descend
The Son of God to judge them, terrified
He fled; not hoping to escape, but shun

340 The present; fearing, guilty, what his wrath

Might suddenly inflict; that past, returned By night, and listening where the hapless pair Sat in their sad discourse and various plaint, Thence gathered his own doom; which understood Not instant, but of future time, with joy

345 Not instant, but of future time, with joy And tidings fraught, to Hell he now returned, And at the brink of Chaos, near the foot Of this new wondrous pontifice, unhoped Met who to meet him came, his offspring dear.

350 Great joy was at their meeting, and at sight Of that stupendous bridge his joy increased. Long he admiring stood, till Sin, his fair Enchanting daughter, thus the silence broke:

"O Parent! these are thy magnific deeds—

Thy trophies (which thou viewest as not thine own; Thou art their author and prime architect; For I no sooner in my heart divined (My heart, which by a secret harmony Still moves with thine, joined in connexion sweet)

360 That thou on earth hadst prospered, which thy looks Now also evidence, but straight I felt, Though distant from thee worlds between—yet felt That I must after thee, with this thy son; Such fatal consequence unites us three,

305 Hell could no longer hold us in her bounds,
Nor this unvoyageable gulf obscure
Detain from following thy illustrious track.
Thou hast achieved our liberty, confined
Within Hell-gates till now; thou us empowered

370 To fortify thus far, and overlay,
With this portentous bridge, the dark abyss.
Thine now is all this world; thy virtue bath won
What thy hands builded not; thy wisdom gained,
With odds, what war hath lost, and fully avenged

375 Our foil in Heaven; here thou shalt monarch reign— There didst not; there let him still victor sway As battle hath adjudged—from this new world Retiring, by his own doom alienated, And henceforth monarchy with thee divide

380 Of all things, parted by the empyreal bounds,
His quadrature, from thy orbicular world;
Or try thee now more dangerous to his throne."
Whom thus the Prince of Darkness answered of Whom thus the Prince of Darkness answered glad: "Fair daughter! and thou son and grandchild both!

385 High proof ye now have given to be the race

390

Of Satan (for I glory in the name,
Antagonist of Heaven's Almighty king),
Amply have merited of me, of all
The infernal empire, that, so near Heaven's door,
Triumphal with triumphal act have met,
Mine with this glorious work, and made one realm,
Hell and this world—one realm, one continent
Of easy thoroughfare. Therefore, while I
Descend through darkness, on your road with ease.

To my associate Powers, them to acquaint
With these successes, and with them rejoice,
You two this way, among these numerous orbs,
All yours, right down to Paradise descend;
There dwell, and reign in bliss; thence on the earth

400 Dominion exercise and in the air,
Chiefly on Man, sole lord of all declared;
Him first make sure your thrall, and lastly kill.
My substitutes I send ye, and create
Plenipotent on earth, of matchless might

405 Issuing from me; on your joint vigour now My hold of this new kingdom all depends, Through Sin to Death exposed by my exploit. If your joint power prevail, the affairs of Hell No detriment need fear. Go, and be strong!"

So saying, he dismissed them; they with speed Their course through thickest constellations held, Spreading their bane; the blasted stars looked wan, And planets, planet-struck, real eclipse Then suffered. The other way Satan went down

415 The causey to Hell-gate; on either side
Disparted Chaos overbuilt exclaimed,
And with rebounding surge the bars assailed
That scorned his indignation. Through the gate,
Wide open and unguarded, Satan passed;

420 And all about found desolate; for those,
Appointed to sit there, had left their charge,
Flown to the upper world; the rest were all
Far to the inland retired, about the walls
Of Pandemonium—city and proud seat

Of Lucifer, so by allusion called
Of that bright star to Satan paragoned;
There kept their watch the legions, while the grand
In council sat, solicitous what chance
Might intercept their emperor sent; so he 430 Departing gave command, and they observed.

As when the Tartar from his Russian foe, By Astracan, over the snowy plains, Retires, or Bactrian Sophi, from the horns Of Turkish crescent, leaves all waste beyond

The realm of Aladule, in his retreat
To Tauris or Casbeen; so these, the late
Heaven-banished host, left desert utmost Hell
Many a dark league, reduced in careful watch
Round their metropolis; and now expecting,

440 Each hour, their great adventurer, from the search
Of foreign worlds. He through the midst, unmarked,
In show plebeian Angel militant
Of lowest order, passed, and from the door
Of that Plutonian hall, invisible

445 Ascended his high throne, which under state Of richest texture spread at the upper end Was placed in regal lustre. Down awhile He sat, and round about him saw, unseen; At last, as from a cloud, his fulgent head

4.50 And shape star-bright appeared, or brighter, clad With what permissive glory since his fall Was left him, or false glitter. All amazed At that so sudden blaze, the Stygian throng Bent their aspect, and whom they wished beheld,—

Their mighty chief returned. Loud was the acclaim; Forth rushed in haste the great consulting peers, Raised from their dark divan, and with like joy Congratulant approached him, who with hand, Silence, and with these words attention won:

"Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers For in possession such, not only of right, I call ye, and declare ye now, returned Successful beyond hope, to lead ye forth Triumphant out of this infernal pit

Abominable, accursed, the house of woe,
And dungeon of our tyrant; now possess,
As lords, a spacious world, to our native Heaven
Little inferior, by my adventure hard
With peril great achieved. Long were to tell

470 What I have done—what suffered, with what pain Voyaged the unreal, vast, unbounded deep Of horrible confusion, over which By Sin and Death a broad way now is paved To expedite your glorious march; but I

475 Toiled out my uncouth passage, forced to ride

The untractable abyss, plunged in the womb Of unoriginal Night, and Chaos wild, That, jeulous of their secrets fiercely opposed My journey strange, with clamorous uproar

480 Protesting Fate supreme; thence how I found
The new-created world, which fame in Heaven
Long had foretold—a fabric wonderful
Of absolute perfection! therein Man
Placed in a Paradise, by our exile

485 Made happy. Him by fraud I have seduced From his Creator, and, the more to increase Your wonder) with an apple! He, thereat Offended, (worth your laughter!) hath given up Both his beloved Man and all his world

490 To Sin and Death a prey, and so to us,
Without our hazard, labour, or alarm,
To range in, and to dwell, and over Man
To rule, as over all he should have ruled.
True is, me also he hath judged; or rather

495 Me not, but the brute scrpent, in whose shape
Man I deceived; (that which to me belongs
Is enmity,) which he will put between
Me and mankind; I am to bruise his heel;
His seed (when is not set,) shall bruise my head.

500 A world who would not purchase with a bruise,
Or much more grievous pain? Ye have the account
Of my performance; what remains, ye Gods!
But up, and enter now into full bliss?"
So having said, awhile he stood, expecting

Their universal shout, and high applanse,
To fill his car; when, contrary, he hears
On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
A dismal universal hiss,—the sound
Of public scorn; he wondered, but not long

Had leisure, wondering at himself now more;
His visage drawn he felt to sharp and spare,
His arms clung to his ribs, his legs entwining
Each other, till, supplanted, down he fell
A monstrous serpent, on his belly prone,

515 (Reluctant, but in vain) a greater Power
Now ruled him, punished in the shape he sinned,
According to his doom. He would have spoke
But hiss for hiss returned with forked tongue
To forked tongue; for now were all transformed

520 Alike, to serpents all, as accessories

To his bold riot. Dreadful was the din Of hissing through the hall, thick-swarming now With complicated monsters, head and tail, Scorpion, and asp, and amphisbæna dire,

525 Cerastes horned, hydrus, and elops drear, And dipsas (not so thick swarmed once the soil Bedropt with blood of Gorgon, or the isle Ophiusa); but still greatest he, the midst, Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun

530 Engendered in the Pythian vale on slime,— Huge Python; and his power no less he seemed Above the rest still to retain. They all
Him followed, issuing forth to the open field,
Where all yet left of that revolted rout,

Heaven-fallen, in station stood, or just array, Sublime with expectation when to see In triumph issuing forth their glorious chief. They saw, but other sight instead—a crowd Of ugly serpents. Horror on them fell,

5.40 And horrid sympathy; for what they saw
They felt themselves now changing; down their arms—
Down fell both spear and shield—down they as fast,
And the dire hiss renewed, and the dire form
Catched by contagion, like in punishment,

545 As in their crime. Thus was the applause they meant Turned to exploding hiss—triumph to shame,
Cast on themselves from their own months. There stood A grove hard by, sprung up with this their change,
(His will who reigns above) to aggravate

Their penance, laden with fair fruit, like that Which grew in Paradise, the bait of Eve Used by the Tempter; on that prospect strange Their earnest eyes they fixed, imagining For one forbidden tree a multitude

555 Now risen, to work them further woe or shame;
Yet, parched with scalding thirst and hunger fierce,
Though to delude them sent, could not abstain,
But on they rolled in heaps, and, up the trees
Climbing, sat thicker than the snaky locks

560 That curled Mcgæra. Greedily they plucked
The fruitage, fair to sight, like that which grew
Near that bituminous lake where Sodom flamed;
This, more delusive, not the touch, but taste
Deceived; they, fondly thinking to allay

565 Their appetite with-gust, instead of fruit

590

Chewed bitter ashes, which the offended taste With spattering noise rejected. Oft they assayed, Hunger and thirst constraining; drugged as oft, With hatefulest disrelish writhed their jaws,

570 With soot and cinders filled; so oft they fell Into the same illusion, not as Man,
Whom they triùmphed, once lapsed. Thus were they plagued,
And, worn with famine, long and ceaseless hiss,
Till their lost shape, permitted, they resumed;

575 Yearly enjoined, some say, to undergo
This annual humbling certain numbered days,
To dash their pride and joy, for Man seduced.
However, some tradition they dispersed
Among the heathen of their purchase got;

580 And fabled how the Serpent, whom they called Ophion, with Eurynome (the wide-Encroaching Eve perhaps), had first the rule Of high Olympus, thence by Saturn driven And Ops, ere yet Dictæan Jove was born.

Meanwhile, in Paradise the hellish pair
Too soon arrived; Sin there in power before,
Once actual, now in body, and to dwell
Habitual habitant; behind her Death,
Close following, pace for pace, not mounted yet

On his pale horse; to whom Sin thus begun:
"Second of Satan sprung, all-conquering Death!
What thinkest thou of our empire now, though earned
With travail difficult, not better far
Than still at Hell's dark threshold to have sat watch,

595 Unnamed, undreaded, and thyself half-starved?"

Whom thus the sin-born monster answered soon: "To me, who with eternal famine pine,
Alike is Hell, or Paradise, or Heaven;

There best, where most with ravin I may meet;
Which here, though plenteous, all too little seems
To stuff this maw—this vast unhidebound corpse."

To whom the incestuous mother thus replied:
"Thou therefore on these herbs, and fruits, and flowers,
Feed first; on each beast next, and fish, and fowl—

605 No homely morsels; and whatever thing
The scythe of Time mows down devour unspared;
Till I, in man residing, through the race,
His thoughts, his looks, words, actions, all infect,
And season him thy last and sweetest prey."

This said, they both betook them several ways,

Both to destroy, or unimmortal make All kinds, and for destruction to mature Sooner or later; which the Almighty seeing, From his transcendent seat the Saints among,

615 To those bright Orders uttered thus his voice:

"See! with what heat these dogs of Hell advance
To waste and havoc yonder world, which I
So fair and good created! and had still Kept in that state, had not the folly of man

620 Let in these wasteful furies, who impute
Folly to me, (so doth the Prince of Hell
And his adherents,) that, with so much ease,
I suffer them to enter and possess
A place so heavenly, and, conniving, seem

G25 To gratify my scornful enemies,
That laugh, as if, transported with some fit
Of passion, I to them had quitted all,
At random yielded up to their misrule;

And know not that I called and drew them thither,

630 My hell-hounds, to lick up the draff and filth Which Man's polluting sin with taint hath shed On what was pure; till, crammed and gorged, nigh burst With sucked and glutted offal, at one sling Of thy victorious arm, well-pleasing Son,

Both Sin, and Death, and yawning Grave, at last,
Through Chaos hurled, obstruct the mouth of Hell
For ever, and scal up his ravenous jaws.
Then Heaven and Earth, renewed, shall be made pure
To sanctity that shall receive no stain;

Till then, the curse pronounced on both precedes."

He ended, and the heavenly audience loud

Sung Hallelniah, as the sound of seas,

Through multitude that sung: "Just are thy ways,

Righteous are thy decrees on all thy works;

645 Who can extenuate thee?" Next, to the Son,
Destined Restorer of mankind, by whom
New Heaven and Earth shall to the ages rise,
Or down from Heaven descend. Such was their song;
While the Creator, calling forth by name

650 His mighty Angels, gave them several charge,
As sorted best with present things. The sun
Had first his precept so to move, so shine,
As might affect the earth with cold and heat
Scarce tolerable, and from the north to call

655 Decrepit winter, from the south to bring

Solstitial summer's heat. To the blanc moon Her office they prescribed; to the other five Their planetary motions, and aspects, In sextile, square, and trine, and opposite,

Of noxious efficacy, and when to join
In synod unbenign; and taught the fixed
Their influence malignant when to shower;
Which of them rising with the sun, or falling,
Should prove tempestuous. To the winds they set

Their corners, when with bluster to confound Sea, air, and shore; the thunder when to roll With terror through the dark aërial hall.

Some say, he bid his Angels turn askance
The poles of earth twice ten degrees and more

670 From the sun's axle; they with labour pushed Oblique the centric globe; some say, the sun Was bid turn reins from the equinoctial road Like distant breadth to Taurus with the seven Atlantic Sisters, and the Spartan Twins,

Up to the tropic Crab; thence down amain
By Leo, and the Virgin, and the Scales,
As deep as Capricorn; to bring in change
Of seasons to each clime a else had the spring
Perpetual smiled on earth with vernant flowers,

630 Equal in days and nights, except to those Beyond the polar circles; to them day Had unbenighted shone, while the low sun, To recompense his distance, in their sight Had rounded still the horizon, and not known

685 Or east or west; which had forbid the snow From cold Estotiland, and south as far Beneath Magellan. (At that tasted fruit,) The sun, as from Thyéstean banquet, turned His course intended; else, how had the world

Inhabited, though sinless, more than now Avoided pinching cold and scorching heat?
These changes in the heavens, though slow, produced Like change on sea and land, sideral blast, Vapour, and mist, and exhalation hot

695 Corrupt and pestilent; now, from the north Of Norumbega, and the Samoed shore, Bursting their brazen dungeon, armed with ice, And snow, and hail, and stormy gust and flaw, Boreas, and Cæcias, and Argestes loud,

700 And Thrascias, rend the woods, and seas úpturn;

With adverse blast upturns them from the south Notus, and Afer black with thunderous clouds From Serraliona; thwart of these, as fierce, Forth rush the Levant, and the Ponent winds,

705 Eurus and Zephyr, with their lateral noise, Sirocco and Libecchio. Thus began Outrage from lifeless things; but Discord first, Daughter of Sin, among the irrational Death introduced, through fierce antipathy;

710 Beast now with beast gan war, and fowl with fowl, And fish with fish; to graze the herb all leaving Devoured each other; nor stood much in awe Of Man, but fled him, or, with countenance grim, Glared on him passing. These were, from without,

715 The growing miseries, which Adam saw
Already in part, though hid in gloomiest shade,
To sorrow abandoned, but worse felt within,
And, in a troubled sea of passion tost,
Thus to disburden sought with sad complaint:

720 "O miserable of happy! is this the end Of this new glorious world, and me so late The glory of that glory, who now, become Accursed of blessed, hide me from the face Of God, whom to behold was then my height

725 Of happiness! Yet well, if here would end The misery! I deserved it, and would bear My own deservings; but this will not serve; All that I eat or drink, or shall beget, Is propagated curse. O voice, once heard

730 Delightfully, 'Encrease and multiply;'
Now death to hear! for what can I encrease
Or multiply, but curses on my head?
Who, of all ages to succeed, but, feeling
The evil on him brought by me, will curse

735 My head? 'Ill fare our ancestor impure!
For this we may thank Adam!' but his thanks
Shall be the execration. So, besides
Mine own that bide upon me, all from me
Shall with a fierce reflux on me redound—

740 On me, as on their natural centre, light
Heavy, though in their place. O fleeting joys
Of Paradise, dear bought with lasting woes!
Did I request thee, Maker! from my clay
To mould me man? Did I solicit thee

745 From darkness to promote me, or here place

In this delicions garden? (As my will Concurred not to my being) it were but right And equal to reduce me to my dust, Desirous to resign and render back

750 All I received, unable to perform
Thy terms too hard, by which I was to hold
The good I sought not. To the loss of that Sufficient penalty, why hast thou added
The sense of endless woes? (Inexplicable

755 Thy justice seems? yet, to say truth, too late I thus contest; then should have been refused Those terms, whatever, when they were proposed. Thou didst accept them; wilt thou enjoy the good, Then cavil the conditions? And, though God

760 Made thee without thy leave, what if thy son Prove disobedient, and, reproved, retort, 'Wherefore didst thou beget me? I sought it not!' Wouldst thou admit for his contempt of thee That proud excuse? yet him not thy election, 765 But natural necessity, begot.

God made thee of choice his own, and of his own
To serve him; thy reward was of his grace;
Thy punishment then justly is at his will.
Be it so, for I submit; his doom is fair,

770 That dust I am, and shall to dust return.
O welcome hour whenever! Why delays
His hand to execute what his decree
Fixed on this day? Why do I overlive?
Why am I mocked with death, and lengthened out

775 To deathless pain? How gladly would I meet Mortality, my sentence, and be earth Insensible! How glad would lay me down As in my mother's lap! There I should rest, And sleep secure; his dreadful voice no more

780 Would thunder in my ears; no fear of worse
To me and to my offspring would torment me
With cruel expectation. Yet one doubt
Pursues me still, lest all I cannot die;
Lest that pure breath of life, the spirit of Man

785 Which God inspired, cannot together perish
With this corporeal clod; then, in the grave,
Or in some other dismal place, who knows
But I shall die a living death? O thought
Horrid, if true! Yet why? It was but breath
790 Of life that sinned; what dies, but what had life

And sin? The body properly hath neither.
All of me then shall die; let this appease
The doubt, since human reach no further knows.
For though the Lord of all be infinite.

For, though the Lord of all be infinite,

795 Is his wrath also? Be it. Man is not so,
But mortal doomed. How can he exercise
Wrath without end on Man, whom death must end?
Can he make deathless death? That were to make Strange contradiction, which to God himself

800 Impossible is held, as argument
Of weakness, not of power. Will he draw out,
For anger's sake, finite to infinite,
In punished man, to satisfy his rigour,
Satisfied never? That were to extend

His sentence beyond dust and nature's law,
By which all causes else, according still
To the reception of their matter act;
Not to the extent of their own sphere. But say
That death be not one stroke, as I supposed.

810 Bereaving sense, but endless misery
From this day onward, which I feel began
Both in me, and without me, and so last
To perpetuity.—Ay me! that fear
Comes thundering back with dreadful revolution

Am found eternal, and incorporate both;
Nor I on my part single; in me all
Posterity stands cursed. Fair patrimony
That I must leave ye, sons! O, were I able 820 To waste it all myself, and leave ye none!

So disinherited, how would you bless
Me, now your enrse! Ah, why should all mankind,
For one man's fault, thus guiltless be condemned?—
If guiltless. But from me what can proceed,

825 But all corrupt, both mind and will depraved,
Not to do only, but to will the same
With me? How can they then acquitted stand
In sight of God? Him, after all disputes,
Forced I absolve; all my evasious vain,

830 And reasonings, though through mazes, lead me still But to my own conviction; first and last On me—me only, as the source and spring Of all corruption, all the blame lights due; So might the wrath! Fond wish! couldst thou support

835 That burden, heavier than the earth to bear-

20

Than all the world much heavier, though divided With that bad woman? Thus, what thou desirest, And what thou fearest, alike destroys all hope Of refuge, and concludes thee miserable

840 Beyond all past example and future;
To Satan only like, both crime and doom.
O Conscience! into what abyss of fears
And horrors hast thou driven me; out of which I find no way, from deep to deeper plunged!"

Thus Adam to himself lamented loud
Through the still night, not now, as ere man fell,
Wholesome, and cool, and mild, but with black air
Accompanied, with damps and dreadful gloom;
Which to his evil conscience represented

850 All things with double terror. On the ground Outstretched he lay—on the cold ground; and oft Cursed his creation, Death as oft accused Of tardy execution, since denounced The day of his offence. "Why comes not Death,"

855 Said he, "With one thrice-acceptable stroke
To end me? Shall Truth fail to keep her word,
Justice divine not hasten to be just?
But Death comes not at call; Justice divine
Mends not her slowest pace for prayers or cries.

O woods, O fountains, hillocks, dales, and bowers!
With other echo late I taught your shades
To answer, and resound far other song."

Whom, thus afflicted, when sad Eve beheld, Desolate where she sat, approaching nigh, Soft words to his fierce passion she assayed;

But her, with stern regard, he thus repelled:
"Out of my sight, thou serpent! That name best
Befits thee, with him leagued, thyself as false
And hateful; (nothing wants, but that thy shape,

870 Like his, and colour serpentine) may show
Thy inward fraud, to warn all creatures from thee
Henceforth; lest that too heavenly form, pretended
To hellish falsehood, snare them! But for thee
I had persisted happy, had not thy pride

875 And wandering vanity, when least was safe,
Rejected my forewarning, and disdained
Not to be trusted—longing to be seen,
Though by the Devil himself him overweening
To overreach; but, with the serpent meeting,

880 Fooled and beguiled; -by him thou, I by thee,

To trust thee from my side, imagined wise, Constant, mature, proof against all assaults;) And understood not all was but a show, Rather than solid virtue; all but a rib

885 Crooked by nature,—{bent, as now appears,
(More to the part sinister,)—from me drawn;
Well if thrown ont, as supernumerary
To my just number found! O! why did God,
Creator wise, that peopled highest Heaven

890 With Spirits masculine, create at last
This novelty on earth, this fair defect
Of Nature?—and not fill the world at once
With Men, as Angels, without feminine?
Or find some other way to generate

895 Mankind? This mischief had not then befallen,
And more that shall befall—innumerable
Disturbances on earth through female snares,
And strait conjunction with this sex. For either
He never shall find out fit mate, but such

900 As some misfortune brings him, or mistake;
Or whom he wishes most shall seldom gain,
Through her perverseness, but shall see her gained
By a far worse; or, if she love, withheld
By parents; or his happiest choice too late

905 Shall meet already linked and wedlock-bound/ To a fell adversary, his hate, or shame; Which infinite calamity shall cause To human life, and household peace confound."

To human life, and household peace confound."

He added not, and from her turned; but Eve,

Not so recorded with teams that seemed not flowing

910 Not so repulsed, with tears that ceased not flowing, And tresses all disordered, at his feet Fell humble, and, embracing them, besought His peace, and thus proceeded in her plaint:

"Forsake me not thus, Adam! Witness, Heaven, 915 What love sincere, and reverence, in my heart I bear thee, and unweeting have offended,

Unhappily deceived! Thy suppliant I beg and clasp thy knees; bereave me not Whereon I live,—thy gentle looks, thy aid,

920 Thy counsel, in this uttermost distress,
My only strength, and stay. Forlorn of thee,
Whither shall I betake me? where subsist?
While yet we live—scarce one short hour perhaps,— Between us two let there be peace; both joining.

925 As joined in injuries, one enmity

970

Against a fee by doom express assigned us, That cruel Serpent! on me exércise not Thy hatred for this misery befallen, On me already lost-me than thyself 930 Both have sinned; but thou More miserable. Against God only, I against God and thee; And to the place of judgment will return; There with my cries importune Heaven, that all The sentence, from thy head removed, may light 935 On me, sole cause to thee of all this woe, Me-me only-just object of his ire!" She ended weeping; and her lowly plight, Immoveable, till peace obtained from fault Acknowledged and deplored, in Adam wrought Soon his heart relented 940 Commiseration. Towards her, his life so late, and sole delight, Now at his feet submissive in distress! Creature so fair his reconcilement seeking. His counsel, whom she had displeased, his aid; 945 As one disarmed his anger all he lost, And thus with peaceful words upraised her soon: "Unwary, and too desirons (as before, So now) of what thou knowest not, who desirest The punishment all on thyself. Alas! 950Bear thine own first, ill able to sustain His full wrath, whose thou feelest as yet least part, And my displeasure bearest so ill. If prayers Could alter high decrees, I to that place Would speed before thee, and be louder heard, 955That on my head all might be visited, Thy frailty and infirmer sex forgiven, To me committed, and by me exposed. But rise; let us no more contend, nor blame Each other, blamed enough elsewhere; but strive 960In offices of love, how we may lighten Each other's burden, in our share of woe; Since this day's death denounced, if aught I see, Will prove no sudden, but a slow-paced evil, A long day's dying, to augment our pain, 965 And to our seed (O hapless seed!) derived." To whom thus Eve, recovering heart, replied: "Adam! by sad experiment I know How little weight my words with thee can find, Found so erroueous; thence by just event

Found so unfortunate! nevertheless.

Restored by thee, vile as I am, to place Of new acceptance, hopeful to regain Thy love, (the sole contentment of my heart,) Living or dying, from thee I will not hide 975 What thoughts in my unquiet breast are risen, Tending to some relief of our extremes, Or end—though sharp and sad, yet tolerable, As in our evils, and of easier choice. If care of our descent perplex us most, 980 Which must be born to certain woe, devoured By Death at last,—and miscrable it is, To be to others cause of misery, Our own begotten, and of our loins to bring Into this cursed world a woeful race, 985 That after wretched life must be at last Food for so foul a monster,—in thy power It lies, yet ere conception, to prevent The race amblest, to being yet ambegot. Childless thou art; childless remain; so Death 990 Shall be deceived his glut, and with us two Be forced to satisfy his ravenous maw. But if thou judge it hard and difficult, Conversing, looking, loving, to abstain From love's due rites, unptial embraces sweet, 995And with desire to languish without hope, Before the present object languishing With like desire, which would be misery And torment less than none of what we dread; Then, both ourselves and seed at once to free 1000 From what we fear for both, let us make short; Let us seek Death, or, he not found, supply, With our own hands, his office on ourselves.) Why stand we longer shivering under fears That show no end but death, and have the power, Of many ways to die the shortest choosing,). 1005 Destruction with destruction to destroy?" She ended here, or vehement despair Broke off the rest; so much of death her thought Had entertained, as dyed her cheeks with pale. But Adam, with such counsel nothing swayed; 1010 To better hopes his more attentive mind Labouring had raised, and thus to Eve replied: "Eve! thy contempt of life and pleasure seems To argue in thee something more sublime And excellent than what thy mind contemns: 1015

But self-destruction therefore sought refutes That excellence thought in thee, and implies, Not thy contempt, but anguish and regret For loss of life and pleasure overloved.

1020 Or if thou covet death, as utmost end
Of misery, so thinking to evade
The penalty pronounced, doubt not but God
Hath wiselier armed his vengeful ire than so
To be forestalled; much more I fear lest death

1025 So snatched will not exempt us from the pain We are by doom to pay; rather such acts Of contumacy will provoke the Highest To make death in us live. Then let us seek Some safer resolution, which methinks

1030 I have in view, calling to mind with heed
Part of our sentence, that 'Thy seed shall bruise
The scrpent's head.' Piteous amends! unless
Be meant, whom I conjecture, our grand foe,
Satan, who, in the scrpent, hath contrived

1035 Against us this deceit; to crush his head Would be revenge indeed; which will be lost By death brought on ourselves, or childless days Resolved, as thou proposest; so our foe Shall scape his punishment ordained, and we,

1040 Instead, shall double ours upon our heads.

No more be mentioned then of violence
Against ourselves; and wilful barrenness,
That cuts us off from hope, and savours only
Rancour and pride, impatience and despite,

1045 Reluctance against God and his just yoke
Laid on our necks. Remember with what mild
And gracious temper he both heard, and judged,
Without wrath or reviling; we expected
Immediate dissolution, which we thought

1050 Was meant by death that day; when, lo! to thee Pains only in child-bearing were foretold, And bringing forth, soon recompensed with joy, Fruit of thy womb; on me the curse aslope Glanced on the ground; with labour I must earn

1055 My bread; what harm? Idleness had been worse;
My labour will sustain me. And, lest cold
Or heat should injure us, his timely care
Hath, unbesought, provided, and his hands
Clothed us unworthy, pitying while he judged;
1060 How much more, if we pray him, will his ear

Be open, and his heart to pity incline, And teach us further by what means to shun The inclement seasons, rain, ice, hail, and snow? Which now the sky, with various face, begins

To show us in this mountain, while the winds
Blow moist and keen, shattering the graceful locks
Of these fair-spreading trees; which bids us seek
Some better shroud, some better warmth, to cherish
Our limbs benumbed, ere this diurnal star

1070 Leave cold the night, how we his gathered beams
Reflected may with matter sere foment,
Or, by collision of two bodies, grind
The air attrite to fire, as late the clouds
Justling, or pushed with winds, rude in their shock,

Tine the slant lightning, whose thwart flame driven down Kindles the gummy bark of fir or pine,
And sends a comfortable heat from far,
Which might supply the sun. Such fire to use,
And what may else be remedy or cure

To evils which our own misdeeds have wrought,

(He will instruct us praying) and of grace
Beseeching him, so as we need not fear

To pass commodiously this life, sustained
By him with many comforts, till we end

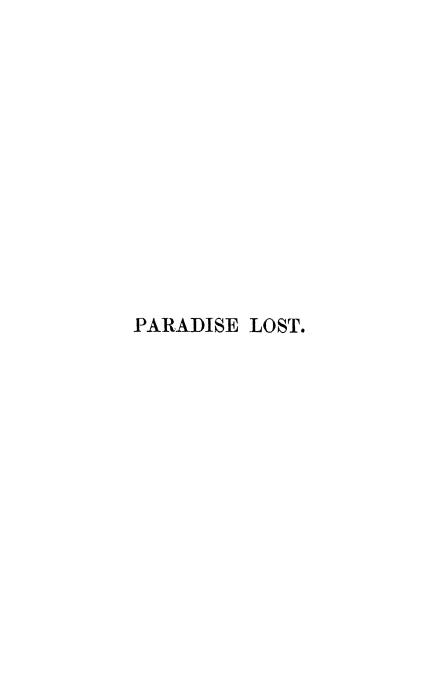

1085 In dust—our final rest and native home.

What better can we do, than, to the place
Repairing where he judged us, prostrate fall
Before him reverent, and there confess
Humbly our faults, and pardon beg, with tears

1090 Watering the ground, and with our sighs the air Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign Of sorrow unfeigned and humiliation meek? Undoubtedly he will relent, and turn From his displeasure, in whose look screne,

When angry most he seemed, and most severe,
What else but favour, grace, and mercy shone?"
So spake our father penitent; nor Eve
Felt less remorse. They, forthwith to the place
Repairing where he judged them, prostrate fell

1100 Before him reverent, and both confessed Humbly their faults, and pardon begged, with tears Watering the ground, and with their sighs the air Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign Of sorrow unfeigned and humiliation meek.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE Son of God presents to his Father the prayers of our first parents now repenting, and intercedes for them. God accepts them, but declares that they must no longer abide in Paradise; sends Michael with a band of Cherubim to dispossess them; but first to reveal to Adam future things; Michael's coming down. Adam shows to Eve certain ominous signs; he discerns Michael's approach; goes out to meet him; the Angel denounces their departure. Eve's lamentation. Adam pleads, but submits; the Angel leads him up to a high hill; sets before him in vision what shall happen till the flood.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK XI.

Praying; for from the mercy-seat above
Prevenient grace descending had removed
The stony from their hearts, and made new flesh
Regenerate grow instead, that sighs now breathed
Unutterable, which the Spirit of prayer
Inspired, and winged for Heaven with speedier flight
Than loudest oratory; yet their port
Not of mean suitors, nor important less
Seemed their petition, than when the ancient pair

In fables old, less ancient yet than these,
Deucalion and chaste Pyrrha, to restore
The race of mankind drowned, before the shrine
Of Themis stood devout. To Heaven their prayers

15 Flew up, nor missed the way, by envious winds
Blown vagabond or frustrate; in they passed
Dimensionless through heavenly doors; then, clad
With incense, where the golden altar fumed,
By their great Intercessor, came in sight

20 Before the Father's throne; them the glad Son Presenting thus to intercede began:

"See, Father, what first-fruits on earth are sprung. From thy implanted grace in Man! these sighs And prayers, which, in this golden censer, mixed
With incense, I thy priest before thee bring;
Fruits of more pleasing savour, from thy seed
Sown with contrition in his heart, than those
Which, his own hand manuring, all the trees
Of Paradise could have produced, ere fallen

30 From innocence. Now therefore bend thine ear To supplication; hear his sighs, though mute; Unskilful with what words to pray, let me Interpret for him, me, his Advocate And propitiation; all his works on me,

35 Good or not good, ingraft; my merit those
Shall perfect, and for these my death shall pay.
Accept me, and in me from these receive
The smell of peace toward mankind; let him live
Before thee, reconciled, at least his days

40 Numbered, though sad, till death, his doom (which I To mitigate thus plead, not to reverse,)
To better life shall yield him; where with me All my redeemed may dwell in joy and bliss,
Made one with me as I with thee am one."

To whom the Father, without cloud, screne:
"All thy request for Man, accepted Son,
Obtain; all thy request was my decree.
But, longer in that Paradise to dwell
The law I gave to Nature him forbids;

Those pure immortal elements, that know No gross, no unharmonious mixture foul, Eject him tainted now, and purge him off, As a distemper, gross, to air as gross, And mortal food, as may dispose him best

55 For dissolution, wrought by sin, that first Distempered all things, and of incorrupt Corrupted. I, at first, with two fair gifts Created him endowed—with happiness And immortality; that fondly lost,

60 This other served but to eternize woe,
Till I provided death; so death becomes
His final remedy, and, after life
Tried in sharp tribulation, and refined
By faith and faithful works, to second life,

65 Waked in the renovation of the just, Resigns him up with heaven and earth renewed. But let us call to synod all the Blest Through Heaven's wide bounds; from them I will not hide 'My judgments, how with mankind I proceed,

As how with peccant Angels late they saw,

And in their state, though firm, stood more confirmed."

He ended, and the Son gave signal high

To the bright minister that watched; he blew

His trumpet, heard in Oreb since, perhaps,

75 When God descended, and perhaps once more To sound at general doom. The angelic blast Filled all the regions; from their blissful bowers Of amarantine shade; fountain or spring, By the waters of life, where'er they sat

80 In fellowships of joy, the Sons of Light Hasted, resorting to the summons high, And took their seats, till, from his throne supreme, The Almighty thus pronounced his sovran will:

"O sons, like one of us man is become

85 To know both good and evil, since his taste Of that defended fruit; but let him boast His knowledge of good lost and evil got; Happier, had it sufficed him to have known Good by itself and evil not at all.

90 He sorrows now, repents, and prays contrite,
My motions in him; longer than they move,
His heart I know how variable and vain,
Self-left. Lest therefore his now bolder hand
Reach also of the Tree of Life, and eat,

95 And live for ever, dream at least to live For ever, to remove him I decree,
And send him from the garden forth, to till The ground whence he was taken, fitter soil!
Michael! this my behest have thou in charge;

Take to thee from among the Cherubin
Thy choice of flaming warriors, lest the Fiend,
Or in behalf of man, or to invade
Vacant possession, some new trouble raise;
Haste thee, and from the Paradise of God,

105 Without remorse, drive out the sinful pair,
From hallowed ground the unholy, and denounce
To them, and to their progeny, from thence Perpetual banishment. Yet, lest they faint
At the sad sentence rigorously urged,

110 (For I behold them softened, and with tears Bewailing their excess,) all terror hide. If patiently thy bidding they obey, Dismiss them not disconsolate; reveal

- To Adam what shall come in future days,

 As I shall thee enlighten; intermix

 My covenant in the Woman's seed renewed.

 So send them forth, though sorrowing, yet in peace;

 And on the east side of the garden place,

 Where entrance up from Eden casiest climbs,
- 120 Cherubic watch, and of a sword the flame
 Wide-waving, all approach far off to fright,
 And guard all passage to the Tree of Life;
 Lest Paradise a receptacle prove
 To Spirits foul, and all my trees their prey,

125 With whose stolen fruit Man once more to delude."

He ceased; and the archangelic Power prepared

For swift descent; with him the cohort bright

Of watchful Cherubim; four faces each

Had, like a double Janus; all their shape

130 Spangled with eyes more numerous than those Of Argus, and more wakeful than to drowse, Charmed with Arcadian pipe, the pastoral reed Of Hermes, or his opiate rod. Meanwhile, To resalute the world with sacred light,

135 Lencothea waked, and with fresh dews embalmed
The earth, when Adam and first matron Eve
Had ended now their orisons, and found
Strength added from above—new hope to spring
Out of despair, joy, but with fear yet linked;

140 Which thus to Eve his welcome words renewed:

"Eve, easily may faith admit that all
The good which we enjoy from Heaven descends;
But that from us aught should ascend to Heaven
So prevalent as to concern the mind

145 Of God high-blest, or to incline his will,
Hard to belief may seem; yet this will prayer,
Or one short sigh of human breath, upborne
Even to the seat of God; for, since I sought
By prayer the offended Deity to appease,

150 Kneeled and before him humbled all my heart,
Methought I saw him placable and mild,
Bending his ear; persuasion in me grew
That I was heard with favour; peace returned
Home to my breast, and to my memory

155 His promise, that thy seed shall bruise our foe; Which, then not minded in dismay, yet now Assures me that the bitterness of death Is past, and we shall live. Whence hail to thee,

Eve rightly called, mother of all mankind,
Mother of all things living, since by thee
Man is to live, and all things live for Man."

To whom thus Eve, with sad demeanour meek: "Ill worthy I such title should belong

To me transgressor, who, for thee ordained

A help, became thy snare; to me reproach
Rather belongs, distrust and all dispraise.
But infinite in pardon was my Judge,
That I, who first brought death on all, am graced
The source of life; next favourable thou,

170 Who highly thus to entitle me vouchsafest,
Far other name deserving. But the field
To labour calls us, now with sweat imposed,
Though after sleepless night; for see! the Morn,
All unconcerned with our unrest, begins

175 Her rosy progress smiling. Let us forth,
I never from thy side henceforth to stray,
Where'er our day's work lies, though now enjoined
Laborious till day droop; while here we dwell,
What can be toilsome in these pleasant walks?

180 Here let us live, though in fallen state, content."
So spake, so wished, much-humbled Eve; but Fate
Subscribed not. Nature first gave signs, impressed
On bird, beast, air; air suddenly eclipsed,
After short blush of Morn; nigh in her sight

The bird of Jove, stooped from his aery tour,
Two birds of gayest plume before him drove;
Down from a hill the beast that reigns in woods,
First hunter then, pursued a gentle brace,
Goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind;

Direct to the eastern gate was bent their flight.
Adam observed, and, with his eye the chase
Pursuing, not unmoved, to Eve thus spake:

"O Eve, some further change awaits us nigh, Which Heaven by these mute signs in nature shows

195 Forerunners of his purpose, or to warn
Us, haply too secure of our discharge
From penalty because from death released
Some days; how long, and what till then our life,
Who knows? or more than this, that we are dust,

200 And thither must return, and be no more?
Why else this double object in our sight,
Of flight pursued in the air and o'er the ground,
One way the self-same hour? why in the east

Darkness ere day's mid-course, and morning-light

205 More orient in you western cloud, that draws
O'er the blue firmament a radiant white,
And slow descends, with something heavenly fraught?"
He erred not; for by this the heavenly bands
Down from a sky of jasper lighted now

210 In Paradise, and on a hill made halt; A glorious apparition, had not doubt And carnal fear that day dimmed Adam's eye. Not that more glorious, when the Angels met Jacob in Mahanaïm, where he saw

215 The field pavilioned with his gnardians bright;
Nor that which on the flaming mount appeared
In Dothan, covered with a camp of fire,
Against the Syrian king, who to surprise
One man, assassin-like, had levied war,

220 War unproclaimed. The princot Hierarch In their bright stand there left his Powers to seize Possession of the garden; he alone, To find where Adam sheltered, took his way, Not unperceived of Adam, who to Eve, 225 While the great visitant approached, thus spake:

"Eve, now expect great tidings, which perhaps
Of us will soon determine, or impose
New laws to be observed; for I descry,
From youder blazing cloud that veils the hill,

230 One of the heavenly host, and, by his gait,
None of the meanest—some great Potentate,
Or of the Thrones above, such majesty
Invests him coming; yet not terrible,
That I should fear, nor sociably mild,

235 As Raphaël, that I should much confide; But solemn and sublime; whom, not to offend, With reverence I must meet, and thou retire."

He ended; and the Archangel soon drew nigh, Not in his shape celestial, but as man

240 Clad to meet man. Over his lucid arms
A military vest of purple flowed,
Livelier than Melibosan, or the grain
Of Sarra, worn by kings and heroes old
In time of truce; Iris had dipt the woof.

245 His starry helm unbuckled showed him prime In manhood where youth ended; by his side, As in a glistering zodiac, hung the sword, Satan's dire dread, and in his hand the spear.

Adam bowed low; he, kingly, from his state 250 Inclined not, but his coming thus declared:

"Adam! Heaven's high behest no preface needs; Sufficient that thy prayers are heard, and Death, Then due by sentence when thou didst transgress, Defeated of his seizure many days,

255 Given thee of grace, wherein thou mayest repent,
And one bad act with many deeds well done
Mayest cover. Well may then thy Lord, appeased,
Redeem thee quite from Death's rapacious claim;
But longer in this Paradise to dwell

260 Permits not; to remove thed I am come,
And send thee from the garden forth, to till
The ground whence then wast taken, fitter soil."
He added not; for Adam, at the news

Heart-struck, with chilling gripe of sorrow stood,

265 That all his senses bound; Eve, who unseen Yet all had heard, with audible lament Discovered soon the place of her retire:

"O nexpected stroke, worse than of death

"O unexpected stroke, worse than of death! Must I thus leave thee, Paradise? thus leave

270 Thee, native soil! these happy walks and shades, Fit haunt of Gods? where I had hope to spend, Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day. That must be mortal to us both. O flowers, That never will in other climate grow,

275 My early visitation, and my last
At even, which I bred up with tender hand
From the first opening bud, and gave ye names!
Who now shall rear ye to the sun, or rank
Your tribes, and water from the ambrosial fount?

280 Thee lastly, nuptial bower! by me adorned
With what to sight or smell was sweet, from thee
How shall I part, and whither wander down
Into a lower world, to this obscure
And wild? how shall we breathe in other air

285 Less pure, accustomed to immortal fruits?"
Whom thus the Angel interrupted mild:
"Lament not, Eve, but patiently resign
What justly thou hast lost; nor set thy heart,
Thus over-fond, on that which is not thine.

290 Thy going is not lonely; with thee goes
Thy husband; him to follow thou art bound;
Where he abides, think there thy native soil."
Adam, by this from the cold sudden damp

Recovering, and his scattered spirits returned, 295 To Michael thus his humble words addressed: " Celestial! whether among the Thrones, or named Of them the highest, for such of shape may seem Prince above Princes, gently hast thou told Thy message, which might else in telling wound, And in performing end us. What besides Of sorrow, and dejection, and despair, Our frailty can sustain, thy tidings bring; Departure from this happy place, our sweet Recess, and only consolation left 305 Familiar to our eyes! all places else Inhospitable appear, and desolate, Nor knowing us, nor known. And, if by prayer Incessant I could hope to change the will Of him who all things can, I would not cease 310 To weary him with my assiduous cries; But prayer against his absolute decree No more avails than breath against the wind, Blown stifling back on him that breathes it forth; Therefore to his great bidding I submit. 315 This most afflicts me, that, departing hence, As from his face I shall be hid, deprived His blessed countenance; here I could frequent, With worship, place by place where he vouchsafed Presence Divine; and to my sons relate,— 320 'On this mount he appeared; under this tree Stood visible; among these pines his voice I heard; here with him at this fountain talked.' So many grateful altars I would rear Of grassy turf, and pile up every stone 325 Of lustre from the brook, in memory Or monument to ages, and thereon Offer sweet-smelling gums, and fruits, and flowers. In yonder nether world where shall I seek His bright appearances, or footstep trace? 330 For though I fled him angry, yet, recalled To life prolonged and promised race, I now Gladly behold though but his atmost skirts Of glory, and far off his steps adore." To whom thus Michael with regard benign:

All the earth he gave thee to possess and rule,
340 No despicable gift; surmise not then
His presence to these narrow bounds confined
Of Paradise, or Eden. This had been
Perhaps thy capital seat, from whence had spread
All generations, and had hither come

345 From all ends of the Earth, to celebrate
And reverence thee, their great progenitor.
But this pre-eminence thou hast lost, brought down
To dwell on even ground now with thy sons.
Yet doubt not but in valley and in plain,

350 God is, as here, and will be found alike
Present; and of his presence many a sign
Still following thee, still compassing thee round
With goodness and parental love, his face
Express, and of his steps the track divine.

355 Which that thou mayest believe, and be confirmed Ere thou from hence depart, know I am sent To show thee what shall come in future days To thee and to thy offspring; good with bad Expect to hear, supernal grace contending

360 With sinfulness of men; thereby to learn True patience; and to temper joy with fear And pious sorrow; equally inured By moderation either state to bear, Prosperous or adverse; so shalt thou lead

365 Safest thy life, and best prepared endure
Thy mortal passage when it comes. Ascend
This hill; let Eve (for I have drenched her eyes)
Here sleep below, while thou to foresight wakest;
As once thou sleptest, while she to life was formed."

370 To whom thus Adam gratefully replied:
"Ascend; I follow thee, safe guide, the path
Thou leadest me, and to the hand of Heaven submit,
However chastening; to the evil turn
My obvious breast, arming to overcome

375 By suffering, and earn rest from labour won, If so I may attain." So both ascend In the visions of God. It was a hill, Of Paradise the highest; from whose top, The hemisphere of Earth, in clearest ken, 380 Stretched out to the amplest reach of prospect lay.

Not higher that hill nor wider looking round,
Whereon, for different cause, the Tempter set
Our second Adam, in the wilderness,

To show him all Earth's kingdoms, and their glory. His eye might there command wherever stood 385 City of old or modern fame, the seat Of mightiest empire, from the destined walls Of Cambalu, seat of Cathaian Can, And Samarchand by Oxas, Temir's throne, To Paquin of Sinean kings; and thence 390 To Agra and Lahor of great Mogul, Down to the golden Chersonese; or where The Persian in Echatan sat, or since In Hispahan; or where the Russian Ksar In Mosco; or the Sultan in Bizance, 395Turchestan-born; nor could his eye not ken The empire of Negus to his utmost port Ercoco, and the less maritime kings, Mombaza, and Quiloa, and Melind, 400 And Sofala, thought Ophir, to the realm Of Congo, and Angola farthest south; Or thence from Niger flood to Atlas mount, The kingdoms of Almansor, Fez and Sus, Marocco, and Algiers, and Tremisen; 405 On Europe thence, and where Rome was to sway The world. In spirit perhaps he also saw Rich Mexico, the seat of Montezume,

The world. In spirit perhaps he also saw
Rich Mexico, the seat of Montezume,
And Cusco in Peru, the richer seat
Of Atabalipa; and yet unspoiled

410 Guiana, whose great city Geryon's sons
Call El Dorado. But to nobler sights,
Michael from Adam's eyes the film removed,
Which that false fruit that promised clearer sight
Had bred; then purged with euphrasy and rue

And from the well of life three drops instilled.

So deep the power of these ingredients pierced,
Even to the inmost seat of mental sight,
That Adam, now enforced to close his eyes,

420 Sunk down, and all his spirits became entranced;
But him the gentle Angel by the hand
Soon raised, and his attention thus recalled:

"Adam, now ope thine eyes, and first behold The effects, which thy original crime hath wrought In some to spring from thee, who never touched The excepted tree, nor with the Snake conspired; Nor sinned thy sin, yet from that sin derive "Corruption to bring forth more violent deeds."

His eyes he opened, and beheld a field,
430 Part arable and tilth, whereon were sheaves
New-reaped, the other part sheep-walks and folds;
In the midst an altar as the landmark stood,
Rustic, of grassy sord; thither anon
A sweaty reaper from his tillage brought

435 First fruits, the green ear and the yellow sheaf, Unculled, as came to hand; a shepherd next, More meek, came with the firstlings of his flock, Choicest and best; then, sacrificing, laid

The inwards and their fat, with incense strewed,

440 On the cleft wood, and all due rites performed.

His offering soon propitious fire from Heaven
Consumed with nimble glance, and grateful steam;
The other's not, for his was not sincere;
Whencet he july more and as they talked

The other's not, for his was not sincere; Whereat he inly raged, and, as they talked, Smote him into the midriff with a stone

445 Smote him into the midriff with a stone
That beat out life; he fell, and, deadly pale,
Groaned out his soul, with gushing blood effused.
Much at that sight was Adam in his heart
Dismayed, and thus in haste to the Angel cried:

450 "O Teacher, some great mischief hath befallen
To that meek man, who well had sacrificed;
Is piety thus and pure devotion paid?

To whom Michael thus, he also moved, replied:
"These two are brethren, Adam, and to come

455 Out of thy loins. The unjust the just hath slain, For envy that his brother's offering found From Heaven acceptance; but the bloody fact Will be avenged, and the other's faith, approved, Lose no reward, though here thou see him die,

460 Rolling in dust and gore." To which our sire:

"Alas! both for the deed, and for the cause!

But have I now seen Death? Is this the way
I must return to native dust? O sight
Of terror, foul and ugly to behold!

465 Horrid to think! how horrible to feel!"

To whom thus Michaël: "Death thou hast seen
In his first shape on man; but many shapes
Of Death, and many are the ways that lead
To his grim cave, all dismal; yet to sense

470 More terrible at the entrance, than within.

Some, as thou sawest, by violent stroke shall die;

By fire, flood, famine, by intemperance more
In meats and drinks, which on the earth shall bring

Diseases dire, of which a monstrous crew

Before thee shall appear, that thou mayest know
What misery the inabstinence of Eve
Shall bring on men." Immediately a place
Before his eyes appeared, sad, noisome, dark;
A lazar-house it seemed, wherein were laid

480 Numbers of all diseased; all maladies
Of ghastly spasm, or racking torture, qualms
Of heart-sick agony, all feverous kinds,
Convulsions, epilepsies, fierce catarrhs,
Intestine stone, and ulcer, colic pangs,

485 Demoniac phrenzy, moping melancholy,
And moon-struck madness, pining atrophy,
Marasmus, and wide-wasting pestilence,
Dropsies, and asthmas, and joint-racking rheums.
Dire was the tossing, deep the groans; Despair

490 Tended the sick busiest from couch to couch;
And over them triumphant Death his dart
Shook, but delayed to strike, though oft invoked
With vows as their chief good and final hope.
Sight so deform what heart of rock could long

495 Dry-eyed behold? Adam could not, but wept,
Though not of woman born; compassion quelled
His best of man, and gave him up to tears
A space, till firmer thoughts restrained excess;
And, scarce recovering words, his plaint renewed:

500 "O miserable mankind! to what fall Degraded, to what wretched state reserved! Better end here unborn. Why is life given To be thus wrested from us? rather, why Obtruded on us thus? who, if we knew

505 What we receive, would either not accept Life offered, or soon beg to lay it down; Glad to be so dismissed in peace. Can thus The image of God in man, created once So goodly and erect, though faulty since,

510 To such unsightly sufferings be debased
Under inhuman pains? Why should not man,
Retaining still divine similitude
In part, from such deformities be free,
And, for his Maker's image sake, exempt?

"Their Maker's image," answered Michael, "then Forsook them, when themselves they vilified To serve ungoverned Appetite, and took His image whom they served—a brutish vice, Inductive mainly to the sin of Eve.

Therefore so abject is their punishment,

520

Disfiguring not God's likeness, but their own; Or, if his likeness, by themselves defaced, While they pervert pure Nature's healthful rules

To loathsome sickness; worthily, since they God's image did not reverence in themselves."

525 God's image did not reverence in themselves."

"I yield it just," said Adam, "and submit.
But is there yet no other way, besides
These painful passages, how we may come
To Death, and mix with our connatural dust?"

"There is," said Michael, "if thou well observe
The rule of 'Not too much,' by temperance taught,
In what thou eatest and drinkest; seeking from thence
Due nourishment, not gluttonous delight,
Till many years over thy head return.

535 So mayest thou live, till, like ripe fruit, thou drop
Into thy mother's lap; or be with ease
Gathered, not harshly plucked, for death mature.
This is old age; but then, thou must outlive
Thy youth, thy strength, thy beauty, which will change

540 To withered, weak, and gray; thy senses then, Obtuse, all taste of pleasure must forego, To what thou hast; and, for the air of youth, Hopeful and cheerful, in thy blood will reign A melancholy damp of cold and dry,

545 To weigh thy spirits down, and last consume
The balm of life." To whom our ancestor:
"Henceforth I fly not death, nor would prolong
Life much, bent rather how I may be quit,
Fairest and easiest, of this cumbrous charge,

Which I must keep till my appointed day
Of rendering up, and patiently attend
My dissolution." Michael replied:
"Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou livest
Live well; how long, or short, permit to Heaven.

555 And now prepare thee for another sight."

He looked, and saw a spacious plain, whereon Were tents of various hue; by some were herds Of cattle grazing; others, whence the sound Of instruments that made melodious chime

Was heard, of harp and organ, and who moved Their stops and chords was seen; his volant touch Instinct through all proportions; low and high, Fled, and pursued transverse the resonant fugue.

565	In other part stood one who, at the forge Labouring, two massy clods of iron and brass Had melted, (whether found where casual fire Had wasted woods, on mountain or in vale,
570	Down to the veins of earth, thence gliding hot To some cave's mouth, or whether washed by stream From under ground); the liquid ore he drained Into fit moulds prepared; from which he formed First his own tools; then, what might else be wrought Fusil, or graven in metal. After these,
575	But on the hither side, a different sort From the high neighbouring hills, which was their seat Down to the plain descended; by their guise
580	Just men they seemed, and all their study bent To worship God aright, and know his works Not hid; nor those things last, which might preserve Freedom and peace to men. They on the plain Long had not walked, when from the tents behold A bevy of fair women, richly gay
585	In gems and wanton dress; to the harp they sung Soft amorous ditties, and in dance came on; The men, though grave, eyed them, and let their eyes Rove without rein, till, in the amorous net Fast caught, they liked, and each his liking chose;
590	And now of love they treat, till the evening star, Love's harbinger, appeared; then, all in heat, They light the nuptial torch, and bid invoke Hymen, then first to marriage rites invoked; With feast and music all the tents resound.
595	Such happy interview, and fair event Of love and youth not lost, songs, garlands, flowers, And charming symphonies, attached the heart Of Adam, soon inclined to admit delight, The bent of nature; which he thus expressed:
6 00	"True opener of mine eyes, prime Angel blest! Much better seems this vision, and more hope Of peaceful days portends, than those two past; Those were of hate and death, or pain much worse;
605	Here Nature seems fulfilled in all her ends." To whom thus Michael: "Judge not what is best By pleasure, though to nature seeming meet; Created, as thou art, to nobler end Holy and pure, conformity divine. Those tents thou sawest so pleasant were the tents Of wickedness, wherein shall dwell his race."

Who slew his brother; studious they appear
610 Of arts that polish life, inventors rare;
Unmindful of their Maker, though his Spirit
Taught them; but they his gifts acknowledged none.
Yet they a beauteous offspring shall beget;
For that fair female troop thou sawest, that seemed

Of goddesses, so blithe, so smooth, so gay, Yet empty of all good, wherein consists Woman's domestic honour and chief praise, Bred only and completed to the taste Of lustful appetence, to sing, to dance,

620 To dress, and troll the tongue, and roll the eye;
To these that sober race of men, whose lives
Religious titled them the sons of God,
Shall yield up all their virtue, all their fame,
Ignobly, to the trains and to the smiles

625 Of these fair atheists, and now swim in joy,
Ere long to swim at large, and laugh, for which
The world erelong a world of tears must weep."
To whom thus Adam, of short joy bereft:
"O pity and shame, that they, who to live well

630 Entered so fair, should turn aside to tread
Paths indirect, or in the midway faint!
But still I see the tenor of man's woe
Holds on the same—from woman to begin."

"From man's effeminate slackness it begins,"
Said the Angel, "who should better hold his place
By wisdom, and superior gifts received.
But now prepare thee for another scene."

He looked, and saw wide territory spread Before him—towns, and rural works between,

Cities of men with lofty gates and towers, Concourse in arms, fierce faces threatening war, Giants of mighty bone and bold emprise; Part wield their arms, part curb the foaming steed, Single or in array of battle ranged 645 Both horse and foot, nor idly mustering stood.

One way a band select from forage drives
A herd of beeves, fair oxen and fair kine,
From a fat meadow-ground, or fleecy flock,
Ewes and their bleating lambs, over the plain,

650 Their booty; scarce with life the shepherds fly,
But call in aid, which makes a bloody fray;
With cruel tournament the squadrons join;
Where cattle pastured late, now scattered lies

22

With carcasses and arms the ensanguined field
Deserted. Others to a city strong
Lay siege, encamped, by battery, scale, and mine,
Assaulting; others from the wall defend
With dart and javelin, stones and sulphurous fire;
On each hand slaughter, and gigantic deeds.

Good In other part the sceptred heralds call To council in the city-gates; anon Gray-headed men and grave, with warriors mixed, Assemble, and harangues are heard; but soon In factious opposition; till at last

665 Of middle age one rising, eminent
In wise deport, spake much of right and wrong,
Of justice, of religion, truth, and peace,
And judgment from above; him old and young
Exploded, and had seized with violent hands,

670 Had not a cloud descending snatched him thence,
Unseen amid the throng. So violence
Proceeded, and oppression, and sword-law
Through all the plain, and refuge none was found.
Adam was all in tears, and to his guide

675 Lamenting turned full sad: "O, what are these?

Death's ministers, not men! who thus deal death
Inhumanly to men, and multiply
Ten thousand-fold the sin of him who slew
His brother; for of whom such massacre

680 Make they, but of their brethren, men of men?
But who was that just man, whom had not Heaven
Rescued, had in his righteousness been lost?"

To whom thus Michael: "These are the product Of those ill-mated marriages thou sawest;

Where good with bad were matched, who of themselves
Abhor to join, and, by imprudence mixed,
Produce prodigious births of body or mind.
Such were these giants, men of high renown;
For in those days might only shall be admired,

690 And valour and heroic virtue called;
To overcome in battle, and subdue
Nations, and bring some spoils with infinite
Man-slaughter, shall be held the highest pitch
Of human glory; and, for glory done,

695 Of triumph, to be styled great conquerors,
Patrons of mankind, Gods, and sons of Gods;
Destroyers rightlier called, and plagues of men.
Thus fame shall be achieved, renown on Earth.

And what most merits fame, in silence hid.

700 But he, the seventh from thee, whom thou beheldest
The only righteous in a world perverse,
And therefore hated, therefore so beset

With foes, for daring single to be just,
And utter odious truth, that God would come

705 To judge them with his Saints—him the most High,
Rapt in a balmy cloud with winged steeds,
Did, as thou sawest, receive, to walk with God
High in salvation and the climes of bliss,
Exempt from death, to show thee what reward

710 Awaits the good, the rest what punishment;
Which now direct thine eyes and soon behold."
He looked, and saw the face of things quite changed;
The brazen throat of war had ceased to roar;

All now was turned to jollity and game,

715 To luxury and riot, feast and dance,
Marrying or prostituting, as befell,
Rape or adultery, where passing fair
Allured them; thence from cups to civil broils.
At length a reverend sire among them came,

720 And of their doings great dislike declared,
And testified against their ways; he oft
Frequented their assemblies, whereso met,
Triumphs or festivals, and to them preached
Conversion and repentance, as to souls

725 In prison, under judgments imminent;
But all in vain. Which when he saw, he ceased
Contending, and removed his tents far off;
Then, from the mountain hewing timber tall,

Began to build a vessel of huge bulk,

730 Measured by cubit, length, and breadth, and height, Smeared round with pitch; and in the side a door Contrived; and of provisions laid in large, For man and beast; when, lo, a wonder strange! Of every beast, and bird, and insect small

735 Came sevens and pairs, and entered in as taught
Their order; last the sire and his three sons,
With their four wives; and God made fast the door.
Meanwhile the south-wind rose, and, with black wings
Wide hovering, all the clouds together drove

740 From under Heaven; the hills, to their supply,
Vapour, and exhalation; dusk and moist;
Sent up amain; and now the thickened sky
Like a dark ceiling stood; down rushed the rain

Impetuous; and continued, till the earth
No more was seen; the floating vessel swum
Uplifted, and secure with beaked prow
Rode tilting o'er the waves; all dwellings else
Flood overwhelmed, and them with all their pomp
Deep under water rolled; sea covered sea,

750 Sea without shore; and in their palaces,
Where luxury late reigned, sea-monsters whelped
And stabled; of mankind, so numerous late,
All left in one small bottom swum embarked.
How didst thou grieve then, Adam, to behold

755 The end of all thy offspring, end so sad,
Depopulation! Thee another flood,
Of tears and sorrow a flood thee also drowned,
And sunk thee as thy sons; till, gently reared

By the Angel, on thy feet thou stoodst at last,
Though comfortless, as when a father mourns
His children all in view destroyed at once;
And scarce to the Angel utteredst thus thy plaint:

"O visions ill foreseen! Better had I Lived ignorant of future! so had borne

765 My part of evil only, each day's lot
Enough to bear; those now, that were dispensed
The burden of many ages, on me light
At once, by my foreknowledge gaining birth
Abortive, to torment me, ere their being,

770 With thought that they must be. Let no man seek Henceforth to be foretold, what shall befall Him or his children; evil he may be sure, Which neither his foreknowing can prevent; And he the future evil shall no less

775 In apprehension than in substance feel
Grievous to bear. But that care now is past;

Man is not whom to warn; those few escaped Famine and anguish will at last consume, Wandering that watery desert. I had hope,

780 When violence was ceased, and war on earth,
All would have then gone well, peace would have crowned
With length of happy days the race of man;
But I was far deceived; for now I see
Peace to corrapt no less than war to waste.

785 How comes it thus, unfold, celestial Guide,
And whether here the race of man will end."
To whom thus Michael: "Those, whom last thou sawest
In triumph and luxurious wealth, are they

First seen in acts of prowess eminent 790 And great exploits, but of true virtue void; Who, having spilt much blood, and done much waste. Subduing nations, and achieved thereby Fame in the world, high titles, and rich prev. Shall change their course to pleasure, ease, and sloth, 795Surfeit, and lust, till wantonness and pride Raise, out of friendship, hostile deeds in peace. The conquered also, and enslaved by war, Shall, with their freedom lost, all virtue lose, And fear of God, from whom their piety feigned 800 In sharp contést of battle found no aid Against invaders; therefore, cooled in zeal,

Against invaders; therefore, cooled in zeal, Thenceforth shall practise how to live secure, Worldly or dissolute, on what their lords Shall leave them to enjoy; for the earth shall bear

805 More than enough, that temperance may be tried. So all shall turn degenerate, all deprayed,
Justice and temperance, truth and faith forgot,
One man except, the only son of light
In a dark age, against example good,

Against allurement, custom, and a world
Offended; fearless of reproach and scorn,
Or violence, he of their wicked ways
Shall them admonish, and before them set
The paths of righteousness, how much more safe,

And full of peace, denouncing wrath to come
On their impenitence, and shall return
Of them derided, but of God observed
The one just man alive; by his command
Shall build a wondrous ark, as thou beheldst,

820 To save himself and household from amidst A world devote to universal wrack.

No sooner he, with them of man and beast Select for life, shall in the ark be lodged And sheltered round, but all the cataracts

825 Of Heaven, set open, on the earth shall pour Rain day and night; all fountains of the Deep Broke up, shall heave the ocean to usurp Beyond all bounds, till inundation rise Above the highest hills. Then shall this mour

830 Of Paradise by might of waves be moved Out of his place, pushed by the horned flood, With all his verdure spoiled, and trees adrift, Down the great river to the opening gulf,

And there take root, an island salt and bare, The haunt of seals, and orcs, and sea-mew's clang; 835 To teach thee that God attributes to place No sanctity, if none be thither brought By men who there frequent, or therein dwell. And now, what farther shall ensue, behold." 840 He looked, and saw the ark hull on the flood, Which now abated; for the clouds were fled, Driven by a keen north-wind, that, blowing dry, Wrinkled the face of deluge, as decayed; And the clear sun on his wide watery glass Gazed hot, and of the fresh wave largely drew, As after thirst; which made their flowing shrink From standing lake to tripping ebb, that stole With soft foot towards the deep, who now had stopt His sluices, as the heaven his windows shut. The ark no more now floats, but seems on ground, 850 Fast on the top of some high mountain fixed. And now the tops of hills as rocks appear; With clamour thence the rapid currents drive Towards the retreating sea their furious tide. Forthwith from out the ark a raven flies, 855 And, after him, the surer messenger, A dove, sent forth once and again to spy Green tree or ground whereon his foot may light: The second time returning, in his bill An olive-leaf he brings, pacific sign. 860 Anon dry ground appears, and from his ark The ancient sire descends, with all his train;

Then, with uplifted hands and eyes devout,
Grateful to Heaven, over his head beholds

865 A dewy cloud, and in the cloud a bow
Conspicuous with three listed colours gay,
Betokening peace from God, and covenant new.
Whereat the heart of Adam, erst so sad,

Greatly rejoiced, and thus his joy broke forth:

"O thon, who future things canst represent
As present, heavenly Instructor! I revive
At this last sight, assured that man shall live,
With all the creatures, and their seed preserve.
Far less I now lament for one whole world

875 Of wicked sons destroyed, than I rejoice For one man found so perfect, and so just, That God vouchsafes to raise another world From him, and all his anger to forget. But say, what mean those coloured streaks in Heaven,

Distended as the brow of God appeased?

Or serve they, as a flowery verge, to bind

The fluid skirts of that same watery cloud,

Lest it again dissolve, and shower the earth?"

To whom the Archangel: "Dextrously thou aimest;

885 So willingly doth God remit his ire,
Though late repenting him of man depraved;
Grieved at his heart, when looking down he saw
The whole earth filled with violence, and all flesh
Corrupting each their way; yet, those removed,

890 Such grace shall one just man find in his sight,
That he relents, not to blot out mankind,
And makes a covenant never to destroy
The earth again by flood, nor let the sea
Surpass his bounds, nor rain to drown the world,

With man therein or beast; but, when he brings
Over the earth a cloud, will therein set
His triple-coloured bow, whereon to look
And call to mind his covenant; day and night,
Seed-time and harvest, heat and hoary frost,

900 Shall hold their course, till fire purge all things new, Both heaven and earth, wherein the just shall dwell."

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK XII.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Angel Michael continues, from the Flood, to relate what shall succeed; then, in the mention of Abraham, comes by degrees to explain who that Seed of the Woman shall be, which was promised Adam and Eve in the Fall; his incarnation, death, resurrection, and ascension; the state of the Church till his second coming. Adam, greatly satisfied and recomforted by these relations and promises, descends the hill with Michael; wakens Eve, who all this while had slept, but with gentle dreams composed to quietness of mind and submission. Michael in either hand leads them out of Paradise, the fiery sword waving behind them, and the Cherubim taking their stations to guard the place.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK XII.

S one who in his journey baits at noon, Though bent on speed, so here the Archangel paused Betwixt the world destroyed and world restored, If Adam aught perhaps might interpose; Then, with transition sweet, new speech resumes: "Thus thou hast seen one world begin and end, And Man as from a second stock proceed. Much thou hast yet to see; but I perceive Thy mortal sight to fail: objects divine 10 Must needs impair and weary human sense. Henceforth what is to come I will relate; Thou therefore give due audience, and attend. "This second source of men, while yet but few, And while the dread of judgment past remains 15 Fresh in their minds, fearing the Deity, With some regard to what is just and right Shall lead their lives, and multiply apace, Labouring the soil, and reaping plenteous crop, Corn, wine, and oil; and, from the herd or flock 20 Oft sacrificing bullock, lamb, or kid, With large wine-offerings poured, and sacred feast, Shall spend their days in joy unblamed, and dwell

Long time in peace, by families and tribes, Under paternal rule, till one shall rise 25 Of proud ambitious heart, who, not content With fair equality, fraternal state, Will arrogate dominion undeserved Over his brethren, and quite dispossess Concord and law of nature from the earth; Hunting (and men, not beasts, shall be his ga

30 Hunting (and men, not beasts, shall be his game)
With war, and hostile snare, such as refuse
Subjection to his empire tyrannous;
A mighty hunter thence he shall be styled
Before the Lord, as in despite of Heaven,

35 Or from Heaven claiming second sovranty,
And from rebellion shall derive his name,
Though of rebellion others he accuse.
He with a crew, whom like ambition joins
With him or under him to tyrannize,

40 Marching from Eden towards the west, shall find The plain, wherein a black bituminous gurge Boils out from under ground, the mouth of Hell. Of brick, and of that stuff, they cast to build A city and tower whose top may reach to Heaven,

45 And get themselves a name, lest, far dispersed In foreign lands, their memory be lost, Regardless whether good or evil fame. But God, who oft descends to visit men Unseen, and through their habitations walks

50 To mark their doings, them beholding soon, Comes down to see their city, ere the tower Obstruct Heaven-towers, and in derision sets Upon their tongues a various spirit, to rase Quite out their native language, and, instead,

55 To sow a jangling noise of words unknown;
Forthwith a hideous gabble rises loud
Among the builders; each to other calls,
Not understood, till, hoarse and all in rage,
As mocked they storm; great laughter was in Heaven

And looking down, to see the hubbub strange And hear the din; thus was the building left Ridiculous, and the work 'Confusion' named."

Whereto thus Adam, fatherly displeased: "O execrable son! so to aspire

Above his brethren, to himself assuming Authority usurped, from God not given;
He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl,
Dominion absolute; that right we hold
By his dominion; but man over men
He made not lord; such title to himself

Reserving, human left from human free. But this usurper his encroachment proud Stays not on man; to God his tower intends Siege and defiance. Wretched man! what food

75 Will he convey up thither, to sustain
Himself, and his rash army, where thin air
Above the clouds will pine his entrails gross,
And famish him of breath, if not of bread?"

To where there Michael. "Latter there abhore

To whom thus Michael: "Justly thou abhorrest
That son, who on the quiet state of men
Such trouble brought, affecting to subdue
Rational liberty; yet know withal,
Since thy original lapse, true liberty
Is lost, which always with right reason dwells

E5 Twinned, and from her hath no dividual being.
Reason in man obscured, or not obeyed,
Immediately inordinate desires
And upstart passions catch the government
From reason, and to servitude reduce

90 Man, till then free. Therefore, since he permits
Within himself unworthy powers to reign
Over free reason, God, in judgment just,
Subjects him from without to violent lords,
Who oft as undeservedly enthral

95 His outward freedom. Tyranny must be;
Though to the tyrant thereby no excuse.
Yet sometimes nations will decline so low
From virtue, which is reason, that no wrong,
But justice, and some fatal curse annexed,

100 Deprives them of their outward liberty,
Their inward lost; witness the irreverent son
Of him who built the ark, who, for the shame
Done to his father, heard this heavy curse,
'Servant of servants,' on his vicious race.

105 Thus will this latter, as the former world,
Still tend from bad to worse, till God at last,
Wearied with their iniquities, withdraw
His presence from among them, and avert
His holy eyes, resolving from thenceforth

110 To leave them to their own polluted ways, And one peculiar nation to select From all the rest, of whom to be invoked, A nation from one faithful man to spring; Him, on this side Euphrates yet residing,

115 Bred up in idol-worship—O, that men—

23

Canst thou believe?—should be so stupid grown, While yet the patriarch lived who scaped the Flood, As to forsake the living God, and fall To worship their own work in wood and stone

120 For gods!—yet him God the Most High vouchsafes
To call by vision, from his father's house,
His kindred, and false gods, into a land
Which he will show him, and from him will raise
A mighty nation, and upon him shower

125 His benediction so, that in his seed
All nations shall be blest; he straight obeys,
Not knowing to what land, yet firm believes;
I see him, but thou canst not, with what faith
He leaves his gods, his friends, and native soil,

130 Ur of Chaldea, passing now the ford,
To Haran; after him a cumbrous train
Of herds and flocks, and numerous servitude;
Not wandering poor, but trusting all his wealth
With God, who called him, in a land unknown.

Canaan he now attains; I see his tents
Pitched about Sechem, and the neighbouring plain
Of Moreh; there, by promise, he receives
Gift to his progeny of all that land,
From Hamath northward to the Desert south;

140 (Things by their names I call, though yet unnamed),
From Hermon east to the great western sea;
Mount Hermon, yonder sea, each place behold
In prospect, as I point them; on the shore,
Mount Carmel; here, the double-founted stream,

Jordan, true limit eastward; but his sons
Shall dwell to Senir, that long ridge of hills.
This ponder, that all nations of the earth
Shall in his seed be blessed. By that seed
Is meant thy great Deliverer, who shall bruise

150 The Serpent's head; whereof to thee anon Plainer shall be revealed. This patriarch blest, Whom 'faithful Abraham' due time shall call, A son, and of his son a grandchild, leaves, Like him in faith, in wisdom, and renown.

The grandchild, with twelve sons increased, departs
From Canaan, to a land hereafter called
Egypt, divided by the river Nile;
See where it flows, disgorging at seven mouths
Into the sea. To sojourn in that land

160 He comes, invited by a younger son

In time of dearth; a son, whose worthy deeds Raise him to be the second in that realm Of Pharaoh. There he dies, and leaves his race Growing into a nation; and now grown

165 Suspected to a sequent king, who seeks
To stop their overgrowth, as inmate guests
Too numerous; whence of guests he makes them slaves
Inhospitably, and kills their infant males;
Till by two brethren (these two brethren call 170 Moses and Aaron) sent from God to claim

His people from enthralment, they return,
With glory and spoil, back to their promised land.
But first the lawless tyrant, who denies
To know their God, or message to regard,

175 Must be compelled by signs and judgments dire;
To blood unshed the rivers must be turned;
Frogs, lice, and flies must all his palace fill
With loathed intrusion, and fill all the land;
His cattle must of rot and murrain die;

180 Botches and blains must all his flesh emboss,
And all his people; thunder mixed with hail,
Hail mixed with fire, must rend the Egyptian sky,
And wheel on the earth, devouring where it rolls;
What it devours not, herb, or fruit, or grain,

A darksome cloud of locusts swarming down
Must eat, and on the ground leave nothing green;
Darkness must overshadow all his bounds,
Palpable darkness, and blot out three days;
Last, with one midnight-stroke, all the first-born

190 Of Egypt must lie dead. Thus with ten wounds
The river-dragon tamed at length submits
To let his sojourners depart, and oft
Humbles his stubborn heart, but still, as ice
More hardened after thaw; till, in his rage

195 Pursuing whom he late dismissed, the sea Swallows him with his host, but them lets pass, As on dry land, between two crystal walls; Awed by the rod of Moses so to stand Divided till his rescued gain their shore;

200 Such wondrous power God to his saint will lend,
Though present in his Angel, who shall go
Before them in a cloud, and pillar of fire,
By day a cloud, by night a pillar of fire;
To guide them in their journey, and remove

205 Behind them, while the obdurate king pursues,

All night he will pursue, but his approach Darkness defends between till morning watch; Then, through the fiery pillar and the cloud God looking forth will trouble all his host,

And craze their chariot-wheels; when, by command, Moses once more his potent rod extends
Over the sea; the sea his rod obeys;
On their embattled ranks the waves return,
And overwhelm their war. The race elect

215 Safe towards Canaan from the shore advance
Through the wild Desert, not the readiest way,
Lest, entering on the Canaanite alarmed,
War terrify them inexpert, and fear
Return them back to Egypt, choosing rather

220 Inglorious life with servitude; for life
To noble and ignoble is more sweet
Untrained in arms, where rashness leads not on.
This also shall they gain by their delay
In the wide wilderness,—there they shall found

Their government, and their great senate choose
Through the twelve tribes, to rule by laws ordained.
God from the mount of Sinai, whose grey top
Shall tremble, he descending, will himself
In thunder, lightning, and loud trumpet's sound,

230 Ordain them laws; part, such as appertain
To civil justice; part, religious rites
Of sacrifice, informing them, by types
And shadows, of that destined Seed to bruise
The Serpent, by what means he shall achieve

235 Mankind's deliverance. But the voice of God To mortal ear is dreadful; they beseech That Moses might report to them his will, And terror cease; he grants what they besought, Instructed that to God is no access

Without Mediator, whose high office now
Moses in figure bears, to introduce
One greater, of whose day he shall foretell;
And all the prophets in their age the times
Of great Messiah shall sing. Thus laws and rites

245 Established, such delight hath God in men
Obedient to his will, that he vouchsafes
Among them to set up his tabernacle—
The Holy One with mortal men to dwell.
By his prescript a sanctuary is framed

250 Of cedar, overlaid with gold; therein

An ark, and in the ark his testimony, The records of his covenant; over these A mercy-seat of gold, between the wings Of two bright Cherubim; before him burn

255 Seven lamps, as in a zodiac representing
The heavenly fires. Over the tent a cloud
Shall rest by day, a fiery gleam by night,
Save when they journey; and at length they come,
Conducted by his Angel, to the land

260 Promised to Abraham and his seed. The rest
Were long to tell;—how many battles fought;
How many kings destroyed, and kingdoms won;
Or how the sun shall in mid-heaven stand still
A day entire, and night's due course adjourn,

265 Man's voice commanding, 'Sun, in Gibeon stand, And thou, Moon, in the vale of Ajalon, Till Israel overcome!' so call the third From Abraham, son of Isaac; and from him His whole descent, who thus shall Canaan win."

270 Here Adam interposed: "O sent from Heaven, Enlightener of my darkness! gracious things Thou hast revealed; those chiefly, which concern Just Abraham and his seed. Now first I find Mine eyes true opening, and my heart much eased;

275 Erewhile perplexed with thoughts what would become Of me and all mankind; but now I see His day, in whom all nations shall be blest, Favour unmerited by me, who sought Forbidden knowledge by forbidden means.

280 This yet I apprehend not, why to those,
Among whom God will deign to dwell on Earth,
So many and so various laws are given;
So many laws argue so many sins
Among them; how can God with such reside?"

285 To whom thus Michael: "Doubt not but that sin Will reign among them, as of thee begot;
And therefore was law given them, to evince
Their natural pravity, by stirring up
Sin against law to fight; that when they see

290 Law can discover sin, but not remove,
Save by those shadowy expiations weak,
The blood of bulls and goats, they may conclude
Some blood more precious must be paid for man,
Just for unjust, that, in such righteousness

295 To them by faith imputed, they may find

Justification towards God, and peace Of conscience, which the law, by ceremonies, Cannot appease, nor man the moral part Perform, and not performing cannot live.

300 So law appears imperfect, and but given
With purpose to resign them, in full time,
Up to a better covenant, disciplined
From shadowy types to truth, from flesh to spirit,
From imposition of strict laws to free

305 Acceptance of large grace, from servile fear
To filial, works of law to works of faith.
And therefore shall not Moses, though of God
Highly beloved, being but the minister
Of law, his people into Canaan lead;

310 But Joshua, whom the Gentiles Jesus call;
His name and office bearing, who shall quell
The adversary Serpent, and bring back,
Through the world's wilderness long-wandered man
Safe to eternal Paradise of rest.

315 Meanwhile they, in their earthly Canaan placed,
Long time shall dwell and prosper, but when sins
National interrupt their public peace,
Provoking God to raise them enemies,
From whom as oft he saves them penitent,

320 By Judges first, then under Kings; of whom The second, both for piety renowned And puissant deeds, a promise shall receive Irrevocable, that his regal throne For ever shall endure; the like shall sing

325 All prophecy, that of the royal stock
Of David (so I name this king) shall rise
A son—the Woman's seed to thee foretold—
Foretold to Abraham, as in whom shall trust
All nations, and to kings foretold, of kings

330 The last, for of his reign shall be no end.
But first, a long succession must ensue;
And his next son, for wealth and wisdom famed,
The clouded ark of God, till then in tents
Wandering, shall in a glorious temple enshrine.

Such follow him as shall be registered
Part good, part bad; of bad the longer scroll;
Whose foul idolatries and other faults,
Heaped to the popular sum, will so incense
God, as to leave them, and expose their land,
Their city his temple, and his hely ark

340 Their city, his temple, and his holy ark,

With all his sacred things, a scorn and prey To that proud city, whose high walls thou sawest Left in confusion, Babylon thence called. There in captivity he lets them dwell

The space of seventy years; then brings them back, Remembering mercy, and his covenant sworn To David, stablished as the days of Heaven. Returned from Rabylon by leave of Kings Their lords, whom God disposed, the House of God

350 They first re-edify; and for a while
In mean estate live moderate, till, grown
In wealth and multitude, factions they grow.
But first among the priests dissension springs—
Men who attend the altar, and should most

355 Endeavour peace; their strife pollution brings Upon the temple itself; at last, they seize The sceptre, and regard not David's sons; Then lose it to a stranger, that the true Anointed King Messiah might be born

360 Barred of his right; yet at his birth a star,
Unseen before in Heaven, proclaims him come,
And guides the eastern sages, who inquire
His place, to offer incense, myrrh, and gold;
His place of birth a solemn Angel tells

To simple shepherds, keeping watch by night;
They gladly thither haste, and by a choir
Of squadroned Angels hear his carol sung.
A virgin is his mother, but his sire

The Power of the Most High; he shall ascend The throne hereditary, and bound his reign

With Earth's wide bounds, his glory with the Heavens."
He ceased, discerning Adam with such joy
Surcharged, as had, like grief, been dewed in tears,
Without the vent of words; which these he breathed:

375 "O prophet of glad tidings, finisher
Of utmost hope! now clear I understand
(What off my steadiest thoughts have scarched in vain),
Why our great Expectation should be called
The seed of Woman. Virgin mother, hail!

380 High in the love of Heaven! Yet from my loins
Thou shalt proceed, and from thy womb the Son
Of God Most High; so God with man unites.
Needs must the serpent now his capital bruise
Expect with mortal pain; say where and when

385 Their fight, what stroke shall bruise the Victor's heel."

To whom thus Michael: "Dream not of their fight, As of a duel, or the local wounds. Of head or heel; not therefore joins the Son Manhood to Godhead, with more strength to foil

390 Thy enemy; nor so is overcome
Satan, whose fall from Heaven, a deadlier bruise,
Disabled not to give thee thy death's wound;
Which he, who comes thy Saviour, shall recure,
Not by destroying Satan, but his works

305 In thee, and in thy seed; nor can this be,
But by fulfilling that which thou didst want,
Obedience to the law of God, imposed
On penalty of death, and suffering death,
The penalty to thy transgression due,

400 And due to theirs which out of thine will grow;
So only can high justice rest appaid.
The law of God exact he shall fulfil
Both by obedience and by love, though love
Alone fulfil the law; thy punishment

405 He shall endure, by coming in the flesh
To a reproachful life, and cursed death;
Proclaiming life to all who shall believe
In his redemption, and that his obedience,
Imputed, becomes theirs by faith, his merits

410 To save them, not their own though legal works.
For this he shall live hated, be blasphemed,
Seized on by force, judged, and to death condemned—
A shameful and accursed, nailed to the cross
By his own nation, slain for bringing life;

415 But to the cross he nails thy enemies,
The law that is against thee, and the sins
Of all mankind with him there crucified,
Never to hurt them more who rightly trust
In this his satisfaction. So he dies,

420 But soon revives; death over him no power
Shall long usurp; ere the third dawning light
Return, the stars of morn shall see him rise
Out of his grave, fresh as the dawning light,
Thy ransom paid, which man from death redeems,

425 His death for man—as many as offered life
Neglect not, and the benefit embrace
By faith not void of works. This godlike act
Annuls thy doom, the death thou shouldst have died,
In sin for ever lost from life; this act

430 Shall bruise the head of Satan, crush his strength,

Defeating Sin and Death, his two main arms, And fix far deeper in his head their stings Than temporal death shall bruise the Victor's heel, Or theirs whom he redeems, a death like sleep—

A gentle wafting to immortal life.

Nor after resurrection shall he stay

Longer on earth, than certain times to appear

To his disciples, men who in his life

Still followed him; to them shall leave in charge

440 To teach all nations what of him they learned And his salvation, them who shall believe Baptizing in the profluent stream—the sign Of washing them from guilt of sin to life Pure, and in mind prepared, if so befall,

445 For death like that which the Redeemer died.
All nations they shall teach; for, from that day,
Not only to the sons of Abraham's loins
Salvation shall be preached, but to the sons
Of Abraham's faith, wherever through the world;

450 So in his seed all nations shall be blest.

Then to the Heaven of Heavens he shall ascend With victory, triumphing through the air Over his foes and thine; there shall surprise The Serpent, Prince of air, and drag in chains

Through all his realm, and there confounded leave;
Then enter into glory, and resume
His seat at God's right hand, exalted high
Above all names in Heaven; and thence shall come,
When this world's dissolution shall be ripe,

460 With glory and power to judge both quick and dead—
To judge the unfaithful dead, but to reward
His faithful, and receive them into bliss,
Whether in Heaven or earth; for then the earth
Shall all be Paradise, far happier place

As at the world's great period; and our sire,
Replete with joy and wonder, thus replied:

"O, Goodness infinite, Goodness immense!

470 That all this good of evil shall produce,
And evil turn to good; more wonderful
Than that, which by creation first brought forth
Light out of darkness! Full of doubt I stand,
Whether I should repent me now of sin

475 By me done, and occasioned, or rejoice

Much more, that much more good thereof shall spring— To God more glory, more good-will to men From God, and over wrath grace shall abound. But say, if our Deliverer up to Heaven

480 Must re-ascend, what will betide the few
His faithful, left among the unfaithful herd,
The enemies of truth? Who then shall guide
His people, who defend? Will they not deal
Worse with his followers than with him they dealt?"

"Be sure they will," said the Angel; "but from Heaven He to his own a Comforter will send, The promise of the Father, who shall dwell, His Spirit, within them, and the law of faith, Working through love, upon their hearts shall write,

490 To guide them in all truth, and also arm
With spiritual armour, able to resist
Satan's assaults, and quench his fiery darts,
What man can do against them, not afraid,
Though to the death, against such cruelties

495 With inward consolations recompensed,
And oft supported so as shall amaze
Their proudest persecutors. For the Spirit,
Poured first on his Apostles, whom he sends
To evangelize the nations, then on all

500 Baptized, shall them with wondrous gifts endue
To speak all tongues, and do all miracles,
As did their Lord before them. Thus they win
Great numbers of each nation to receive
With joy the tidings brought from Heaven; at length,

Their ministry performed, and race well run,
Their doctrine and their story written left,
They die; but in their room, as they forewarn,
Wolves shall succeed for teachers—grievous wolves,
Who all the sacred mysteries of Heaven

510 To their own vile advantages shall turn
Of lucre and ambition, and the truth
With superstitions and traditions taint,
Left only in those written records pure,
Though not, but by the Spirit understood.

515 Then shall they seek to avail themselves of names, Places, and titles, and with these to join Secular power, though feigning still to act By spiritual; to themselves appropriating The Spirit of God, promised alike and given 520 To all believers; and, from that pretence,

Spiritual laws by carnal power shall force On every conscience, laws which none shall find Left them enrolled, or what the Spirit within Shall on the heart engrave. What will they then,

But force the Spirit of grace itself, and bind His consort Liberty? what but unbuild His living temples, built by faith to stand, Their own faith, not another's? for on earth Who against faith and conscience can be heard

530 Infallible? Yet many will presume;
Whence heavy persecution shall arise
On all, who in the worship persevere
Of spirit and truth; the rest (far greater part)
Will deem in outward rites and specious forms

Bestuck with slanderous darts, and works of faith Rarely be found. So shall the world go on,
To good malignant, to bad men benign,
Under her own weight groaning; till the day

Appear of respiration to the just,
And vengeance to the wicked, at return
Of him so lately promised to thy aid,
The Woman's Seed; obscurely then foretold,
Now amplier known thy Saviour and thy Lord;

545 Last, in the clouds, from Heaven to be revealed In glory of the Father, to dissolve Satan, with his perverted world; then raise From the conflagrant mass, purged and refined, New Heavens, new earth, ages of endless date,

550 Founded in righteousness, and peace, and love;
To bring forth fruits, joy, and eternal bliss!"
He ended, and thus Adam last replied:
"How soon hath thy prediction, Seer blest,
Measured this transient world, the race of time,

555 Till time stand fixed! Beyond is all abyss—Eternity, whose end no eye can reach.
Greatly instructed I shall hence depart,
Greatly in peace of thought, and have my fill
Of knowledge, what this vessel can contain;

560 Beyond which was my folly to aspire.
Henceforth I learn, that to obey is best,
And love with fear the only God, to walk
As in his presence, ever to observe
His providence, and on him sole depend,

565 Merciful over all his works, with good

Still overcoming evil, and by small Accomplishing great things—by things deemed weak Subverting worldly strong, and worldly wise By simply meek; that suffering for truth's sake 570 Is fortitude to highest victory, And, to the faithful, death the gate of life; Taught this by his example, whom I now Acknowledge my Redeemer ever blest." To whom thus also the Angel last replied: 575 "This having learned, thou hast attained the sum Of wisdom; hope no higher, though all the stars Thou knewest by name, and all the ethereal Powers, All secrets of the deep, all Nature's works, Or works of God in heaven, air, earth, or sea, 580 And all the riches of this world enjoyedst, And all the rule, one empire; only add Deeds to thy knowledge answerable; add faith, Add virtue, patience, temperance; add love, By name to come called charity, the soul 585 Of all the rest; then wilt thou not be loth To leave this Paradise, but shalt possess A Paradise within thee, happier far. Let us descend now therefore from this top Of speculation; for the hour precise 590Exacts our parting hence; and, see! the guards, By me encamped on yonder hill, expect Their motion, at whose front a flaming sword, In signal of remove, waves fiercely round. We may no longer stay; go, waken Eve; 595Her also I with gentle dreams have calmed, Portending good, and all her spirits composed To meek submission; thou, at season fit, Let her with thee partake what thou hast heard: Chiefly what may concern her faith to know, 600 The great deliverance by her seed to come (For by the Woman's seed) on all mankind, That ye may live, which will be many days, Both in one faith unanimous, though sad (With cause) for evils past, yet much more cheered With meditation on the happy end." 605 He ended; and they both descend the hill; Descended, Adam to the bower, where Eve

And thus with words not sad she him received:
"Whence thou returnest, and whether wentest, I know;

Lay sleeping, ran before, but found her waked;

For God is also in sleep, and dreams advise, Which he hath sent propitions, some great good Presaging, since with sorrow and heart's distress Wearied I fell asleep. But now lead on;

In me is no delay; with thee to go,
Is to stay here; without thee here to stay,
Is to go hence unwilling; thou to me
Art all things under Heaven, all places thou,
Who for my wilful crime art banished hence.

620 This further consolation yet secure
I carry hence; though all by me is lost,
Such favour I unworthy am vouchsafed,
By me the promised Seed shall all restore."
So spake our mother Eve, and Adam heard

Well pleased, but answered not; for now, too nigh
The Archangel stood, and from the other hill
To their fixed station, all in bright array,
The Cherubim descended; on the ground
Gliding meteorous, as evening mist

630 Risen from a river o'er the marish glides,
And gathers ground fast at the labourer's heel
Homeward returning. High in front advanced,
The brandished sword of God before them blazed,
Fierce as a comet, which with torrid heat,

635 And vapour as the Libyan air adust,
Began to parch that temperate clime; whereat
In either hand the hastening Angel caught
Our lingering parents, and to the eastern gate
Led them direct, and down the cliff as fast

640 To the subjected plain; then disappeared.

They, looking back, all the eastern side beheld
Of Paradise, so late their happy seat,
Waved over by that flaming brand; the gate
With dreadful faces throughd and fiery arms.

Some natural tears they dropt, but wiped them soon;
The world was all before them, where to choose
Their place of rest, and Providence their guide.
They, hand in hand, with wandering steps and slow,
Through Eden took their solitary way.

NOTES.

NOTES.

BOOK I.

1. As in the opening of the Iliad, the Odyssey, and the Encid, so here the subject of the poem is stated in the very first words. In Homer and Milton the Invocation includes the Proposition (or subject), but in Virgil they form separate sentences. Addison observes:— "His Invocation to a Work, which turns in a great measure upon the creation of the world is very properly made to the Muse who inspired Moses in those Books from whence our Author drew his subject, and to the Holy Spirit who is therein represented as operating after a particular manner in the first production of Nature. The whole exordium rises very happily into noble language and sentiment, as I think the transition to the fable is very beautiful and natural."

The order is "Heavenly Muse, that on the secret top, &c., (lines 6-

10) sing of Man's first disobedience, &c."

2. Forbidden tree. So called because God, after he had placed the man in the garden of Eden commanded him, "saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely ent; but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Genesis, ii. 16, 17. In vii, 46, he calls it the 'interdicted tree;' see also ix. 904.

Mortal. Causing death; more commonly used in the sense of subject to death, human; see iii. 214.

4. Loss of Eden. Not 'with loss of Eden,' but of Paradise the 'garden of Eden.' For a description of the garden see iv. 208-287, and the Note.

One greater Man. Romans, v. 19; 1 Corinthians, xv. 21, 22.

The secret top. Unseen, hidden; Exodus, xix. 16; xxiv. 15-18; in xii. 227, he speaks of the Mount Sinai's 'gray top,' and seev. 598. Newton and Keightley take secret in the sense of secretus, 'separate,' 'retired.'

7. Of Oreb, or of Sinai. Oreb and Sinai were two peaks of the same range of mountains; what is called Sinai in Exodus is spoken of as Oreb in Deuteronomy, and cf. Exodus, iii. 1, and Acts vii. 30.

8. That shepherd. Moses. Exodus, iii. 1; Isaiah, lxiii. 11.

Chosen-seed. O ye seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Jacob his chosen. Psalm, cv. 6. 1 Chron. xvi. 13.

10. Chaos. Empty space; Chaos is personified by Hesiod as the first state of existence.

Sion hill. One of the heights on which Jerusalem was built; Sion, or Zion, is called the 'holy hill' (Psalm, ii. 6), the 'city of David' (1 Kings, viii. 1), the 'city of the Great King' (Psalm, xlviii. 2.)

11. Siloa's brook. A pool or tank near the temple of Jerusalem; Nehemiah, iii. 15; Isaiah, viii. 6; St. John, ix. 7; and see iii. 30.

12. Fast by. Close to; the primary meaning of fast is fixed, firm, close; and from the idea of closeness probably comes its meaning 'quick.' Cf. the similar expression 'hard by;' hard being what is compressed, close.

The oracle of God. The temple at Jerusalem; the 'most holy place' of the temple is called the 'oracle' in 1 Kings, vi. 16.

Oracle strictly means the answer of a god, from Lat. orare, to speak; Milton uses it in this sense in Paradise Lost, x. 182, applying it to the prophecy in Genesis, iii. 15; and see Paradise Regained, i. 460, 463.

I thence invoke thy aid. He began by invoking the Divine Spirit that inspired Moses, here he asks for the aid of the same Spirit by whose inspiration David and the Prophets of Israel sang.

14. Middle. Middling, ordinary. Middle is the mid deel, deal, or part; what lies equally distant from extremes.

15. To soar above the Aonian mount. To treat of a nobler theme and in loftier strains than any poet of Greece (or Rome) had sung.

The Aonian mount. Mount Helicon in Bootia, sacred to Apollo and the Muses. Aonius was the ancient and poetical name for Bootian, and the Muses were sometimes called Aonides.

Aonio rediens deducam vertice Musas. Virgil. Georgics, iii. 11. Aonas in montes. Ib. Eclog. vi. 65.

Pursues. In the literal and classical sense of follows up, describes. 16. Rhime. Verse, as opposed to prose; 'tale or song.' Comus, 44. Rhyme is from the A.S. rim, a word of Teutonic origin. The modern spelling is from the idea that rhyme comes from ρυθμὸς, rhythm; in this place Milton spells it rhime, distinguishing it from the rime he speaks of in his prefatory Note on the Verse which he uses to denote "the jingling sound of like endings." Rhyme occurs only once again in his poems, and there, as here, in the sense of Verse in general whether blank or rhyming.

Who would not sing for Lycidas? He knew Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme. Lycidas, 10, 11.

17. That dost prefer, &c. 1 Corinthians, iii. 16, 17; 2 Corinthians,

vi. 16; Ephesians, ii. 21, 22.

representation of the Hebrew word translated moved in Genesis, i. 2, "The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." The Spirit is said to have descended 'like a dove,' Matthew, iii. 16; and, as a further reason for the use of the epithet dove-like, Todd observes that the Talmudists illustrate 'brooded': Quemadmodum columba incumbit pullis suis, as a dove sits on its young. See vii. 235.

24. Argument. Subject; argue means a) to prove, make evident, convict; b) to oppose, resist; c) to dispute, debate. And argument, à) proof; 'b) reasoning, discussion; 'c) subject-matter, a statement of the subject.

a) Not to know me argues yourselves unknown.—iv. 830.

 I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will.—Sonnet, xxii.

- of good, and evil, much they argued then.
 of happiness, and final misery.—ii. 562, 563.
- à) The devil's stirring up of such spirits of sedition is an evident argument that the light is come forth.—Latimer, Sermon on Good Friday, 1549.
 - 'b) Thou neither dost persuade me to seek wealth
 For empire's sake, nor empire to affect
 For glory's sake, by all thy argument.—

 Paradise Regained, iii. 44-46.
 - 'c) Not sedulous by nature to indite
 Wars, hitherto the only argument
 Heroic deemed. * * *

Me, of these Nor skilled nor studious, higher argument Remains—Paradise Lost, ix. 28, 42.

And see ix. 84, and Note.

26. Pope borrows this line in his Essay on Man:

Laugh where we must, be candid where we can, And vindicate the ways of God to man.—Ep. i. 15, 16,

To men is to be taken with ways of God, and not with justify.

27. Heaven hides nothing, &c. Psalm, cxxxix. 7, 8.

Heaven. Der. A. S. heafan, to raise, because it is raised or heaved n high; and so applied to the regions raised, heaved, or heaven, bove us. Verstegan (ob. 1635) has the following (quoted in Richardon's Dictionary):—

The name of heaven, albeit it was of our ancestors written heofen, yet arried it like sense or signification as now it doth, being as much as to say s heaven, or heaved up, to wit, the place that is elevated.

Restitution of Decayed Intelligence, c. 7.

28. Hell. The word Hell is derived from A. S. halan, to cover; a oncealed place, the place of departed spirits, as in the Apostles' Creed, He descended into Hell;" and, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in Iell." Acts, ii. 27. Cf. heal, to make or become better, as when a round is healed or covered; hale, sound; healthy, free from sickness; hail, to salute, to wish good health; whole, entire, (the w does not belong to the root;) so too wholesome; and hellier, a South of Ingland word for a thatcher, one who roofs or covers a house; and elm, or helmet, a covering for the head. The Hebrew word sheoal, cavern, and the Greek hades, invisible, thus correspond with the Inglish Hell, concealed.

29. Grand. In the same sense as in grandfather.

32. For. On account of. 'To transgress his will on account of me restraint, though in all other respects lords of the world.' Ceightley has a note of interrogation after will, and takes for as neaning 'but for.'

Besides. In all else.

World is said to be derived from wer, a man, and old, age or time. 36. What time. At time in which; a Latinism; it occurs also in Lycidas, 28,

40. To have equalled the Most High. See Isaiah, xiv. 12-24.

43. Impious war and battle proud. These expressions occur in Virgil, Eneid, vi. 613, and viii. 118.

45. Headlong. Head foremost. Darkling, in the dark, is the only adverb now ending in ling. See Note on iii. 39.

46. Ruin and combustion. Dyce has pointed out that this phrase occurs in an order of the two Houses of Parliament of 1642 (Clarendon, History of the Rebellion, iii. 46, ed. 1826.)

48. Adamantine chains. See 2 Peter, ii. 4; Jude, 6.

Adamantine, that cannot be broken, everlasting; Gr. adamas, unconquerable. Milton has also the adj. Adamantean, Samson Agonistes 134. Diamond is from the same root.

49. Defy to arms. Challenge to combat. Defy (Low Lat. diffi-dare), was the technical word for to break allegiance with.

50. Nine times, &c. For a period of time as long as nine days and nights are to us. This was before the creation of the world or of day and night, so it would be an anachronism to say 'for nine lays and nights,' as Hesiod does in describing the fall of the Giants. I heog., 722. See vi. 871.

55. Pain. Lat. paena, punishment; pain is punishment, and re-ains its literal meaning in the expression 'under pain of.'

56. Baleful. Full of misery, wretched; A. S. bale, destruction, woe.

57. Witnessed. Expressed, bore witness to, exhibited. Mr. Browne Clarendon Press Edition) says witness is "used always in this sense in Shakspeare and in Milton," whereas almost the next place it occurs, (iii. 700), it has the ordinary meaning of 'see,' behold.'

59. Ken. See, view. Can, con, ken, cunning, are all from the same root, A. S. cennan, to perceive. Ken occurs occasionally in octry both as a noun and verb, and is a common word in Scotland n the sense of 'see,' 'understand.'

60. Situation. This is the only place in which this word occurs

n Milton's poems.

61. Dungeon is properly of Celtic origin, from dûn, a fort, whence). Fr. donjon. The primary meaning of dun is strong, and as a noun t means a citadel; in the Zeuss Mss. it is explained arx, castrum; n Welsh it appears as din; A. S. tûn: English town; see Joyce's trish Names of Places, iii. 1.

rish Names of Places, iii. 1.
63. No light. 'Issued' or 'came' is understood. Keightley quotes rom Walker's History of Independency (Ed. 1648.) "Their burning enl without knowledge is like Hell-fire without light."

Darkness visible. These words as a quotation are always used to nean, and generally explained here as, 'darkness that can be seen; ut visible seems rather to mean 'that can be seen through,' and larkness visible, darkness through which the sights of woe were discovered. See Dr. Wm. Smith's Note on the adjectival ending in -ble in the Student's English Language, 3rd Ed. p. 98.

Chaucer has the same idea;—

The cause why that Job calleth hell the land of darkness,—dark, for he hat is in hell hath defaute of light natural; for certes the dark light, that dall come out of the fire that ever shall burn, shall turn them all to pain hat be in hell, for it showeth them the horrible devils that torment them.—The Parson's Tale.

- 66. Hope never comes. One of the inscriptions that Dante saw on the gate of Hell was
 - All hope abandon, ye who enter here. Hell, iii. 9.

68. Urges. Presses upon, besets.

72. Utter. Extreme; utter is another form of outer. In Matt. xxii. 13, the outer (ξέστερον) of King James' Bible is utter in Elisabeth's. See also iii. 16; v. 614; and Spenser:—

To the bridge's utter gate I came. Faery Queen, iv. 10, 11.

74. As from the centre, &c. Three times as far as it is from the centre of the earth to the pole of the universe. Newton has observed that Homer places Hell as far beneath the deepest pit of earth as the Heaven is above the earth, Iliad, iii. 16; Virgil makes it twice, as far distant, Encid, vi. 578; and Milton three times as far.

81. Brēlzebub. The God of Flies; he was worshipped at Ekron in Palestine (2 Kings, i. 2), and, in Matthew, xii. 24, is called the Prince of the Devils.

82. Thence. For this reason. Satan is the Hebrew for an enemy, an adversary. The two chief names for the evil spirit are the Devil (always with the article) and Satan (without the article.) Devil' is found under various forms in all the European languages, and comes from a Greek word meaning an accuser. In the Scriptures the following titles are applied to the Devil;—Abaddon; Apollyon, i. e., a destroyer; Angel of the bottomless pit; (Rev. ix. 11.) Accuser of the brethren; Belial; Adversary; the Beast; Beelzebub; the Prince of the Devils; the Deceiver; the Great Dragon; God of this world; Father of lies; Prince of the power of the air; Satan; the old Serpent; the Tempter; and the Wicked One.

84. How fallen, how changed. Cf. Isaiah, xiv. 12, and Virgil, Æneid, ii. 274.

97. Changed in outward lustre. See iv. 835-851.

105. What though, &c. All editions except Keightley's have a note of interrogation after lost; but no question is asked; 'what though' is equivalent to 'although.'

The field. The field of battle, and hence the battle itself; so again:

Meanwhile war arose,

And fields were fought in heaven. ii. 768.

107. Study. Desire, zeal, one of the meanings of studium; so in si. 577.

109. And what is else, &c. There was a note of interrogation after this line until Newton's Edition of 1749. The construction according to the present reading is, And whatever else is not to be overcome is not lost. Professor Masson restores the note of interrogation, and observes on Newton's reading:—"The meaning thus given to the last clause is languid compared with any of those meanings it will bear if the original punctuation is preserved. "All is not lost," Satan then says, "the unconquerable will, &c., and courage never to submit or yield; and what else is there that is not to be overcome?" or "and what is there that else, (i. e., without the forementioned qualities) is not to be overcome?" or "and in what else does not to be overcome (i. e., invincibility) consist?"

That were low. That is in apposition with the first part of the sentence,—' to bow and sue for grace, &c.'

115. Ignominy. To be read in scanning 'ignomin.'

116. Gods. Angels, spirits.

117. Empyreal substance. Heavenly nature of which the spirits consisted. In ii. 771, Heaven is called the Empyrean, from its fiery brightness and splendour; Gr. πῦρ, fire. The angels are called Seraphim, i. e., 'flaming fire,' Psalm, civ. 4; and see v. 460.

Fail. Cease to exist, perish.

With more successful hope. With hope of better success. 120.

124.

Tyranny. Sovercignty, absolute power. Embattled. Drawn up in battle array, or in battles, i. e. 129. battalions; see vi. 216, note.

130. Conduct. Leadership.

Keightley 'doubts if it is anywhere else, in Perpetual. either language (English or Latin), used of persons; he forgot · perpetual curate.'

133. Whether. Goes with put to proof.

135. Lost us Heaven. Lost governs two objectives, or rather us may be regarded as the 'dative of disadvantage."

Though all our glory extinct. Though all our glory be extinct. 141.

144. Of force. Of necessity, per force. See iv. 813.

Thralls. Slaves; A. S. thrael, from thirlean, to pierce. from 149. the custom of boring the ear of a slave to the door post; see Exodus, xxi. 6, and Psalm, xl. 6. This custom, says Ellis, (Specimens, i. 15) was retained by our forefathers, and executed at the church door. Thrill to pierce, is from the same root, and occurs in nostril; drill and thrill are the same, d and th being often interchangeable.

150. Business. It would appear that this word business, in the sense of occupation, employment, is from the Fr. besogne, work, and not from the adj. busy; the ness arising from analogy, or its being confounded with busyness, the state of being busy, a word now obsolete, or merged in meaning with the modern business. Wicklif has: -

I wole that ye be without bisynesse, for he that is without wife is bisi what things ben of the Lord. 1 Cor. vii. 32.

The word translated 'without bisynesse' is in Greek 'without anxiety,' or 'carefulness' as it is rendered in the Bible of 1611.

152. Errands. Errand has nothing to do with the Latin errare. to wander, from which come error, errant, &c., but is from the A. S. orrendian, to bring news.

Whereto. Either 'to which,' or 'thereupon.'

167. If I fail not. If I am not mistaken, ni fallor.

O'er-blown. Blown away, ceased, over. 172.

> Until the blustering storm is overblown-Faery Queen, I. When those clouds of war, that menaced A bloody deluge to the affrighted state, Are by their breath, dispersed and overblown. Massinger-The Picture, ii. 2.

Laid. Caused to settle. Cf.:—

-Morning fair Came forth with pilgrim steps, and amice grey,

Who, with her radiant finger, stilled the roar Of thunder, chased the clouds, and laid the winds.

Paradise Regained, iv. 426—429.

176. His. Referring to the thunder; his being used for its.

178. Slip. Lose, let pass; occasionem omittere; cf. v. 453. Slip is not now used as a transitive in this and similar phrases, though commonly used thus by writers of the seventeenth century:—

Sir, I do slippe No action of my life, thus, but I do quote it. Ben Jonson. The Fox, iv. 1.

If there be any indisposition or averseness thereto [prayer], we should by serious consideration and industrious care labour to remove them; rousing our spirits, and kindling in our affections some fervency of desire toward spiritual things; otherwise we shall be apt to shun, or to slip the opportunities inviting to devotion. Barrow. Sixth Sermon, Ed. 1678.

Nor must we slip, without remark, what happened in our winter march.

-Fryer. Travels in Persia, v. 9.

Occasion. Opportunity. Lat. occasio.

Occasion hath all her hair on her forehead; when she is past you may not recall her,—she hath no tuft whereby you can lay hold of her, for she is bald in the hinder part of her head, and never returneth again.

Rabelais. Gargantua, i. 37.

Whether scorn, &c. Whether he has granted us this intermission because he despises us, or because he is satisfied with the punishment already inflicted.

183. Tend. Proceed: Lat. tendere.

185. Harbour. Dwell; lodge; A. S. hereberga, from herebeorgan. There rest, &c. Shakspeare has a similar play upon the words:

Here let us rest if this rebellious earth

Have any resting for her true king's queen. Richard II, v. 1.

186. Afflicted. Lit. dashed to the ground, beaten. Powers. Forces, troops.

191. If not. Otherwise. Bentley proposes 'if none' (reinforcement.)

192. Thus Satan. 'Spake' is understood.

198. Titanian, or Earth-born. From Uranos (Heaven) and Gaia (Earth) the principal gods and giants are fabled by the Greeks to have sprung. Titanian, then, means Heaven-born deities—'Titan, Heaven's first-born,' i. 510—and Earth-born means the Giants, the word giant coming from γh , the earth.

That warred on Jove. Some editions inaccurately omit to place a comma after Titanian. That refers to Earth-born only.

199. Briareos was a huge monster, the 'centumgeminus Briareus' of Virgil—Eneid, vi. 287, with a hundred hands and fifty heads. When the Titans 'warred on Jove,' Briareus fought against them, and when they were thrust into Tartarus he was placed as one of the guards over them.

Briarëos was a son of Uranos, and Typhon was a Giant; so the former is selected as a representative of the Titanian monsters, and Typhon of the Earth-born. The legends about both, however, are confusing and various.

viii NOTES.

200. Typhon, or Typhoëns, was a hundred-headed giant, and, as related by Pindar, dwelt in a cave in Cilicia, the capital of which is l'arsus. Typhon is sometimes described as a fire-breathing giant and sometimes as a fearful hurricane; hence typhoon. See ii. 539-541.

The den ... held. That is, he lived in a den.

201. Leviathan. The creature described under this name in Job (Chap. xli.) is supposed to refer to the erocodile; but Milton's description can only be intended for the whale; see also vii.:—

Levinthan,
Hugost of living creatures, on the deep
Stretched like a promontory sleeps or swims,
And seems a moving land. —vii. 412-415.

203. Him. Obj. on deeming.

204. Night-familiered. Overtaken by night and darkness; a word of Milton's coinage, he uses it again, Comus, 438.

205. As sea-men tell. The story is told by Olaus Magnus, and in Hakluyt's Voyages, i. 568.

206. His scaly rind. Whales have no scales, but of the leviathan

n Job it is said 'his scales are his pride.'

207. Under the lee. The lee side of a ship is the side sheltered from the wind; 'under the lee' means not exposed to the wind. Leeward means the direction from which the wind blows.

208. Invests the sea. Clothes the sea 'as with a mantle;' cf. iii. 10. A similar metaphor is used of the moon,' who o'er the dark her silver mantle threw;' iv. 609; and of Night 'veiling the horizon,' ix. 52.

213. At large. At liberty, free.

220. Confusion. Obj. on bring forth.

223. Spires. Wreathed forms, coming gradually to a point.

226. That filt unusual weight. Spenser has the same idea in describing the Old Dragon:—

Then, with his waving wings displayed wide Ilimself up high he lifted from the ground, And with strong flight did foroibly divide The yielding air, which nigh too feeble found Her flitting parts, and element unsound To bear so great a weight.—Facry Queen, iv. 11-18.

232. Pelorus. The north-eastern point of Sicily, near Mount Ætna; now Cape Faro.

233. Thundering Ætna. So in Virgil;—

Horificis juxta tonat Ætna ruinis. —Æneid, iii. 571.

234. Fuelled. Supplied with fuel; or, perhaps, made of fuel; Fr.

feu, fire, Lat. focus.

235. Sublimed. Sublimated; a chemical term, meaning raised and projected upwards by heat; solid substances are thus converted into vapour, and this when cool and solid again is a purer form of the original.

239. Scaped is generally printed 'scaped, but incorrectly so, being an independent word, though a shortened form of escape.

240. The Stygian flood. The infernal lake; Styx being the principal river of the lower world in classic mythology. See ii. 577.

246, Sovran. Sovereign, from Ital. sovrano, Lat. superus.

248. Iteason hath equalled, &c. In mental powers we were equal to him, but by the force he has used he has overcome us.

Reason is to be read as a monosyllable or as two short syllables.

254. The mind is its own place, &c. Cf. iv. 20-23, and Cœlum, non animum, mutant qui trans mare currunt. Horace. Epistle, i. 11, 27.

*Its. In Anglo-Saxon the Prohoun of the third person was thus declined in the Singular:---.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
Nom.	he,	heó	hit.
Gen.	his,	hire,	his,
Dat. and	1bl. him,	hire,	him.
Acc.	hine,	hi,	hit.

The form of the Masculine and Neuter of the Genitive was the same, and so it continued to be down till the end of the sixteenth century, when the form its first appeared.

Confusion naturally followed from his having to do duty for both genders, and various forms were substituted for his before its was finally recognised and adopted as the Genitive of the Pronoun It, almost a century after its first introduction. Thus we have, in the seventeenth century, his, it, the, of it, her, hers, their, hereof, thereof, of the same, all used where we should now never think of employing any form but its.

How far that little candle throws his beams!

-Merchant of Venice, v. 1.

As a beneficial gift conferred to a man that hath need thereof is of the own proper nature commendable, so if the receiver of that liberal benignity show himself in mind inwardly oblivious and forgetful, or in deeds outwardly unthankful, it is naturally hated.

Langley. Abridgement of Polydore Virgil. Preface. Ed. 1572.

It was the day, what time the powerful moon

Makes the poor Banckside creature wet it' shoone,

In it' owne hall—Ben Jonson. Epigrams, The Famous Voyage.

Behold another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it.—

Daniel, vii, 5.

In thee, the whole kingdom dresseth it self, and is ambitious to use thee as her glass—Ben Jonson. Cynthia's Revells. Dedication, 1599.

Right glad I am, that when music was lately shut out of our churches, on what default of hers I dare not to inquire, it hath since been harboured and welcomed in the halls, parlours, and chambers of the primest persons of this nation.—Fuller. Worthies of England, Musicians.

^{*} The note that follows was written more than five years ago and appeared in my Notes on the Fourth Book of Paradise Lost, published in 1871. In Professor Masson's recent Edition of Milton's Poetical Works more than fourteen pages are devoted to the history of its; I have not, however, added to my note from the information contained in it, but refer students thereto.

x NOTES.

Let the earth bring forth soul living in her kind, Cattle and creeping things and beast of the earth, Each in their kind—Paradise Lost, vii. 254. Cf. Genesis, i. 24.

The branches hereof [laurel] in all ages have been accounted honourable, insomuch that King James, in some sort, waived his crown to wear the laurel in his new twenty-shilling pieces.—Fuller. Worthies of England. Writers.

Malt. This is barley with the property thereof much altered, having passed both water and fire, steeped and dried in a kiln. That the use hereof was known to the Greeks plainly appears by the proper word wherewith they express it, Buné.—Ib. Bedfordshire.

The Cathedral of Carlisle may pass for the emblem of the Militant-church, black but comely, still bearing in the complexion thereof the remaining signs of its former burning.—Ib. Cumberland.

Surely there is some other cure for a ricketish body, than to kill it; viz., by opening obstructions, and deriving the nutriment to all parts of the same.

1b. Alms-houses.

It is said that the earliest instance of the use of its is to be found in Florio's World of Words, A.D. 1598. It does not occur in the English Bible, in Hooker, nor in Bacon; but once or twice in Ben Jonson, and then with the apostrophe; the following quotations are from the folio edition of 1616:—

He that has once the flower of the sunne, The perfect ruby which we call elixir, Not onely can doe that, but by it's vertue, Can confer honour, love, respect, long life, Give valure, safetie; yea, and victorie To whom he will.—The Alchemist, ii. 1.

Your knighthood it self shall come on it's knees, and it shall be rejected, it shall be sued for it's fees to execution, and not be redeemed.—

The Silent Woman, ii. 5.

In Shakspeare its is found ten times in the First Folio, and the possessive it sixteen times; the modern editions, however, often give us its where the Folio has it. The following are the passages in which its occurs in his Plays;—

Heaven grant us it's peace, but not the king of Hungary's!—

Measure for Measure, i. 2.

How sometimes Nature will betray it's folly?

It's tendernesse? and make it selfe a Pastime

To harder bosoms? Looking on the Lynes

Of my Boyes face, me [my] thoughts I did requoyle

Twentie three yeers, and saw my self enbreech'd,

In my groene Velvet Coat; my Dagger muzzel'd,

Least it should bite it's Master, and so prove

(As Ornaments oft do's) too dangerous.—Winter's Tale, i. 2.

Be plainer with me, let me know my Trespas

By it's owne visage.—Ib.

It should heere be laide

(Either for life, or death) upon the earth

Of it's right Father.—Ib. iii, 3.

My trust

Like a good parent, did beget of him A falsehood, in it's contrary, as great

As my trust was.—The Tempest, i. 2.

This music crept by me upon the waters, Allaying both their fury, and my passion, With it's sweet air.—Ib.

As milde and gentle as the cradle babe, Dying with mother's dug between it's lips. 2 Henry VI, iii. 3.

Each following day Became the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders it's. Henry VIII, i. 1.

The use of it as a Genitive has been mentioned above; it was in fact a common provincialism, being used as a possessive pronoun in the West-Midland dialect; and from a provincialism it found its way into the written language of Shakspeare's time, and occasionally occurs in the first half of the seventeenth century; and largely contributed to familiarize the eye as well as the ear to the use of its.

The following passages from Shakspeare have it for its in the original text of the First Folio:-

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is and moves with it own organs; it lives by that which nourisheth it; and, the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lev. Of what colour is it of?

Ant. Of it own colour.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet .- Antony and Cleopatra, ii. 7.

I fear your disposition;

That nature, which contemns it origin, Cannot be bordered certain in itself.—Lear, iv. 2.

Who is that they follow?

And with such maimed rites! This doth betoken, The corse they follow did with desperate hand

Foredo it own life.—Hamlet, v. 2.

The public body,-which doth seldom Play the recenter,—feeling in itself A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal Of it own fall .- Timon of Athens, v. 2.

It hath it original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the brain. 2 Henra IV, i. 2.

> And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in it own fertilitie. Henry V, v. 2.

And yet I warrant it had upon it brow a bump as big as a young cock-Romeo & Juliet, i. 3. rel's stone.

The handmaids of all women, or more truly Woman it pretty selfe. Cymbeline, iii. 4.

That there thou leave it,

(Without more mercy) to it owne protection, And favour of the climate. - Winter's Tale, ii. 3.

The innocent milk in it most innocent mouth.—Ib. iii. 1.

xii Notes.

Nature shall bring forth,

Of it owne kind, all foizon, all abundance, To feed my innocent people.—The Tempest, ii. 1.

Do, child; go to it grandame, child; Give grandame kingdom, and it grandame will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig.—King John, ii. 1.

—Once methought
It lifted up it head, and did address
Itself to motion. Hamlet, i. 2.

Fool. For you know, Nunckle,
The Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckoo so long,

That it's [it has] had it head bit off by it young .-- King Lear, i. 4.

Its, as has been said, does not occur in Hooker, and I have discovered but one instance of it for its in his works:

That which is, of it own nature, either good or at least not evil, may by some accident become scandalous at certain times.

Ecclesiastical Polity. Book v. Ed. 1617.

In the Bible of 1611 the following verse is printed thus:-

That which groweth of it own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap. -Leviticus, xxv. 5.

So it remained till emended by the printers; it is so in Buck's Cambridge Edition of 1629, but in Field's Edition of 1653 'its own' has crept in, and so it stands at present. Thus the only instance of the word its in the English Bible is due to the printer's correction, or mistake probably.

As late as 1642, in Roger's Naaman the Syrian, there are instances of it as a genitive:—

The scope which mercy propounds to herself of the turning of the soul to God , even the glory of it own self.

Quoted by Archbishop Trench, English, Past and Present. Lect. iv. p. 442.

This genitival it, however, survives still in a common enough idiom; in such expressions as, 'I have no doubt of it proving a success,' we may either use it or its, just as an uninflected noun frequently precedes the verbal substantive in ing; we say, 'He had not heard of his son being dead.'

It will even more strongly be taken for granted, in the way already explained, that an affection's conducing to the good of another must even necessarily occasion it to conduce less to private good, if not to be positively detrimental to it.—Bp. Butler. Sermons. Upon the Love of our Neighbour. So far as the interests of virtue depend upon the theory of it being secured from open scorn, so far its very being in the world depends upon its appearing to have no contrariety to private interest and self-love.—Ib.

We have now seen that his was the possessive of it, or hit rather, as well as of his; that towards the end of Elizabeth's reign it was found that a sentence or idea was rendered ambiguous or obscured altogether by the writer having only one word to fall back upon for two distinct genders. How many ordinary English readers are there, as Abp. Trench points out, who would not take the last his in the following verse as referring to 'the Ancient of Days' as well as the former, whereas the wheels belonged to the throne ?

I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of Days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire.—Daniel, vii. 9.

That to avoid such ambiguities, her has been tried.

'What shall we say to the following,' says Bp. Louth a hundred years ago, 'where her is applied in the same manner [as his], and seems to make a strange confusion of gender ?'

He that pricketh the heart maketh it to shew her knowledge .--

Ecclus, xxii, 15.

We shall say that if his, the regular possessive of it, had been used instead of her, there would have been a still stranger confusion, it being then doubtful whether the 'knowledge' was of 'him that pricketh' or of the heart itself.

That it with and without the apostrophe was adopted for a while; that its appeared in or about the year 1598; that, notwithstanding its acceptance by Shakspeare and one or two of the dramatists of his time, it was reluctantly received, many other forms to escape the use of this new unrecognised one being found side by side with it. Then came in the reign of 'thereof.' long since happily exploded. I find that in the First Volume of Nuttall's Edition of Fuller's Worthies, its occurs less than forty times, while there are upwards of two hundred instances of thereof acting for it; and that in many cases his reception of its is due to the immediate presence of that unwieldy thereof. It is remarkable, however, that in his contemporary, Baxter,—in the Saints' Everlasting Rest, its occurs frequently, there being no attempt to evade the use of it, and it even occurs in the title of the work; this is in the Edition printed in 1652.

This brings us down to 1660; meantime, while almost discarded by the Prose writers, it appears now and again in the Poetry of the Stuart period. One watching its birth might have predicted that Milton would have given it currency. In his Christmus Ode, written so early as 1629, we find it in the following stanza: -

Nature that heard such sound,

Beneath the hollow round

Of Cynthia's seat, the airy region thrilling,

Now was almost won

To think her part was done,

And that her reign had here its last fulfilling .--

On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, x.

Again, eight years after, in the dedication with which his friend Lawes ushers in the Mask of Comus, we find its in the first line, though in Comus itself it nowhere occurs:—

This poem, which received its first occasion of birth from yourself and others of your noble family, and much honour from your own person in the performance, now returns again to make a final dedication of itself to you.

And yet in his great epic, published thirty years later, not merely does it occur only twice, but he systematically avoids the use of it, by personifying his substantives or employing his or her in a neuter sense.

xiv NOTES.

The mind is its own place, and in itself Can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven.—Paradise Lost, i. 254, 255.

No falsehood can endure

Touch of celestial temper, but returns Of force to its own likeness.—Ib. iv. 811—813.

These and the passage cited above from his Hymn On the Nativity are the only places where its occurs in Milton's poetry.

The late Professor Craik asserts that Milton' nowhere uses his in a neuter sense.' There are, however, one or two passages where there can hardly be said to be a personification, and where, at all events, a writer of the present day would have employed its. There is no personification here:—

Sure something holy lodges in that breast,
And with these raptures moves the vocal air,
To testify his hidden residence.—Comms, 246-218.

Between thee and the woman 1 will put Enmity, and between thy seed and her seed; Her seed shall bruise thy head, thou bruise his heel.

Paradise Lost, x. 179-181.

This latter might pass unnoticed, but that in Genesis (iii. 15) the seed is neuter, and his used in a neuter sense.

The following, in which her stands for its, is curious:

Hell itself will pass away,

And leave her dolorous mansions to the peering day.

On the Morning of Christ's Naticity, xiv.

The best explanation of Milton's rejection of the new form is that it was new; his was an age of change,—political, social, literary changes; he had his misgivings lest there might be something 'adverse in the climate, or fate of this age;' he feared, in fact, he had come 'an age too late,' as a contemporary of his complains:

Who can hope his lines should long

Last in a daily-changing tongue? Waller. Of English Verse, ii.

The publication of Paradise Lost is an important date in the history of the English Language and Literature, but even then its was not a recognised form. But in the last quarter of the seventeenth century it began to be generally adopted; and by the writers of Anne's reign it is treated as the only correct grammatical form of the neuter possessive.

It must not be thought that itself is its self; we meet it long before the introduction of its, and frequently in books of a later date that ignore its altogether. It is to be noted that it was formerly printed as two separate words, it self, as in the quotation from Ben Jonson's Silent Woman, just as throughout that edition my self, thy self, her self are uniformly printed as distinct words, while himself and them-selves form, each of them, a single word, or a compound one connected by a hyphen. Dr. Latham, then, is hardly correct when he writes, 'Itself is also ambiguous. The s may represent the s in its, as well as the s- in self.' And again, 'It is doubtful whether it originated in it-self or its-self.' Clearly not in the latter, but, as we have seen, in the genitival it.

There are two further points worthy of notice in the curious history of this little word.

The present inflection, however natural it may sound to us now, is altogether irregular; the t in hit was the sign of the neuter gender, and was regularly changed into -s, the sign of the possessive, the hi-t becoming hi-s; in the new form, however, we have the sign of the possessive following the sign of the neuter gender.

Again, its adoption has wrought a complete change in the construction of our sentences, and even in the style of the English Language. Not only did it not exist for the writers of the sixteenth century, but nowhere hardly does the want of such a form suggest itself; in fact there are few passages where we could now introduce it, if we tried, without altering the entire construction of the sentence.

The student will find the whole subject fully treated of by Abp.

Trench,* Craik, + and Marsh.1

257. All but less. This is explained to mean, altogether (what I should be,) except that I am less than he is; if this be correct there should be a comma after all, which no Edition has. The ordinary meaning of all but is nearly, almost. Albeit, although, has been proposed for all but.

Hath not built here for his envy. The place he has built here 259.

is not such as he would envy us the possession of.

✓ 261. Secure. Having no care or fear of danger. The word now means actually safe, but formerly when one did not apprehend any danger, however imminent it might be, he was said to be secure. It will be easily seen from the derivation of the word (sine cura) how its two almost contradictory meanings have arisen; a man who is without care, or careless, is likely to fall into danger, while one who is without vare, all being rendered sure, is secure from it. Milton frequently uses the word in its early sense; see iv. 186; vi. 130. Cf. also : --

> You all know, security Is mortal's chiefest enemy. Macbeth, iii. 5.

Man may securely sin, but safely never. B. Jonson. Epode.

-On she went

whilst others are confident they were betrayed by none save their own security. Fuller. Worthies, Lancashire.

263. Better to reign in Hell, &c. Todd quotes:--

Thus fell this Prince of Darkness, once a bright And glorious star..... To be in Heaven the second he disdains; So now the first in Hell and flames he reigns.

xvi notes.

Now forasmuch as I was once an Angel of light, it was the will of Wisdom to confine me to darkness, and to create me Prince thereof; that so I who could not obey in Heaven must command in Hell. And, believe me, Sir, I had rather control within my dark diocese, than to reinhabit column empyreum, and there live in subjection, under check.

Stafford. Niobe, or his Age of Tears.

266. Astonished. Thunder-struck, confounded. Lat. attonitus. Oblivious pool. Called afterwards the 'forgetful lake' (ii. 74.) Oblivious, causing forgetfulness, a transferred epithet, applied to the 'fiery deluge' in which they lay 'confounded' and 'benumbed.'

- 281. Erewhile 'aforetime,' lately, not long ago; A. S. er, before, and while, time.

282. Such a pernicious height. Adverbial phrase to fallen.

Pernicions. Ruinous, destructive; Lat. pernecare, to kill utterly. 285. Ethereal temper. Ethereal composition, 'celestial temper' (iv. 812); adjectival phrase to shield.

286. Cast. Past part; nominative absolute.

287. Like the moon, whose orb, &c. Like the magnified appearance of the moon seen through a telescope.

288. The Tuscon artist. Galileo. a famous astronomer and mathematician: he was born in 1564, at Florence in Tuscany. So rapidly did he acquire proficiency in Mathematics that, at the age of twentyfour, he was appointed Professor of that science at Pisa. One of his earliest discoveries was the isochronism of the vibrations of a simple pendulum, which is said to have dawned upon him when observing the swinging of the Lamp in the Cathedral of Pisa. He soon turned his attention to Astronomy, and to the investigation of the Ptolemaic and Copernican systems; he became convinced of the fallacy of the Ptolemaic theory, - that the earth is a fixed and motionless body, round which the planets revolve,—and accepted that of Copernicus, that the sun is the centre of the universe, that the other heavenly bodies rotate round it, and that the earth moves on its axis. In 1609 Galileo reached the height of his fame by the construction of his telescope, with which he discovered the four satellites of Jupiter, the phases of Venus, the starry nature of the milky way, the hills and valleys in the moon, and the spots on the solar disk, from the motion of which he inferred the rotation of the earth. These discoveries convinced him of the truth of the Copernican system, and led to his being prosecuted on a charge of heresy before the Inquisition in 1615, and again, in 1630, on the publication of his Dialogues on the Ptolemaic and Copernican Systems. On both occasions he was compelled to abjute his belief in the Copernican system; on the last instance, after having gone through the required abjuration of his belief that the earth moves on its axis, he is said to have stamped his foot on the ground, and said in a low tone :- "It moves for all that." He died in January 1646.

Milton had made his acquaintance during his travels in Italy; he refers to him by name, and alludes to his astronomical observations in v. 262; and in his Areopagitica:-

There (in Florence)it was that I found and visited the famous Galileo, grown old, a prisoner to the Inquisition, for thinking in Astronomy otherwise than the Franciscan and Dominican licensers thought.

The committee appointed by the Inquisition, to examine into Galileo's heretical opinions, decided that the 'diurnal motion of the earth was absurd,' and suspended the works of Copernicus in refutation of the Ptolemaic system. Up to as recent a period as 1828 the names of Galileo, Copernicus, and Toscalini still appeared in the Index Expurgatorius, or List of Books prohibited by the Church of Rome; this edition, however, omitted the usual imprecation against those who professed their belief in the motion of the earth. The earth, however, kept 'moving for all that,' and in the Index of Gregory XIV. (1831-1847) the names of Galileo and Copernicus are quietly omitted.

289. Fesolé. Now Fiesole, the ancient Fasula, a town on a hill three miles to the north-east of Florence, and overlooking Val d'Arno, or 'the valley of the Arno.'

202. His spear... he ralked with. For a staff he used his spear compared with which the loftiest Norway pine, cut down to make the mast of some great ship, would be like a mere rod. Homer, (Odyssey, ix. 322) compares Polyphenus' staff to the mast of a ship, and he is represented by Virgil as supporting his steps with the trunk of a pine tree.

Trunca manum pinus regit, et vestigia firmat. Aneid, iii. 659.

294. Ammiral. A large ship, the chief vessel in a fleet; obsolete in this sense.

The London, our admiral, lay expecting the whole East Indian fleet there, which were ten in number; to whom His Majesty, Charles II., was pleased to grant letters of mart. Fryer. Account of India and Persia, i. 1.

Admiral is from the Arabic, Amir-ell-Municipen, Prince of believers; and in the Spanish title of Admiral of Castile means merely a commander without reference to the sea. Fuller writes:—

Amiral or Admiral. Much difference there is about the original of this word, whilst most probable is their opinion who make it of Eastern extraction, borrowed by the Christians from the Saracens. These derive it from Amir, a prince, and alios, belonging to the sea, in the Greek language; such mixture being precedented in other words. Besides, seeing the Sultan's dominions, in the time of the holy war, extended from Sinus Arabius to the North eastern part of the Midland sea, where a barbarous kind of Greek was spoken by many, Amiral, thus compounded, was significatively comprehensive of his jurisdiction. Admiral is but a depraying of Amiral in vulgar mouths, however, it will nover be beaten out of the heads of the common sort, that seeing the sea is a scene of wonders, something of wonderment hath incorporated itself in this word, and that it hath a glimpse, cast, or eye of admiration therein. Worthies of England, vi.

296. Marle. Soil, ground; properly a kind of rich earth used for manure.

297. Heaven's. A dissyllable. Azure. Accented on the second syllable.

298. Sore. Greatly, excessively.

299. Nathless. Na (not) the less, nevertheless.

303. Vallombrosa. A valley in Etruria, the ancient name of Tuscany; it lies about eighteen miles from Florence, and is thickly wooded. Lat. vallis, a valley, and umbru, a shade. Milton was in Florence in August and September, 1638.

305. Orion. A constellation which sets in November, and was supposed to be the precursor of stormy weather (nimbosus Orion, Encid, i. 535.) It is represented by the figure of an armed man.

306. The Red Sea coast. The Red Sea was called in Hebrew Yum-Soof, the sea of Sedge, from the quantity of sea-weed in it.

The Hebrews, who had best reason to remember it do call it Zuph, or the Weedy Sea, because it was full of sedge, or they found it so in their passage. Sir T. Browne, Vulyar Errors. Of the Red Sea.

207. Busiris. He applies the name of Busiris to that Pharaoh of Egypt who was drowned with his army in the Red Sea, when pursuing the Children of Israel. Examples, xiv. 23–31. Busiris was a fabulous King of Egypt who sacrificed to Jupiter all strangers who visited Egypt, but was himself slain by Hercules.

Menophian. Egyptian; Memphis being a large city of Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile.

Chivalry. 'Horsemen,' cavalry; Fr. cheval, a horse. Milton uses it again in this sense, Paradise Regained, iii. 344.

309. Perfidious. Because Pharnon followed the Israelites after having allowed them to depart.

310. The sojourners of Goshen. Goshen was the province in which the Israelites dwelt during their captivity in Egypt. Genesis, xlv. 10.

320. Virtue. Strength, valour; from its derivation from the Lat. vis, strength, it formerly denoted power, efficacy, physical power as well as moral excellence.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God of all thin heart, and of all thi soul, and of all thi mynde, and of all thy virtu, or mighte.—Wyclif. Mark, xii. 30. He went up into heaven, and angels, and powers, and virtues, are made subject to him.—Ib. Sermon on John vi. 51.

Well skilled

In every virtuous plant, and healing herb.-Comus, 621, 622.

This meaning, still survives in virtual, virtually, and in the expression 'in virtue of.'

328. With linked thunderbolts. The fate of Ajax Oileus, Zeneid, i. 44, 45.

For. On account of.

331. Abashed. Ashamed; from abaisit, the past part. of abase.

332. Men wont to watch on duty. In all editions, except Keightley's and Masson's the comma is after duty, in these it is after watch. It makes equally good sense to take on duty with 'watch' or with 'sleeping;' but to me the pause sounds best after duty.

335. Nor did they not perceive. A Latinism, for 'they perceived.' 337. To their general's voice they soon obeyed. 'Obey to' occurs in

Chancer, Spenser, and the Bible: -

Lo, now the heavens obey to me alone. Faeric Queene, xi. 25.

To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey.—Romans, vi. 16.

338. The potent rod. Exodus, vi. 12-15.

339. Auram's son. Moses; Exodus, vi. 20.

340. Coast. Land, region; formerly applied to any district or boundary, and not merely the sea shore; thus i. 164; ii. 564; vi. 529.

341. Warping. Moving in a curved line, a nautical term.

343. Darkened all the land. "They covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened." Exodus, x. 15.

345. Cope. Roof, canopy; Lat. capul, the head.

253. Rhene. The Rhine; Lat. Rhenes. Danaer, the Danube, Ger. Donau. Rhene and Danaer is the spelling of the seventeenth century.

Her barbarous sons. The Goths, Huns, and Vandals that overran the Roman empire.

355. Beneath Gibraltar. South of Gibraltar; Lat. infra, below.

360. Erst. Formerly; erst is er-est, the superlative of ere, A. S, ær, before.

361. Of their names in heavenly records, &c. "Thou hast put out their name for ever and ever; their memorial is perished with them." Psalm. ix, 5, 6.

363. Books of life. "I will not blot his name out of the Book of life." Rev. iii. 5.

870. See Romans, i. 23.

372. Religions. Religious rites and ceremonies; a classic use of religiones. This is the only place in his Poems that Milton uses it in the plural.

Pomp. Grandeur, show; Gr. $\pi \delta \mu \pi \eta$, a procession in which sense

Milton uses it in viii. 61.

376. Their names. With the catalogue of deities here, compare those named in the Nativity Ode:

Peor and Baalim

Forsake their temples dim,

With that twice-battered god of Palestine;

And mooned Ashtaroth,

Heaven's queen and mother both,

Now sits not girt with tapers' boly shine;

The Lybic Hammon shrinks his horn,

In vain the Tyrian maids their wounded Thamanz mourn.

And sullen Moloch fled.

'Hath left in shadows dread

His burning idol all of blackest hue;

In vain, with cymbals' ring,

They call the grisly king,

In dismal dance about the furnace blue;

The brutish gods of Nile as fast,

Isis and Orus, and the dog Anubis, haste.

Nor is Osiris seen

In Memphian grove or green,

Trampling the unshowered grass with lowings loud;

Nor can he be at rest

Within his sacred chest;

Nought but profoundest Hell can be his shroud;

In vain with timbreled anthems dark

The sable-stolèd sorcerers bear his worshipped ark.

XX NOTES.

He feels from Judah's land
The dreaded Infant's hand,
The rays of Bothlehem blind his dusky eyne;
Nor all the gods beside,

Nor Typhon hage ending in snaky twine;
Our Babe, to show his Godhead true,
Can in his swaddling bands control the damned crew.

xxii-xxiv.

384. Their alters by his alter. "In their setting of their threshold by my threshold, and their post by my posts, they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations." Exchiel, xliii. 8.

385. Abide. Endure, brave; A. S. abidan, to stay.

387. Between the cherubim. Exodus, xxv. 22, and 2 Kings, xix. 15. 388. Within his sanctuary, &c. 2 Kings, xxi. 4, 5; Ezekiel, vii. 20.

391. Affront. Oppose, come opposite; this is the primary sense :-

That he, as 'twere by accident, may here Affront Ophelia. Hamlet, iii. 1.

392. Moloch, or Molech, or Milcom, the name of the "abomination of the children of Ammon." 1 Kings, xi. 7; 2 Kings, xxiii. 13. The word, like Banl, means King; his 'grim idol' was of brass, having the head of a culf, and his arms extended to receive his victims. The Ammonites offered up human sacrifices, causing "their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech." Jeromiah, xxxii, 35.

397. Rabba. Rabbah, or Rabbath, was the chief city of the Ammonites, and the seat of the worship of Moloch; it is called the City of Waters in 2-Samuel, xii. 27; and was situated in a valley watered by the Jabbok, about fifty miles north-east of Jerusalem.

398. Argob and Basan, or Bashan, were countries on the east of the Jordan, subject to the Ammonites; their modern names are Trachonites and Peræa.

399. Arnon. The southern boundary of the Ammonites, it flowed westward into the Dead Sea.

400. Audicious. Because so near the temple of the true God.

403. Opproblems hill. "Solomon built a high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for Moloch the abomination of the children of Ammon." (1 Kings, xi. 7); hence it is called the opproblems hill, and 'hill of scandal,' (line 416), and again the 'offensive mountain' (143.)

403. His grove. Moloch's grove.

7404. The valley of Hinnom. "They have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom." Jeremiah, vii. 31. Gehenna, or the Valley of Hinnom, was just under the walls of the city of Sion; during the celebration of the rites and the offering of the human sacrifices to Moloch drums and timbrels were beaten to drown the cries of the victims, it was thence called Tophet, from toph, a drum. In order to put a stop to the idolatry, the place was 'defiled' by Josiah, and so Gehenna, from the perpetual fire kept up there to consume the refuse of the city thrown into it, became a

"type of Hell,' and is in the Syriac language used to express the place of punishment in the future state.

406. Chemos. Sc. 'came.' Chemos, or Chemosh, the god of the Moabites; some suppose him to have been the same as Bacchus, some the Sun, some Adonis, and others Thammuz. Milton follows Jerome who considers Chemos to be another name for Baal Peor, (Numbers, xxv.) and the same as Priapus.

1407. Arour was a city on the river Arnon, the boundary of the Moabites. Nebo a city on the east, belonging to the Reubenites. Abarim, called also Nebo, and Pisgah, (Denteronomy, xxxii, 29.), was a range of mountains on the south of Moab and opposite Heavbon, or Heshbon, and Horonaim, were cities of the Moabites taken from them by Seon, or 'Sihon, king of the Amorites;' Numbers, xxi. 26. Sibmah or Shibmah, and Eleal or Elealch, were also in the land of Moab. "O vine of Shibmah, I will weep for thee." Jeremiah, dviii. 31 — 34.

411. The Asphaltic pool. The Dead Sea, the site of Sodom and Jomorrah, so called from the asphalt or bitumen cast up from the bottom. In Scripture it is called the Salt Sea, and the Sea of the Plain (Joshna, iii. 16.)

Peor. Baal-peor. Numbers, xxv. 1-3; Joshua, xxii, 17.

Orgies. Rites; Gr. oppia, the rites of Bacchus.

Enlarged. Extended.

417. Hard by. Close to. The seat of the worship of Chemos, the god of lust, was brought close to that of Moloch, the 'horrid king,' vho delighted in human sacrifices.

Good Josiah, &c. 2 Kings, xxiii.

The bordering flood. In Genesis, xv. 18, the land promised to 419. Abraham was to extend to the Euphrates.

- 420. Old Euphrates. Old, because mentioned by that name in the nooks of Moses. Genesis, ii. 14; xv. 18; Deuteronomy, xi. 24.

- The brook that parts, &c. According to Newton the brook Besor. 422. Baalim and Ashtaroth. Gods and goddesses of Syria and Palestine; under these names the sun and moon and the host of leaven' were worshipped. The Israelites fell into idolatry to them early in their history. Judges, ii. 13; x. 6.

Those referring to the former, these to the latter.

· 423. Spirits, when they please, Sr. The whole of this passage is robably founded on Burton's Chapter on the Nature of Devils:-

Psellus, a great observer of the nature of devils, holds they are corpoeal, and have aërial bodies; Bodine goes further yet, and will ave that they can assume other acrial bodies, all manner of shapes at their pleasures, appear in what likeness they will themselves, that they are most swift in motion, and can pass many miles in an instant.

Anatomy of Melancholy, i. 2.

Pope imitates Milton's lines:—

For spirits, freed from mortal laws, with ease Assume what sexes and what shapes they please.

Rape of the Lock, i. 70, 71.

Dilated. Baxter, (Saints' Rest, ii. 3) speaking of devils possessing men's bodies, quotes Tertullian, Domones sua hæc corpora con-trahunt et dilatunt ut volunt. Satan was 'dilated' when he stood 'like Teneriff or Atlas, his stature reaching the sky.' iv. 986.

433. Living strength. God is called the 'Strength of Israel,' Samuel, xv. 29.

Unfrequented. Qualifying altar.

435. Bestial gods. Exodus, xxxii.; 2 Kings, xviii. 4.

Bowed down in battle. See Judges, ii. 11—15.

438. Astoreth. The moon was worshipped under this name by the Phoenicians, 1 Kings, xi. 5; she is called the "queen of heaven," Jeremiah, xliv. 25.

442. Unsung may agree either with songs or Astarte.

Though large. "God gave Solomon wisdom and largeness of heart." 1 Kings, iv. 29.

445. Beguiled by fair idolatresses. 1 Kings, xi. 1 -- 8.

• 446. Thummuz. Thammuz was a Syrian deity, the same as Adonis. The story is that Thammuz was slain by a wild boar in Lebanon, from which mountain the Adonis descends; the feast in his honour was held in the Hebrew month Thammuz or July, when the river becomes a purple colour from the red earth washed down by the rains, but the Syrian, women, supposing it to be discoloured with the blood of Thammuz, bewailed his fate with loud lamentations.

449. Amorous ditties. The same expression is used again similarly :-

A bovy of fair women, richly gay In gems and wanton dress; to the harp they sung Soft amorous ditties, and in dance came on. xi. 582 581.

451. Supposed. The sentence is incomplete, and on a Latin con-Adonis ran purple to the sea with blood of Thammuz, as was supposed; or, (which was) supposed (to be) with blood of Thammuz.

453. Sion's daughters. The women of Jerusalem.

455. Ezekiel saw. See Ezekiel, viii. 12 - 14.

456. Dark idolatries. Ezekiel, viii. 12.

Who mourned in earnest. There was good reason for the worshippers of Dagon mourning for the image of their god, and this is contrasted with the groundless grief of the Syrian damsels for Thammuz.

The captive ark, &c. See 1 Samuel, v. 460. Gransel. The grandel or groundsill, the 'threshold.'

462.Sea-monster. Milton calls him 'sea-idol' in Sumson Agonistics, 13, and follows the theory that the name Dagon is from Dag, a fish; and that his idol was in the upper part a man, and in the lower a fish. The marginal reading for 'the stump of Dagon' (1 Samuel, v. 4) is the 'fishy part.'

464. Azotus, or Ashdod, Gath, Ascalon, or Askelon, Accuron, or Ekron, and Gaza were the five chief towns in Palestine where Dagon was worshipped. 1 Samuel, vi. 17.

It was at Gaza that Samson pulled down the temple of Dagon upon the Philistines, Judges, xvi. In Genevis, x. 19, Gaza is mentioned as the southernmost point of Canaan, hence 'frontier bounds.' 467. Rimmon. A Syrian god, worshipped at Damascus, 2 Kings,

v. 12, 18.

471. A leper. Naaman, who, on his leprosy being cured, vowed to Elisha that he would henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the Lord.' 2 Kings, v. 17.

A king. Ahaz, king of Judah, who caused an altar to be built at Jerusalem similar to one he saw at Damascus, 2 Kings, xvi. 10—15, and "he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus." 2 Chron., xxviii, 23.

A72. His conqueror. Ahaz took possession of Damascus after the king of Assyria had conquered it for him.

. 473. Disparage. Lat. dispar, unequal; the primary use of dis-parage is to join unequally in marriage.

477. Crew. The word crew occurs twenty-one times in Milton's poems, and is always (with one exception, L'Allegro, 38) applied to evil beings or things, 'horrid,' 'damned,' 'cursed,' 'monstrous,' and is his favourite word when speaking of the evil Spirits. Like most words meaning number it is now restricted in meaning, and refers only to a boat's or ship's company. It is from the same root as crowed.

✓ 478. Osiris, Isis, Orns. Egyptian deities; Orns was the son of Osiris and Isis, the sun and moon; the former was venerated under the forms of the sacred bulls, Apis and Muevis. 479. Abused. Imposed upon, deceived.

The whole car in Denmark Is by a forged process of my death Rankly abused. Hamlet, i. 4.

481. Wandering gods disguised in brutish forms. The Egyptian worship of bulls, dogs, &c., is derived from the fabulous tradition that when the Giants invaded heaven, the gods in fright fled into Egypt disguised under the forms of animals; their transformations are described in Ovid. Metam. v. 319.

483. Borrowed gold. Borrowed from the Egyptians; Exodus, xii. 35.

484. The calf in Oceb. Ecodos, xxxii.

The rebel king. Jeroboam, who was made king when the Israelites rebelled against Rehoboam; 1 Kings, xii. He doubled the sin of the golden calf, by making 'two calves of gold, and he set one in Bethel, and the other put he in Dan.' 1 Kings, xii.

486. Grazed. Fed on grass. Psalm. evi. 19.

488. Equalled with one stroke, Sr. Exodus, xii. 12, 29, 30.

490. Belial was not worshipped as a deity, but was the personification of sinful lust; lewd licentious persons are called 'children of Belial,' 1 Samuel, ii. 12; Judges, xix. 22. The word means wickedness, and in the New Testament (2 Corinthians, vi. 15.) it is used as synonymous with Satan.

493. Who more oft than he? Who (is) more often (to be found) than he?

498. Liveurious. Licentious; luwury, and luwurious in our older writers referred to the sinful lusts of the flesh:—

Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for livery and damned incest. Hamlet, i. 5.

502. Flown with violence, &c. Flown is over-flown, filled to over-flowing; cf:

xxiv NOTES.

> These, whelmed in wine, swelled up with meats and weakened With hourly whoredoms, never left the side

Of Cataline. Ben. Jonson. Cataline, v.

Witness. 'Bear witness;' imperative mood, third person, with streets and night as subject; or 'see,' second person, with streets and night as object.

Sodom. Genesis, xix.

504. Gibeah. Judges, xix.

In the first edition it was less accurately---

When hospitable doors

Yielded their matrons, to prevent worse rape.

The rest were long to tell. Were, would be; the same expression occurs in x. 469; xii. 260.

508. Jacan's issue. The Ionians, the descendants of Javan, the fourth son of Japheth and grandson of Noah (Genesis, x. 2.) Javan is supposed to have settled in Asia Minor, about Ionia.

Todd, Major, and Edmondston have a semicolon after issue: in the early editions, and in Newton's and Keightley's there is a comma after gods, and none after issue, which is thus to be taken with held, and not with the first clause. The latter is the preferable reading; but Keightley is wrong in saying "the punctuation in Todd is manifestly incorrect, for it makes the gods the issue of Javan;" no, it would only say 'the Ionian gods of the Ionians.' Some modern editions get over the difficulty, or rather leave it as it stands, by placing a comma after both gods and issue.

Titan. The Titans; see line 198, note.

Like measure found. Zeus or Jove dethroned his father 513. Cronos (Saturn.)

Jupiter is said to have been born on mount Ida in Crete. 515. Ida. Olympus. A range of mountains between Macedonia and Thessaly, the abode of Jupiter and the gods.

517. The Delphian cliff. Mount Parnassus, in Phocis, on which was the town of Delphi with the famous temple and oracle of Apollo.

Dodona. In Epirus; where was an oracle of Jupiter, the most ancient in Greece.

Doric land. Greece; the Dorians were one of the principal tribes of Greece, and eventually conquered Peloponnesus.

The Hesperian fields. Italy, called Hesperia, the Western land, by the Greeks; similarly Spain was the Hesperia of the Latin poets. The Celtic. The Celtic (fields), Gaul and other countries inhabited by Celts.

Roamed. Used transitively; so again, ix. 82; and in like manner, wander, iv. 234.

- The utmost isles. The British Isles and Iceland (Ultima Thule.)

527. Like doubtful hue. Similar dejected looks with some glimpse of joy obscurely expressed.

528. Recollecting. Re-collecting, in its literal sense of gathering again.

529. Semblance not substance. So in Spenser;—

Full lively is the semblaunt, though the substance dead .-Facrie Queene, ii., 9, 2. 531. Straight. Immediately; A. S. stræcan, to stretch out.

Azazel is the marginal reading for 'scape goat' in Leviticus, 534. This is where Milton got the name, and he follows the theory that Azazel, the 'scapegoat,' was an evil demon which dwelt in deserts and was to be appeased by victims.

537. Like a meteor. Gray imitates this line:

Loose his beard, and hoary hair Streamed like a meteor to the troubled air. The Burd.

Emblazed. Emblazoned; a term in heraldry.

543. Reign. Kingdom; used in this sense in old writers; see the quotation from Chaucer under orient, line 546.

546. Orient. Bright, shining. From the Lat. oriens; its primary meaning is rising; --

> Moon, that now meetest the orient sun, now fliest. v. 175. Now when fair morn orient in heaven appeared, Up rose the Victor-Angels.

And hence 'eastern,' 'the East:'--

So doughty was hire husband and eke she, That they conquered many regnes grete In the orient, with many a faire citec.

Canterbury Tales. The Monk's Tale, 14319-14321.

And so applied to what is dazzling or bright like light or the rays of the sun :--

Morning light

More orient in you western cloud, that draws O'er the blue firmament a radiant white, And slow descends with something heavenly fraught. Paradise Lost, xi. 204-207.

¹¹ 548. Serrical. Compact; Fr. serrer, to bind; Bacon uses the verb urr, to join closely.

550. The Doric mood. The Dorian measure was a grave and majestic style of music. The other moods or measures among the Greeks were the Phrygian, which was mirthful and gay, and the Lydian, soft and mournful:--

If we think to regulate printing; thereby to regulate manners, we must regulate all recreations and pastimes, all that is delightful to man. No music must be heard, no song be set or sung, but what is grave and Doric. Areopagitica.

> Ever, against eating cares, Lop me in soft Lydian airs. L'Allegro, 136.

Softly sweet in Lydian measures,

Soon he soothed his soul to pleasures. Alexander's Feast.

Recorders. Flutes, pipes. Richardson (Dictionary) quotes :-551.

The flute and the single pipe or recorder were the invention of Pan; the son of Mercurie. Holland. Plinie. vii. 56.

Come, some music, come, the recorders. Hamlet, iii. 2.

Breathed. Inspired; the subject is as, line 551. Cf. vi. 65.

KXVI NOTES.

561. Charmed. Soothed, beguiled; the primary meaning of charm is a song, Lat. carmen, a song; and in the Dorset dialect charm is used in the sense of noise, hubbub.

Whilst favorable times did us afford Free liberty to chaunt our charms at will.

Spenser. Tears of the Muses, 243, 244.

The sheperd's boy (best knowen by that name)
Sate, as is custome was, upon a day,
Charming his oaten pipe unto his peers.
Colin Clout's Come Home Again, 1—5.

And as the owl by chattering charms
Is wondered at by other birds,
So they came wondering at my harms,
And yield me no relief but words.

The Soldier's Repentance, in the Roxburgh Ballads.

Then, from words or verses of supposed secret power being used in incantations, charm comes to mean magic influence, bewitchment;—

Riding through the air she comes, Lured with the smell of infant-blood, to dance With Lapland witches, while the labouring moon Eclipses at their charms. ii. 663-666.

And lastly, to influence very powerfully, to fascinate, enchant, delight greatly.

Yet with a pleasing sorcery, could charm Pain for a while, or anguish; and excite Fallacious hope. ii. 566 -598.

For eloquence the soul, song charms the sense. i. 556.

The words spell, enchant, and their derivatives have undergone the same changes; a spell. A S. spellian, to tell, is a charm, and spell-bound means enchanted; enchant is from the Lat. cantare, to sing; and fascinate means (1) to bewitch, (2) to encapture, delight.

563. Horrid. Rough; Lat., horridus; so in ii. 710; and horrent,

ii. 513.

572. His for 'its.' referring to heart.

573. Since created man. Since the creation of man; a Latin idiom, post homiuem creatum; cf. 'after summons read,' 798.

574. Met such carbodied force, Sc. No body of men has ever assembled which could be reckoned of greater importance, compared with these, than the Pygmics.

576. That small infantry. The Pygmies, a fabulous race of dwarfs; Homer speaks of their dwelling on the shores of the ocean, and being attacked every spring by cranes. Pliny speaks of them as dwelling 'circa fontem Gauges, extrema in parte montium;' and so Milton (line 780) refers to them as the 'Pygmæan race beyond the Indian mount.' Pygmæ is a measure thirteen and a half inches long.

577. Phlegra. In Macedonia, where the Titans or giants fought with the gods.

578. Thebes. In Bootia; the allusion is to the celebrated expedition of the Seven against Thebes, in which Adrastus, King of Argos, and five others joined Polynices to regain for him the kingdom of Thebes from his brother Eteocles.

Ilium. Troy. Both in the Trojan War (1184, B. C.) and at Thebes

the gods took part with the heroes.

580. Uther's son. King Arthur, son of Uther Pendragon.

Armoric. Armorica was the ancient name of Brittany, the north-west coast of France.

- 583. Jousted. Engaged in tilt or tournament; Skinner derives joust, or just, from Lat. justa, as applied to funeral rites, because gladiatorial combats were exhibited at them.

Aspramont. Asprement, a town in the Netherlands. Montalban. Montalban, in the south of France.

584. Trebisond. Anciently Trapezus, in Asia Minor. 585. Whom Biserta sent. The Saracen conquerors of Spain. Biserta is the ancient Utica, in Africa.

586. Charlemain. Charlemagne, King of France; in 778 he attacked the Saracens of Spain, but his army was intercepted and cut to pieces in the pass of Roncesvalles; he himself was not slain but was crowned Emperor in 800, and died in 814. Milton follows the Spanish historians in saying that he fell at Fontarabbia, and Dante:-

So terrible a blast

Orlando blew not, when that dismal rout O'erthrew the host of Charlemain, and quenched His saintly warfare. Hell, xxxi. 13--16.

Fontarabbia. A strong fortress in Biscay.

Thus for these. Were is understood.

588. Observed. Served, obeyed.

> You know the use of riches, and dare give now From that bright heap, to me, your poor observer, Or to your dwarf. Ben Jonson. The For, i. 1.

'Tis true, beside,

That I am fain to spin mine own poor raiment Out of my mere observance, 1b. iii. 2.

597. Disastrous. Announcing disasters; see Humlet, i. 1., 'disasters in the sun, and the like precurse of fierce events; and Virgil. Georgics, i. 464.

598. Half the nations. Referring to the extent on the earth's surface from which an eclipse is visible.

▶ 601. Intrenched. Furrowed, cut; Fr. trencher, to cut.

Safe in a ditch he bides,

With twenty trenched gashes on his head. Macbeth, iii. 4.

Considerate. Deliberating, meditative. 603.

Remorse. Feelings of compunction or regret, the biting 605. pains of the mind or conscience for any act; from Lat. re, again. and mordere, to bite. In old writers remorse and remorseful mean pity and compassionate, as—

> Valiant, wise, remorseful, well-accomplished. Two Gentlemen, iv. 3. Remorseless, treacherous, kindless villain. Hamlet, ii. 2.

And remorse is used in the sense of sorrow, pity, Book v. 566.

xxviii Notes.

It is worthy of note that the A. S. for remorse, agentyte, exactly corresponds with the Latin derivative; one of the Arundel Mss. in the British Museum, the date of which is 1340, is called the Agentyte of Inveyt, i. e., The Remorse of Conscience.

Passion. Compassion, sympathy, fellow-feeling.

609. Amerced. Deprived of, made to forfeit. By the ancient law, punishments were remitted by the payment of a fine, called merci; hence to grant mercy was to grant that the fine should be received as ransom for the life forfeited to the law; thus mercy came to mean pity, benevolence, kindness. To amerce was to fine, Lat. merces, reward.

I'll amerce you with so strong a fine,

That you shall all repent the loss of mine. Romeo and Juliet, iii. 1.

- 613. Scathed. Damaged, injured; A. S. scathe, hurt; scathing is the A. S. for lightning, 'heaven's fire.'

619. Thrice he essayed, &c. Borrowed from Ovid:

Ter conata loqui, ter fletibus era rigavit. Metamorphoses, xi. 419.

632. Puissant. Powerful; a French word, common in Elizabethan writers.

633. Emptied Heaven. See ii. 692; v. 710; and vi. 156.

646. Close. Secret.

647. No less. Not less than we have; just as we have been mistaken as regards his might, so he will learn we are not yet overcome.

662. Understood. Understood among themselves, secret, concealed, ii. 41 and 187.

668. Clashed on their sounding shields. A custom among the Romans before attacking the enemy. The following passage, written about thirty years after the publication of Paradise Lost, is interesting as bearing on the question of the early popularity of the Poem:-

The Romans made one addition to this custom [of a general shout], at the same time clashing their arms with great violence, to improve the strength and terror of the noise; this they called concussio armorum. Our fumous Milton has given a noble description of it as used by the Rebel Angels after their Leader's speech for the renewing of the war.

Kennett. Antiquities of Rome, ii. 4.

669. Hurling defiance. So in Shakspeare:-

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth. Julius Casar, v. 1.

671. Belched. Belch is used by Spenser (Faerie Queene, i. 11) and Dryden (Ovid, Metamorphoses, xv.) of the flames and sulphureous fire 'vomited' by Ætna.

674. The work of sulphur. Metals were supposed to be compounded of mercury and sulphur.

It is of the one part,
A humid exhalation, which we call
Materia liquida, or the unctuous water;
On the other part a certain crass, and viscous
Portion of earth; both which concorporate
Do make the elementary matter of gold;
Which is not yet propria materia,
But common to all metals and stones.

For; where it is forsaken of that moisture, And hath more dryness it becomes a stone; Where it retains more of the humid fatness, It turns to sulphur, or to quicksilver,

Who are the parents of all other metals.

Ben Jonson. The Alchenist, ii. 3.

675. Brigad. So spelt by Milton and accented on the first syllable. Perhaps from Ger. brecken, to break; a body of troops detached or broken off from the main body.

676. Pioneers. Fr. pionnier, fr. pioche, a pickaxe; or Sp. peon, the foot.

678. Mammon. A Syriac word meaning riches; personified here as the God of riches.

682. The riches of Heaven's parement. "The street of the city was pure gold." Revelation, xxi. 21.

685. Suggestion. Instigation; generally used in a bad sense by early writers; cf. iii. 129.

685. Rifled the bowels. So in Ovid: --

Itum est in viscera terre,

Quasque recondiderat, Stylisque admoverat umbris,

Effodiuntur opes, irritamenta malorum. Metomorphoses, i. 138.
686. The Centre. By centre Milton means the earth itself, and not merely the centre of the earth, as most commentators take it. Centre in old writers is applied to the earth as centre of the Universe:

The heavens themselves, the planets and this centre

Observe degree, priority, and place. Troilus & Cressida, i. 32.

Impious. In the sense of undutiful, unnatural, because directed against their 'mother earth.'

688. Better hid. From Horace: -

Aurum irrepertum et sic melius situm Quum terra celat. Odes, III. iii. 50.

690. Admire. Wonder; Lat. admiror, to wonder. It occurs again in this sense in ii. 677, and admiration is so used, iii. 271.

694. Babel. Babylon; the walls of Babylon and the pyramids of Egypt were two of the seven wonders of the world.

696. Strength and art. Depend on of und; monuments of fame and of strength and of art. Newton is wrong, I think, in taking 'strength' and 'art' as subjects with 'monuments' of 'are outdone.'

697. In an hour. Understand 'these perform.'

699. Hunds innumerable. According to Diodorus Siculus and Pliny there were 360,000 men employed for nearly twenty years on one of the pyramids.

703. Founded. Melted; Lat. fundo, to pour. This is the reading of the First Edition; in the subsequent editions till Bentley's it was found out; see vi. 518.

704. Bullion. Ore, uncoined gold or silver; bullion dross is the dross of the metal.

714. Doric pillars. Pillars of the Doric order of architecture; there were three orders of Grecian architecture, the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian, of which the Doric is the most ancient.

XXX NOTES.

715. Architrave. The architrave is the principal beam (Gr. $\rho \chi n, \hspan n, \hspan n \text{trabs}), which rests on the column. The frieze (Fr. frise) is the part between the architrave and the cornice, generally embossed with the figures of animals and other ornaments of sculpture. The cornice (Gr. \chi o \rho \rho \chi n, \hspan n \text{crown}) the uppermost and most prominent part of the entablature, that which crowns an order.

Nor did there want. Nor was there absent. Cornice and frieze are the subjects of want.

717. Fretted. Carved, ornamented by being 'graven;' so in Shakspeare:—

This most excellent canopy, the air,-

This majestical roof fretted with golden fire. Hamlet, ii. 2.

718. Alcairo or Grand Cairo, the capital of Egypt, called by its founder Al Kahirah, the City of Victory.

Not Babylon &c. Bentley fairly enough objects that he had already (line 694) challenged Babylon and Memphis; and further that Alcairo, the name of the modern capital of Egypt, is inappropriate in conjunction with Belus and Scrapis.

720. Belas. The son of Nimrod, second king of Babylon, and the first man worshipped as a god; the Bel of the Chaldwans, and Baal of the Phœnicians.

Serapis. An Egyptain deity. Milton accentuates it on the first syllable, but the correct pronunciation is Scrapis.

723. The pile stood fixed, &c. The building stood fixed (as to) her stately height; a Greek construction.

724. Discover. Disclose. Wide within. An adverbial phrase.

727. Pendent. Agreeing with 'many a row.' Subtle. Artful; Lat: subtilis, finely spun.

728. Cressets. "An open lamp," says Halliwell, "suspended on pivots in a kind of fork; and carried upon a pole, formerly much used in nocturnal processions. The light was a wreathed rope, smeared with pitch or rosin, stuck on a pin in the centre of a bowl. Minshew derives it from the Dutch keerse, a candle; but Skinner, from croissette, a little cross, because the sign of the cross was usually placed upon beacons. It is properly a beacon light:—

Full many a torch and crosset glared. Lay of the Last Minsteel, iii. 26.

729. Naphtha. An inflammable mineral liquid, like petroleum. Asphaltus. Asphalt, a solid, bituminous, inflammable substance, like pitch; large quantities are cast up from the Dead Sea or 'Asphaltic Pool.'

736. Gave to rule. A Latinism; 'mulcere dedit fluctus.' Alneid, i. 65. 738. His name. Himself. cf. 'The name of Demogorgon,' ii, 964.

739. Ausonian land. Italy; the name Ausonia, a country on the west coast, (now Campania) was often poetically used for the whole.

740. Mulciber. One of the names of Vulcan, the god of fire; lit.

the Founder; Lat mulcere, to melt.

How he fell 3c In Homer, Iliad, i. 590. Newton observes, "It is worth observing how Milton lengthens out the time of Vulcan's fall. He not only says with Homer, that it was all day long, but we are led through the parts of the day, from morn to noon, from noon to evening, and this 'a summer's day.' There is a similar passage in the Odyssey where Ulysses describes his sleeping twenty-four hours together, and to make the time seem the longer, divides it into several parts, and points them out distinctly to us. Odyssey, vii. 288."

742. Sheer. Completely, entirely; der. A. S. sciran, to cut; the word clean is sometimes used adverbially in the same sense.

My keepers knit the knot

That Youth did laugh to scorn,

Of me that clean shall be forgot,

As I had not been born. Lord Vaux. The Aged Lover.

746. Lemnos. Was sacred to Hephastus, or Vulcan; and his workshop is sometimes said to be in it.

Eyean. Milton has altered the accent from the second to the first syllable.

750. Engines. Perhaps used in the sense of eraft, wiles; a common meaning in old writers; and so, too, engineers: -

All wicked and base intentions shall be stripped of the veils that now enfold them; all shrewd contrivers and engineers of mischief, and practisers of unjust and malicious guile shall be exposed to shame.

Barrow. Fifth Sermon. Ed. 1678.

756. Pandemonium. The palace of all the devils; Gk. παν, and δαμόνιον.

761. Access. Approach, places of entrance; the accent is on the second syllable.

The gates and porches. Nominatives in apposition with access. In Todd and Masson there is a semicolon after throughd, making gates and porches nominatives with hall to swarmed.

763. A covered field. The lists, or enclosed ground for tilt and tournament.

764. Wont. Used to, were accustomed to. A. S. wunian, to live, to dwell:--

A shipman was there wonned far by west.

Canterbury Tales, Prologue. 390.

Out of the ground uprose,

As from his lair, the wild beast where he wons
In forest wild.

Paradise Lost, vii. 456—457.

Woming frequently occurs in old writers meaning dwellinglace, habitation:

His wonning was full fair upon a heath, With green trees yshadowed was his place.

Canterbury Tales, Prologue. 608, 609.

Soldan. An old form of Sultan, which comes from an Arabic word meaning mighty; it was first borne by Mahmud the Gaznevide, and passed into Greek in the form Σουλτανος, and in Latin souldanos.

765. Panim. Pagan; in old writers written paien, payen, paynim, panim; Lat. paganus, a villager.

Whereas, religion did first take place in cities, and in that respect was a cause why the name of Pagans, which properly signifieth country people, came to be used in common speech for the same that Infidels and unbelievers were, it followed &c. Hooker, Ecclesiastical Polity. i. 80.

766. Career. Tilt; lit. go at full speed.

767. The air brushed with the hiss, &c. Cf :--

The air

Floats as they pass, fanned with unnumbered plumes. vii. 432.

'Αιθήρ δ' έλαφραῖς

Πτερθγων βιπαι̂ς ὑποσυρίζει. Æschylns. Prometheus Vinctus, 125.

768. As bees &c. For the simile of the bees, Cf. Iliad, ii. 87; Eneid, i. 430; vi. 707; Georgies, iv. 21.

769. Taurus. The sun is in Taurus from the 19th April to the 20th May.

774. Expatiate. Move about, roam; properly ex-spatiate. To be taken with 'on the plank; 'but Keightley considers that it has 'affairs' as objects, with 'on' understood.

781. The Indian mount. The Imaus or Himalayas; see note on iii, 431.

783. Belated. Out late at night; Shakspeare has lated:

Now spurs the lated traveller apace To gain the timely inn. Macbeth, iii. 3

Sees, or dreams he sees. From Virgil:-

Aut videt, aut vidisse putat. Heneid, vi. 454.

785. Arbitress. Witness; it was popularly believed that witches and fairies had great power over the moon. See ii. 663--666.

797. Frequent. In large numbers; the literal translation of the Lat. frequens as applied to an assembly; he uses frequence in the same way:—

Consenting in full frequence. Paradise Regained. ii. 130.

798. Consult. Deliberation; in x. 456, he calls them the 'great consulting peers.'

BOOK II.

2. The wealth of Ormus and of Ind. He refers in particular to pearls; Ormus, an island in the Persian Gulf, was formerly the mart for the traffic of the Portuguese with India; and was also the depôt for the pearl fishery in the Persian Gulf. Fryer, who travelled through Persia in 1676, has the following:—

The best pearls are found in the Persian Gulf between the islands Ormus and Bryan; and were heretofore brought into the island Ormus, while the Portugals were lords there, whence the distich:—

If all the world were but one ring Ormus should the union bring.

-Account of East India and Persia, v 10.

3. Gorgeous East. Shakspeare has the same epithet:—

Like a rude and savage man of Ind At the first opening of the gorgeous East. Love's Labour Lost, iii, 4, 4. Showers on her Kings, &c. In allusion to the Eastern custom of sprinkling gold-dust on the head of the king at his coronation. There is a similar expression in Shakspeare:—

I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail Rich pearls upon thee.

Antony and Cleopatra, ii. 5.

Barbaric. Qualifies pearl and gold; so in Virgil:—

Barbarico postes auro spoliisque superbi. Ameid, ii. 504; viii. 685.

Barbarous originally simply meant 'foreign,' being applied by the Greeks to all nations except themselves; then, 'uncivilized,' 'savage.'

5. Merit. His deserts as chief of the evil angels; merit literally means a share, Lat. mereri, Gr. μέρος, a part.

6. Success. The event; success formerly meant simply the issue or result, good or bad.

He never answered me, but, pale and quaking, went straight away; and straight my heart misgave me some evil success.—Sidney, Arcadia.

Like to this is another fond observation, presaging some sad success to this town, because ru, ru, which in English is woe, woo, is twice in the Cornish name thereof. But, let the men of Truru but practice the first syllable in the name of their town, and they may be safe and secure from any danger in the second.—Fuller. Worthies of Cornwall.

Well thou comest

Before thy fellows ambitious to win

From me some plume, that thy success may show

Destruction to the rest.-Paradise Lost, vi. 159-162.

11. Powers and Dominions. See Colossians, i. 16.

12. For. Because; to be taken in connexion with the previous lines; 'I call you Deities of Heaven, for I give not Heaven for lost.'

Hold. Hold back, retain.

15. Virtues. I have printed it with a capital as it is one of the titles applied to the heavenly Powers; see line 311; vi. 371, and 601, and the quotation from Wyclif's Sermon in the note on virtue, i. 320.

17. Trust themselves, &c. Have such confidence in themselves as not to fear.

18. Me. The position of me makes it emphatic; and it is the object of did create, and established.

19. Choice. Is the subject if did create understood.

20. In counsel. Counsel, I believe to be the correct as well as the better reading; it is that of Newton, Todd, and Keightley; Masson Edmondston, Brydges, Tegg, Routledge, &c., have council; 'in counsel or in fight' means 'in deliberation or in fighting'; 'in council, &c., means in the assembly or in battle.'

24. The happier state, &c. In heaven inferior dignities might envy the higher powers whose state rendered them happier or more fortunate.

32. Sure. Still used as an adverb in poetry; it was common in the Prose of the seventeenth century.

33. None. Put elliptically for 'there is none.'

35. This advantage. Viz., that there is no cause for envy, strife, or faction.

XXXIV NOTES.

Guile. Guile is from the A. S. wiglian, to bewitch; hence wile, and from genviglian, bequile, guile, gull, to impose upon, and guilt; in like manner wicked is from wiccian, to bewitch.

50. Recked. Cared, made no account of, reckoned; fr. A. S. reccan, to esteem, take into account.

Thereafter. Newton explains thereafter as accordingly, in accordance with the feelings of one who recked not of God.

51. Sentence. Vote; Lat. sententia.

69. Mixed. Filled with.

At domus interior gemitu miseroque tumultu Miscetur. Eneid, ii. 486.

Strange fire. There may be an allusion to Leviticus, x. 1.

Upright wing. Upward flight.

· Sleepy drench. Stupefying draught; drink, drunk, drown, and drench are all from the same root, A. S., drencan.

73. Such. Und. 'to whom the way seems difficult, &c.'

76. Descent and full. Physical not moral fall, as Masson points out; if the 'way is steep to scale' the descent would be adverse.

79. Insulting. Trampling on, Lat. saltare, to leap.

81-85. As at 70-72, Moloch states an objection that might occur to some of them, in order to reply to it.

89. Exercise. Torment, harass; the Lat. exercere, primarily means to enclose for the purpose of training (hence exercitus), to confine, discipline, annoy.

90. The vassals of his anger. Cf. i. 148--152, and ii. 252.

91. Inexorably. Inexorably is the reading of the first edition; in the second, and in some modern editions it is inexorable, agreeing with 'scourge.'

The torturing hour. This expression occurs in Shakspeare: -

Is there no play, To ease the anguish of a torturing hour? Midsummer Night's Dream, v. 1.

And Gray borrows from Milton:

Daughter of Jove, relentless Power! Thou Tamer of the human breast, Whose iron scourge and torturing hour The bad affright, afflict the rest. Ode to Adversity.

94. What doubt we? What is used like the Lat. quid? for what? why?

97. Essential. Essence, being; adj. for noun. Happier far. Understand, (which would be) happier far.

100. We are at worst, &c. We are now in the worst position in which we can be without being utterly destroyed.

101. On this side nothing. On this side of nothing, not reduced to annihilation.

104. Fatal. 'Upheld by fate.' i. 133.

109. Act. Action, demeanour.

Humane. Courteous, polished; Milton uses this adjective twice elsewhere in his Poems in this sense. Human and humane are now desynonymised, but to the middle of the eighteenth century, the word in both senses (of 'belonging to mankind,' and 'mild,') was written with an e at the end.

112. His tongue dropped manna. Manna tasted 'like wafers made with honey' (Exodus, xvi. 31); the expression means he was very smooth-tongued.

> Each, for some base interest of his own, With flattery's manua'd lips assails the throne. Julius Mickle. Lusiad, ix.

Shakspeare has the expression, but not in the sense it has here:—

Fair ladies you drop mauna in the way Of starved people. Merchant of Venice, v. 1.

Could make the worse appear the better reason. Word for word, as Bentley observes, from the known profession of the ancient Sophists, του λόγου ήττω κρείττω ποιείν. The expression occurs in Plato's Apology of Socrates.

114. Dash. Confound, thwart; obsolete in this sense.

God beholdeth violent men setting out in their unjust attempts, he letteth them proceed on in a full career, until they reach the edge of their design, then instantly he checketh, putteth in a spoak, he stoppeth, he tumbleth them down, or turneth them backward. Thus was Amon's plot dashed, when he had procured a royal decree. Barrow. Sermon, Nov. 5, 1673.

124. Fact of arms. 'Feats of arms,' i. 537; Fr. fait d'armes. Formerly fact was used in the sense of act or deed: ~

The right hand of William Flower, before he went to the stake, was cut off by order of the judges for his barbarous fact. Fuller. Worthies of Cambridgeshire.

127. Scope. 'The end or mark at which one aimeth.' Bayley's Dict. 1747.

138. Would on his throne sit unpolluted. In reply to Moloch's threat that the Almighty would see 'his throne itself mixed with Tartarean sulphur.'

139. Mould. Substance, nature; mould properly means soft earth; it is used again in this sense, line 355.

141. Her mischief. What polluted her.146. Who would lose, &c.? Compare the following lines from Shakspeare and Gray: --

> Ay, but to die, and go we know not where; To lie in cold obstruction and to rot: This sensible warm motion to become Measure for Measurg, iii. 1. A kneaded clod.

For who to dumb forgetfulness a prey, This pleasing, anxious, being o'er resigned -

Left the warm precincts of the cheerful day, Nor cast one longing, lingering, look behind? Elegy.

Womb. A. S. wamb. Used here for any large receptacle; 150. as before; 673; and in Comus:-

> Mysterious dame, That ne'er art called but when the dragon womb Of Stygian darkness spits her thickest gloom. 130.

xxxvi NOTES.

152. Let this be good. Grant that our being utterly destroyed might possibly be the best thing that could happen to us.

156. Belike. Likely, forsooth; used ironically. It is still an Irish provincialism in this sense; I think Professor Masson hardly gives the force of it by 'as it were.'

In the sense of impotentia, want of self-restraint, Impotence.

and so 'through impotence' is equivalent to through violence.

159. Wherefore cease we, &c. Here he answers that part of Moloch's speech where he maintained they were 'at worst.'

170. The breath that kindled, &c. Isaiah, xxx. 33.

Intermitted. That has ceased for a while. 173.

174. Red right hand. The expression is from Horace:--

Jam satis terris nivis atque diræ Grandinis misit Pater, et, rubente Dextra, sacras jaculatus arces Terruit urbem. Odes, i. 2.

Her stores. Hell's stores. 175.

176. Cataracts. Torrents; Gr. хатарактуя, a waterfall; only once elsewhere in Milton's Poems, xi. 824.

180. Hurled. Und. 'away.'

. 184. Converse. Dwell with, Lat. conversor, to keep company with. Conversation formerly meant manner of life, habits:—

Having your conversation [άναστροφήν] honest among the Gentiles. 1 Peter, ii. 12.

185. Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved. This practice of introducing three or more adjectives each beginning with a negative was formerly common in poetry: - and in Paradise Lost, iii. 231; 373; v. 899. Paradise Regained, iii. 243, 429. Samson Agonistes, 417, 1422.

> Uncourted, unrespected, unobeyed. Daniel, Civil War, ii. 52. Unkind, unmanly, and unprincely Ammon. Peele, David & Bathseba. Unenvied, unmolested, unconfined. Deserted Village, 248.

186. Of hopeless end. Which have no hope of end. 188. What can force. What is force able to do?

203. Fall. Fall out, befall, happen.

213.What is punished. The punishment already inflicted.

220. Light. Either an adj., in the sense of mild, endurable; or a noun,—the darkness will become light.

Besides what hope. In addition to the hope which, &c.

For happy, &c. Our present lot, if we compare it with a state of happiness, is but a wretched one; looking at it as unfortunate and ill it is not as bad as it might be, -not worst.

227. Ignoble ease. Virgil's phrase:—

Illo Virgilium me tempore dulcis alebat Parthenope, studiis florentem ignobilis otii. Georgics, iv. 564.

Chaos judge the strife. The strife of which Chaos would be the arbiter would be between Fate and Chance; not, as some suppose, between God and the Fallen Angels.

- 241. Strict. Strict and strait are from the same root, Lat. strictus: but straight is from A. S. stræcan, to stretch.

God hath so fashioned man that he hath given him a body standing strict up, and a countenance to look upward into heaven.

Cranmer, Catechism of 1548.

244.

Breathes. Emits the smell of; see iv. 265.

Ambrosial. Ambrosia was the fabled food of the gods; and the adjective is applied in Milton to any thing very fragrant, or immortal. Der. Gk. à, not, and βρότος, mortal.

249. Let us not then pursue, &c. Let us not seek after this state of vassalage, which we could not procure by force, and which, even if conceded to us, would be distasteful although in Heaven itself. By force impossible. That cannot be gained by force; adjectival phrase to state.

Thick clouds, &c. Psalms, xviii. 11; xcvii. 2. 264.

Our elements. Of the same substance as we are composed. The sensible. The sensibility, sense. 275.

278.

With regard of. 'With regard to' is the more correct form in 281.modern English.

What we are, and where. The Second and subsequent Editions had were, until Tickell (1720) restored where.

Such marmur. The murmurs with which the gods applauded Juno's speech (Enril, x. 96,) are compared to the rising wind, but hers was a stirring speech, Mammon's fulled the assembly.

O'erwatched. Too long watching and awake, and therefore tired. Michael. The Archangel mentioned in the Revelation (xii. 7-9,) as fighting against Satan and his angels and casting them out of Heaven.

299. Than whom. Than is a prep., and this use of the objective of the relative is established by use.

302. A pillar of state. Shakspeare has the same expression:—

Brave peers of England, pillars of the state. 2 Henry VI. i. 1. Give them leave to fly, that will not stay, And call them pillars that will stand to us.

Forehead, brow; Lat, frons. Front.

304. Public care. Care on behalf of the public weal.

Majestic, though in ruin. Qualifying face, or 'him' out of his. 305.

- Atlanteun shoulders. In allusion to the story of Atlas, one 306. of the Titans, who is said to have been condemned by Jupiter to bear heaven on his shoulders; another account is that he was a great astronomer, and so is metaphorically said to have borne heaven on his shoulders.
 - Summer's noontide air. The stillness of mid-day in summer. 309.

First and last. Everlastingly, for ever. 324.

- Iron sceptre. Psalm, ii. 9; Revelation, ii. 27. What sit we? Why do we sit? Cf. line 94. 327.
- 329.

Decided our fate. 330. Determined us.

> Eve, now expect great tidings, which perhaps Of us will soon determine, ix. 227

331. Terms of peace none. No terms of peace; none as an adjective comes after the substantive; cf. 'other creatures none', iv. 703,

704.

333. But custody. Except custody; this use of but contrasts more strongly the punishment with the peace which was not to be given; and so again, lines 335, 336, 'what peace...but hostility?' Richardson quotes a similar use of nisi:—

Ei liberorum, nisi divitiæ, nihil erat. Plautus. Menæchmi. Prol. 97.

336. To our power. As far as we can.

337. Reluctuire. Opposition; lit struggling against; reluctunt is used in its etymological sense again in vi. 58, 'reluctunt flames.'

341. Occasion. Opportunity; see i. 178, note.

Want. Be wanting; i. 715, note.

346. Fame. Rumour, report.

352. An outh, &c. In allusion, says Newton to Jupiter's oath in Virgil, Æncid, ix. 104; and Virgil imitated Homer, Iliad, i. 528. All three poets mention the shaking of Heaven, only Milton attributed the effect to the outh, which the others ascribe to the nod of Jupiter.

362. To their defence. To be defended by them.

367. Puny. It may mean either weak, less in power (line 350) than we; or, as Newton suggests, born since, created long after us. Formerly spelt pnisny, from the Fr. pnisne, born after; hence the secondary meaning, weak, small. Drive. Drive out.

375. Original. A noun.
376. Advise. Deliberate, consider; Fr. aviser.

379. First devised by Satur. See i. 650.

382. Malice. Generally an abstract noun and without the article; it is now the name of a specific vice, but formerly meant mischief, evil;—

It suffiseth to the day his own malise. Wicklif. Matthew, vi. 34.

387. States. Chiefs; as in the phrase 'States of the Realm,' 'les etats.'

396. Thance. Either a verb, or an adverb; the same construction occurs in line 492.

to touch; the same expression occurs in xii. 188, and the connection shows its origin. The Latin Vulgate has 'tam dense ut palpari queant,' which in the English version is translated 'darkness which may be felt.' Exodus, x. 21.

Obscure and abrupt (409) are adjectives used as nouns.

409. Arrive the happy isle. Milton uses arrive once or twice in his prose works without a preposition, and Shakspeare:—

Ere we could arrive the point proposed, Casar cried, Help me Cassius or I sink. Julius Casar, i. 2.

Those powers that the queen Hath raised in Gallia have arrived our coast. 3 Henry Sixth, v. 3.

Uncouth. Unknown, strange.

Couth is the past part. of the verb conne, to know, thus uncouth originally meant simply unknown; it soon acquired the secondary meaning of strange, unusual; and lastly rough, boorish, awkward.

> Welaway the while I was so fond, To leave the good that I had in hand, In hope of better that was uncouth; So lost the dog the flesh in his mouth. Spenser. The Shepherd's Calendar, September, 58-61.

Toiled out my uncouth passage, forced to ride The untractable abyss.

Paradise Lost, x. 475.

It is deforme spectaculum, an uncouth sight, to behold such handy craftsmen blended with eminencies in ingenious professions; such a motley colour is no good wearing. Fuller. Worthies. Memorable Persons.

The primary meaning of can is to know:

I lerne song, I can but small grammere.

Chancer. The Prioresses Tale, 13,466.

Now certes I wol don my diligence To conne it all, or Christenmasse be went.

Ib. 13,469.

His fellow taught him homeward privily Fro day to day, till he coude it by rote.

Ib. 13,475.

All be it so, that of your pride and high presumption and folie, and of your negligence and unconning, ye have misborne you. Ib. Tale of Melibeus.

Can, con, ken, cunning, are all from the same root. Could was originally coule, the l not belonging to the root, but having crept in from analogy with 'would' and 'should.'

The happy isle. Newton says, 'the earth, hanging in the sea of air,' and quotes Cicero's, 'Quasi magnam quandam insulam quam nos orbem terre vocamus.' De Natura Deorum, ii. 66.

Professor Masson, however, considers this, though generally adopted, a wrong interpretation. "The Angels," he says, "know nothing as yet of the earth or the nature of its environment; they know only vaguely of some kind of starry world then about to be created, and probably at that moment newly created in the central parts of infinite space, where Chaos adjoins Heaven. It is this world, which they cannot figure exactly, but which they can fancy as an azure sphere or round, insulated between Heaven and Chaos, that is the 'happy isle.' To any voyager arriving in it after toiling upward through Chaos, it would indeed be an island or insulated world.'

- 412. Senteries. Sentries, the usual form, is a corruption of sentinel, Fr. sentinelle, Lat. sentire. Wedgwood derives it from Fr. sente, a path, sentelle, a little path. Stations, Posts, guards.

417. Espectation held his look suspense. Looking out for a reply

he kept his look suspended over the assembly.

429. Unmoved. "Unmoved with any of those dangers which deterred others," according to Newton. "Rather, I think," says Professor Masson, "unsolicited, of his own accord." This appears to me a very far-fetched and unnatural interpretation; I take it to be immotus, 'without rising from his seat;' Satan 'sat exalted on his хl NOTES.

throne' when opening the debate, but all the other speakers 'stood up' or rose; Satan now addresses them 'unmoved', and when he had finished 'the monarch rose.'

431. Demur. Hesitation, delay, Lat. demoror.

432. Long is the way, &c. He had Virgil in mind, Ameid, vi. 128. And so too the 'fire ninefold' reminds us of Styx flowing nine times round hell, and the 'huge gate of solid adamant, which even the gods could not break open.' Ib. 439,552. For ninefold, see also line 645, infra.

434. This huge convex of fire. This great flery vault, called 'the fiery concave,' line 635.

438.

If any pass. If any person pass them. Unessential. Without substance or form. 439.

- 441. Abortive. 'Rendering abortive, like forgetful in line 74,' says Browne (Clarendon Press) after Major; but is it not rather abortivus. unfinished?
 - 442. Whatever. Any at all, whatever it may be.

443. Remains. Awaits; see vi. 38. 445. Become. Fit, suit.

The prefix be is generally used to give emphasis, or sometimes an idea of contempt to the principal verb. Many such verbs are modern imitations of verbs commencing with the syllable be, which is the present form of the old A. S. inflexion ge. This prefix ge was one of the distinguishing peculiarities of the Saxon period, before the changes brought about by the Norman Conquest; it afterwards appeared in the form of y, commonly enough in Chaucer, but rarely after Spenser, except in archaic poetry and in a few words retained for the oddity of the sound or requirements of the metre, as yelad, welent &c.

> Come, thou goddess fair and free, In Heaven yelept Euphrosyne,

And by men, heart-easing mirth.-L'Allegro, 9-11.

The form ge, however, exists under the disguise of be; the verb become, to suit, to fit, is the Original English geoweman, compounded of ge, and queme, to please, from which the word whim comes; again. the word beholden, (under obligations,) is no way connected with behold, (to see.) but is the modernised form of gehealden, past part of healden, to hold. Queme occurs in Spenser:-

> Such merimake holy saints doth queme, But we here sitten as drownde in dreme.

The Shepherd's Calendar, May, 15, 16.

448. Moment. Importance; Lat momentum, quod movet.

452. Refusing. If I should refuse.

453. Alike. Equally; hazard and honour are alike due to him who reigns. It would scarcely be worth while noting the meaning, were it not that Keightley wrongly explains alike, 'equally with others.'

457. Intend. Give attention to, consider; formerly used for 'attend to' :--

Romulus after his death (as they report or feign) sent a present to the Romans, that above all they should intend arms. Bacon.-Of the True Greatness of Kingdoms.

Whether with solace tripping on the trees, He sees the citizens of forest sport.

Or, midst the withered oak, beholds the bees.

Intend their labour with a kind consort. Lodge. A Solitary Life.

461. Deceive. Beguile.

467. Prevented. Anticipated; Lat præ, before, and venire, to come hence the now obsolete sense of anticipate, come before, help:—

Let thy grace, O Lord, always prevent and follow us.

Common Prayer.

468. From. By.

71. In opinion. In the eyes of the rest, in public opinion.

472. Cheap. The primary meaning of cheap is a market (A. S. cyppan, to bargain); it still survives in that sense in Eastcheap. Cheapside, Chepstow, chapman. When goods were plenty and sold at a low rate, the market was said to be good cheap, better cheap, or best cheap, as the case might be; now the epithet is dropped, and cheap compared as an adjective:

The best is always best cheap—Burton. Anatomy of Melancholy, i. 2.

Soon now grown greater, Chippenham, in Saxon Cyppanham, of note at this day for the market there kept, whereof it took the name, for cyppan, in the Saxon tongue, is as much as to say to buy, and cyppman, a buyer, like as with us cheapen, and chapman, and among the Germans Coppman.

Camden, Britannia. Ed. 1637, p. 243.

473. Hazard huge. Huge is rarely used by writers of the present day, and is seldom applied to an abstract noun; but it was very common in the seventeenth century, and is quite a favourite of Milton's.

483. Lest bad men, &c. According to Bp. Pearce the reader is "to supply some such expression as this, This remark (of the Devils not losing all their virtue) I make, lest bad men should boast, &c."

485. Close. Kept close, secret.

490. The element, 'The sky; the elements, according to the old theory, were fire, air, water, and earth; but when 'the element' was spoken of, it refers, as here, to the sky, the air —

The element itself till seven years heat, f hall not behold her face at ample view. Twelfth Night i, 1.

491. Scowls. Drives scowlingly.

492. If chance. Either, 'If the radiant sun chance to extend or, 'If by chance the radiant sun extend'; see line 396, note.

With farewell sweet. Disraeli, Curiosities of Literature, says this beautiful farewell is borrowed from an obscure poet, quoted by Poole in his English Purnassus, ed. 1657.

To Thetis' watery bowers the sun doth hie, Bidding farewell unto the gloomy sky.

Another parallel is the following in Sylvester's DuBartas:-

For once a day each country under Heaven
Thou biddest good morrow, and thou biddest good even.

First Week, Tenth Day.

495. Hill and valley rings. The use of the verb in the singular, with each of the subjects as nominative, is more emphatic; so in i. 139, 'the mind and spirit remains invincible.'

xlii Notes.

497. Men only disagree, &c. Compare the following passage, and Burton's Latin quotation:—

The greatest enemy to man is man, who, by the devil's instigation, is still ready to do mischief—his own executioner, a devil to himself and others. We are all brethren in Christ, or at least should be members of one body, servants of one Lord; and yet no fiend can so torment, insult over, tyrannize, yex, as one man doth another.

Homo homini lupus, homo homini dœmon.—Anatomy of Melancholy, i, 1.

501. Levy wars. Johnson, in his Dictionary, takes exception to this expression, saying, "this sense, though Milton's, seems improper." he is followed in this view by Major and Hunter, none of them knowing that it was the technical phrase of the day, and is still a legal term. In the 'Act of the Commons of England for erecting of a High Court of Justice for the taying and judging of Charles Stuart, King of England', he is charged with having "levied and maintained a cruel war in the land against the Parliament and Kingdom"; and the same phrase is the one adopted in his indictment and sentence. See Clarendon's History. Vol. viii, pp. 92 and 115, Ed. 1717. It is the technical expression in the Statute of Treason of Edward III; see Hallam, Constitutional History, Chap. xv.

Levy war' occurs again in xi. 219; and Barrow has:--

These were the misdemeanours of those in the late times, who, instead of praying for their sovereign, did asperse him with foul imputations, did accuse his proceedings, did raise tumults, and levy war against him, pretending by rude force to reduce him unto his duty. Sermon 29th May, 1676.

504. Enow. The plural of enough; now obsolete.

508. Paramount. Chief, supreme lord; always used as an adj. now.

512. A globe. The Lat. globus was applied to a compact body of troops. Cf:—

Straight a fiery globe

Of angels on full sail of wing flow nigh. Paradise Regained, iv. 581.

513. Horrent. Horrens means bristling, standing erect. and then horrid; as applied to arms and spears it includes both meanings, horrentia Martis arma, Eucid i., horrentibus hastis, Encid x. 178. Horrid from the same root has precisely the same meaning; see 568.

514. Bid cry. Bid is generally followed by the infinitive without the preposition to; but instead of this archaic construction we should now use the infinitive of the passive voice; the following is another instance of the former syntax:—

All the congregation bade stone them with stones. Numbers, xiv. 10.

517. Alchymy. Trumpet, the instrument called by the material of which it is made. Alchymy is a mixed metal, chiefly composed of brass; this meaning is now obsolete, alchymy being now applied to the pretended art of changing other metals into gold, from Gk. $\chi_{\epsilon\nu\ell\nu}$, to pour.

518. By herald's voice explained. That is, the purport of the signal was explained by a herald.

More at ease their minds. Either, nominative absolute, their minds being more at ease; or minds, Greek accusative, more at ease as to their minds.

521. Thence. Either, 'from that time,' from that place,' or 'from that cause.'

523. Several. Separate; der. Old French, sevrer, Lat. separare.

525. Leads'him perplexed, where he may likliest find &c. Observe the punctuation; some editions have no comma after perplexed, construing it with where he may find; but this clause should be taken with pursues his way.

Sublime. Aloft; agreeing with part understood. Cf iii. 72; vi. 771.

526. Entertain. Make to pass agreeably; entertain (Lat. inter, and tenere, to hold,) to take in or receive (a) as a guest, (b) as a servant, (c) as a thought into one's mind. The second of these meanings, though obsolete in modern English, is a common Anglo-Indianism; but it was once so used in classic English;—

You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I don't like the fashion of your garments. King Lear. iii. 6.

He [William Noy] was for many years the stoutest champion for the subject's liberty, until king Charles entertained him to be his attorney.

Fuller. Worthies. Cornwall.

528. Part on the plain, &c. These warlike diversions (says Newton) of the fallen Angels during the absence of Satan seem to be copied from the military exercises of the Myrmidons during the absence of their chief from the war. Homer, Iliad, ii. 774. The author had an eye, too, to the diversions and entertainments of the departed heroes in Virgil's Elysium, Æneid, vi. 642.

1 530. Olympian games. The Olympian or Olympic games were celebrated at Olympia, on the banks of the Alpheus in the territory of Elis in Greece, in honour of the Olympian Jove. The origin of the festival is lost in the mythical ages. It was revived 776 B. C.; and the Greeks afterwards dated from this year as the First Olympiad, when they began to use the contest to mark a chronological The games were kept up until abolished by the Emperor Theodosius, 394 A. D. There was an interval of four years, called an Olympiad, between each celebration. At first the games only lasted for one day, and consisted merely of foot-races, but they afterwards occupied five days, and included horse-races, and chariot-races, and various trials of strength at boxing, wrestling, jumping, and the The only prize was a crown of wild olive; but to secure this was the ambition of the noblest and wealthiest of the Greeks; the victor's name being proclaimed among the assembled multitudes, and his statue erected in the sacred grove at Olympia. The Pythian games were of similar character, they were instituted in 585 B. C., in honour of Apollo, and celebrated every third Olympic year, near Delphi.

531. Shun the goal with rapid wheels. These words are a translation of an allusion in Horace to the Olympic contest:—

Sunt quos curriculo pulverem Olympicum Collegisse juvat, metaque fervidis Evitata rotis, palmaque nobilis Terrarum dominos evehit ad deos. Odes I. i. xliv Notes.

533. War appears, &c. Such were the portents with which Calphurna warned Casar:—

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds, In ranks and squadrons in right form of war. Julius Casar, ii. 2.

536. Prick forth. Ride forward; prick literally means to spur or urge on, and is commonly used for ride in old poets:—

Of pricking and of hunting for the hare
Was all his lust, for no cost would be spare.

Canterbury Tales, Prologue, 189

Couch their spears. Fix them in the rest, a part of the armour in which the spear was rested preparatory to an attack

538. Heaven. He is still talking of the heaven visible to us, the 'troubled sky'; and, not content with making armies of the clouds, sees individual horsemen couching their spears

The welkin. The sky, now obsolete. A S. wealcan, to roll, used tormerly as a verb or participle.—

When ruddy Phoebus gan to welke in west. Faerie Queene, i. 1.

Come, sir page, Look on me with your welkin eye. Winter's Tale, i. 2

As a substantive it denoted the sky, the visible heavens :-

The grass now gins to be refreshed,
The swallow peeps out of her nest,
And cloudy welkin cleareth. Shepherd's Calendar, March

538. Burns. Glows, is in a commotion

539 Typhean. Gigantic, like that of Typhon, see 1 199, note

Fell. Fierce, cruel

542. Alcider. Hercules, called Alcides from his grandfather Alceus. Hercules was the most celebrated of all the heroes of antiquity. He is said to have performed twelve wonderful labours, such as the Fight with the Nemean Lion, Capture of the Arcadian Stag, Cleansing of the Stables of Augeas, &c. On one occasion he marched against Œchalia, killed Eurytus the king, carried off his daughter lole prisoner, and returned 'crowned with conquest.' tending to sacrifice to Jupiter, on his landing at Eubœa, he sent his friend Lichas home for a white garment he was to wear during the celebration of the rites. His wife Deianira, jealous lest Iole might win the affections of her husband, steeped the robe in poison; when Hercules 'felt the envenomed robe' he seized Lichas and threw him from the top of mount Œta, in Thessaly, into the sea; he tried to tear off the garment, but it stuck to his flesh, and with it he tore away whole pieces from his body, and, maddened with pain, tore up pine trees by the roots. Deianira on hearing what had happened hanged herself. Hercules having ascended mount Œta, placed himself on a pile of wood, which he ordered to be set on fire; while the pile was burning a cloud came down and carried him up to Olympus, where he was honoured with immortality, and afterwards worshipped throughout Greece.

bol. The virius should enthroll. Bentley quotes from Euripides the famous distich which Brutus used when he killed himself:—

*Ω τλημον ἀρετὴ, λύγος ἄρ' ἦσθ', ἐγὼ δὲ σε *Ως ἔργον ἤσκουν· σὺ δ ἄρ ἐδούλευσας βιά·

552. Partial. Favouring themselves.

554. Took with ravishment. Cf. Virgil, Georgics, iv. 481; and Comus:-

Can any mortal mixture of earth's mould Breathe such divine enchanting ravishment? 211,215. Who, as they sung, would take the prisoned soul, And lap it in Elysium. 256-257.

556. Eloquence the soul. Todd quotes :-

The soul-charm image of sweet eloquence.

Sylvester's DuBartas. Ed. 1621, p. 263.

568. Obdured. Past part, of the obsolete verb obdure. Keightley accents obdùred. Masson obdurèd; the former is preferable.

577. Styr. Gk. στυγέω, to hate.

578. Acheron. Gk. &xos, sorrow, hence the epithet sad.

579. Cocytus. Gk. κωκύω, to lament; the streams of the Cocytus washed the shores of Hell, and prevented the imprisoned spirits returning to the Earth, hence the loud lamentation heard on the rueful stream.

580. Phlegethon. Gk. φλεγέθω, to burn.

581. Torrent. Torrid, burning; Lat. torrere, to burn. A stream is called a torrent from its flowing rapidly, like the movement of flames; perhaps both the ideas of flowing rapidly and scorching are intended in the expression torrent fire.

589. Dire hail. The 'diræ grandinis' of Horace, Odes, i. 2. 1.

590. Ruin scems, &c. Appears to be the ruin of some ancient building.

591. All else. In some modern reprints—Bohn, Major,—it is 'or else'; Keightley and Masson trace the misprint to Todd's Fourth edition (it is in his Fifth too), but I find it in Newton's Ninth edition (1790.)

592. Serbonian bog. The lake or marsh of Serbonis, between Mount Casius, now Cape Kareroon, and Damietta in Egypt. Hills of loose sand surrounded the lake, and the sand being frequently carried into the water by the wind so thickened the lake as to make it a marsh or log.

593. Damiata. Now Damietta, a town near the Mediterranean, on one of the mouths of the Nile.

595. Frore. Frosty, with frost; an adv. Newton quotes as a parallel passage:—

When the cold north wind bloweth, it devoureth the mountains, and burneth the wilderness, and consumeth the grass as fire. Ecclus. xliii. 20, 21.

Cold. Coldness; a noun.

596. Harpy-footed. Having the feet or claws of harpies; the harpies are described by Virgil as obscene birds, inhabiting the Stroxlvi NOTES.

phades in the Ionian Sea, having the heads of maidens, with long claws, and with faces ever pale with hunger. Aneid, in. 217.

597. Revolutions. Seasons, fixed periods. Annul, vi. 745-748.
598. Feel by turns, &c. In the Middle Ages it was common to describe the pains of Hell as consisting of extreme cold as well as heat.

And the delighted spirit

To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside

In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice. Measure for Measure, iii. 1

Sturve. Destroy. Cause to perish with cold. Starve now 600. means to suffer from extreme cold or hunger, but formerly meant to kill or perish by any death; der. A. S. steorfan, to die, to kill.

With torment, and with shameful death each one,

This provost doth these Jews for to sterve,

That of this morder wiste.—Chancer, The Prioresses Tale, 13,558

Peter Levins in his Rhyming Dictionary (1570) translates starve by unterire, to perish.

609. So near the brink. The brink being so near; nom. abs.

611. Medusa. The Gorgons were three frightful maidens, named Stheno, Euryale, and Medusa. Instead of hair their heads were covered with hissing serpents, they had wings, brazen claws, and enormous teeth. Medusa's head became so frightful that every one who looked at it was changed into stone; she was slain by Perseus, who cut off her head and carried it to Minerva, and the goddess placed it in the centre of her shield.

613. Wight. Being; only used now in poetry or burlesque writing. It literally means a sensitive creature. A. S. wiht, from witan, to perceive. Whit is a thing, aught (formerly written ought), a whit.

614. Tantalus. A king of Lydia, who, having divulged the secrets entrusted to him by Jupiter, was punished by being afflicted with a raging thirst, and at the same time placed in a lake, the waters of which receded from him as soon as he attempted to taste them; bunches of fruit were hung over his head, which in like manner receded from his grasp. The punishment of Tantalus was proverbial, and from his name comes the verb 'tantalize.'

615. Fortorn. Utterly lost. For in composition, fordo, forgo, forlore, &c., means forth, entirely; lorn was formerly used without the prefix for.

The expression 'forlorn hope' is applied to a body of troops appointed to lead the attack, enter a breach, or perform any other hazardous undertaking, in which few if any are likely to escape; sometimes they were called 'the forlorn' alone :-

He caused the foot to be drawn up in the best order they could; placed a forlorn of musketeers in the little enclosures, winging them with the few horse and dragoons he had —Fuller. Worthies. Cornwall.

They [the Enniskillen horse] offered with spirit to make always the forlorn of the army. Quoted in Scott's note on Prologue to Don Sebastian.— Dryden's Works, vii. 303.

617. First. For the first time.

620. Alp. Here used for any high mountain; as also in Samson Ayonistes, 628.

623. Hydras. The hydra was a huge monster which ravaged Lerna in the Peloponnesus. One of the labours imposed on Hercules was to destroy this serpent; it had nine heads, and the middle one was immortal, in place of every head struck off by Hercules two new ones arose, but with the assistance of Iolaus he burned away the heads and buried the ninth under a rock.

Chimera. A fire-breathing monster, having the head of a lion, the body of a goat, and a dragon's tail; it caused much havec in Lycia, but was at length killed by Bellerophon.

625. Prodigious. Ominous, portentous.

630. With thoughts inflamed. The order is, Inflamed with thoughts of highest design.

. 633. Scours. Passes swiftly over; A. S. scyran, to shear, to shave;

scur and skir are other forms of scour:—

Send out more horses, skir the country round, Hang those that talk of fear. Macbeth, v. 3.

Mount ye, spur ye, skirr the plain,

That the fugitive may flee in vain. Siege of Corinth, xxi.

635. Towering. Nom. agreeing with he.

637. Hangs in the clouds. Appears to touch the clouds where they and the horizon seem to meet.

Equinoctial winds. The trade winds which blow from east to west at the time of the equinoxes, from 21st March to 23rd September.

Close sailing. The vessels of the fleet sailing closely together, and thus forming only one object to the eye.

639. Ternate and Tidore. Two of the Moluccas or Spice Islands. 640. They referring to the ships of the fleet, which as a noun of multitude has a singular verb, hangs, 637.

The trading flood. The part of the Ocean where the trade winds blow.

641. The wide Æthiopian. The Indian Ocean; so called from Æthiopia, the ancient name of the countries south of Egypt on the East coast of Africa.

The Cape. The Cape of Good Hope.

642. The pole. The south pole, as the fleet sails in a southerly direction from Bengal to the Cape.

645. Thrice three-fold the gates. Gates is the nom. to appear.

647. Impaled. Walled in, enclosed.

648. Before the gates, &c. The allegory that follows is based on the words of S. James;—"When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." James, i. 15.

Milton has also incorporated much in it from Spenser's personification of Error (Faery Queene, i. 1. 14, 15); and the description of Hamartia in Fletcher's Purple Island, xii. 97.

Yet. Nevertheless.

649. Either. Each.

A formidable Shape. Here he follows Virgil:-

Cernis, custodia qualis

Vestibulo sedeat ? facies que limina servet ? Quinquaginta atris immanis hiatibus Hydra Sœvior intus habeat sedem. Eneid, vi. 574. xlviii NOTES.

654. A cry. A pack or troop, so called from their crying or barking together.

A cri/ more tuneable

Was never holloaed to nor cheered with horn,

Midsummer Night's Dream, v. 1.

Your common cry of curs whose breath I hate. Coriolanus, iii. 1. The jackal's troop in gathered cry, Bayed from afar complainingly. Siege of Corinth, xxxiii.

Cerberean mouths. Cerberus was the dog that guarded the entrance to the infernal regions, at the spot where the shades of the departed were landed by the ferryman Charon; he is represented as having three heads, a serpent's tail, and serpents round his neck.

. 656. List. Pleased, chose; A. S. listan; lust, which formerly meant simply desire, is from the same root.

658. Kennel there. The metaphor may have been taken from Shakspeare.

> From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death. Richard III, iv. 4.

Kennel is from Fr. chenil, a dog-house, Lat. canis, a dog; it also means 'a pack or cry of hounds; and a fox is said to kennel when he lies close to his hole.' Bailey's Dictionary.

660. Scylla. Scylla and Charybdis were two rocks between Italy and Sicily; a monster named Scylla dwelt in a cave in the one nearest Italy; the sorccress Circe is said to have poisoned the sea where Scylla used to bathe, which caused her lower limbs to be turned into dogs; after her metamorphosis she threw herself into the sea and was changed into the rock which afterwards bore her name.

The sea that parts, &c. The Straits of Messina. Calabria, the peninsula in the south-east of Italy. Trinacria, the ancient name of Sicily, from its triangular shape.

665. Lapland witches. Lapland was famous for witches in former times.

• The labouring moon. The moon in eclipse; the Latin for an eclipse of the moon is labores lunce. It was an ancient superstition that eclipses of the moon were caused by the charms and incantations of witches; see i. 785, and note.

666. The other shape, &c. Compare Spenser's description of Death:

After all came Life; and lastly Death; Death with most grim and grisly visage seen. Yet is he nought but parting of the breath, Ne aught to see, but like a shade to ween, Unbodied, unsouled, unheard, unseen. Faerie Queene, vii. 7, 46.

That shadow seemed. Death is called the 'meagre shadow,' and the 'grim Feature,' x. 264, 279.

673. A kingly crown. Death is the 'King of terrors,' Job, xviii. 14. Death, the sovereign's sovereign. Don Juan, x, 23.

677. Admired. Wondered; see i. 690.

678. God and his Son except, &c. Milton has a similar construction in one of his prose works:

No place in Heaven or Earth, except Hell, where charity may not enter. -Doctrine of Divorce. Preface.

685. That be assured. Be certain of that. 688. Goblin. Phantom, demon; Ger. kobold, Gr. κόβαλος.

692. Drew after him, &c. The words are taken from Revelation, xii, 4; the line occurs again, v. 710.

, 693. Conjured. Banded in conspiracy; Lat. conjurare, to swear together.

698. To enrage thee more. Sc., I add this in order that I may enrage thee more.

700. False. He falsely included himself among the Spirits of Heaven. 701. A whip of scorpions. A scourge, so called from the stinging effect of the lash; used metaphorically for any severe punishment.

My father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions,-1 Kings, xii, 11.

> When once again I've quelled the pride Of Venice, and her hated race Have felt the arm they would debase Scourge with a whip of scorpions. Siege of Corinth, xxi.

Like a comet. The 'sword of God' is compared to a comet in 708. x. :--

> High in front advanced The brandished sword of God before them blazed, Fierce as a comet, x. 632-634.

709. Ophiuchus. A constellation in the northern hemisphere; it consists of about seventy stars, and extends over forty degrees in length. Ophiuchus means literally the Serpent-holder, it is represented by a man holding a serpent in his hand, and is also called Serpentarius and Anguitenens.

710. Horrid hair. The tail of the comet streaming like hair;

hence the derivation, Gr. κομη, hair.

711. Shakes pestilence and war. Comets and other appearances in the heavens were regarded as prophetic of war, plagues, and other disasters; so of the beard of Hudibras;-

> This hairy meteor did denounce The fall of sceptres and of crowns. Hudibras, i. 247. He sung how grisly comets hang in air,

Why sword and plagues attend their fatal hair,

God's beacons for the world, drawn up so far, To publish ills, and raise all earth to war. Cowley, Davideis, iii.

Heaven's artillery. - The expression occurs in Shakspeare and Ben Jonson:—

> Have I not heard great ordnance in the field, And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies? Taming of the Shrew, i. 2 Through the air was rolled

> The lengthened shower, as when the artillery Of heaven is discharged along the sky. Panegyre, 19th March, 1603.

716. The Caspian was noted for storms and tempests; see Horace, Odes, ii, ix. 2.

717. A space. For a short time.

720. So matched. So equally matched.

722. So great a foe. Jesus Christ, who will 'one day destroy them both'; for 'the last enemy that shall be destroyed is Death,' 1 Cor. xv, 26; and He will destroy 'him that had the power of death, that is, the Devil,' Hebrews, ii, 14; Revelation, xx. 14.

723. Had been achieved. Would have been achieved.

730. And knowest for whom. Some editions have an interrogation after this clause, as well as after head, but in Milton's there is a semicolon after whom. The meaning is, What fury possesses thee to bend thy dart against thy father? and thou knowest against whom it is. There is a similar construction in v. 674.

739. Spares to tell thee, &c. Forbears for a little to let you see by my act what I intend.

743. Phantasm. Phantom, apparition; Gr. φαντάσμα, φαινόμαι, to appear.

755. On the left side opening, &c. When the left side (of his head) opened,

758. Out of thy head, &c. Sin is represented as issuing from the head of Satan, as Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, is said to have sprung forth from the head of Jupiter, uttering a war-cry and clad in complete armour.

761. Familiar grown I pleased. So Pope:—

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien, As, to be hated, needs but to be seen; Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,

We first endure, then pity, then embrace.—Essay on Man, ii. 217.

765. Such joy, &c. He still follows the myth of Minerva's birth; Vulcan having attempted to ravish her.

772. Pitch. Height, elevation; 'precipice of Heaven,' i. 173.

789. Back resounded Death. The repetition of the word Death is highly poetical and artistic. There is a similar instance in Virgil, Georgics, iv. 525-528; and Shelley:—

The tongueless caverns of the craggy hills
Cried Misery! Then the hollow Heaven replied
Misery; and the Ocean's purple waves,
Climbing the land, howled to the lashing winds,
And the pale nations heard it, Misery.—Prometheus Unbound.

795—802. These yelling monsters. These, says Keightley, are the mental torments that are the consequences of sin, and they are rendered more grievous by the idea of death.

801. Conscious terrors. Terrors of which I am conscious.

802. Rest or intermission, &c. "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." Isaiah, lvii, 20, 21.

804. Grim Death. Massinger applies the same epithet, grim, to death in the Roman Actor, iii. 1.

813. Tempered heavenly. Of Heavenly make or mould; his shield was of 'ethereal temper,' i. 285.

815. Lore. Knowledge, learning; A. S. learan, to learn.

825. Pretences. To pretend formerly meant to advance a claim whether true or false, and not as now necessarily the latter; so with pretence, which here means 'claims,' and again in vi. 421.

The law he observeth is worthily called the perfect law of liberty; the Lord he serveth pretendeth only to command free men and friends. Barrow. Sermon on 1 Tim. iv. 8.

827. Uncouth. Unknown, strange.

829. Unfounded. Bottomless; Lat. fundus, the bottom, foun-uation.

831. By concurring signs, ... created. Shown to be created by signs that coincide with the prediction.

833. Purlieus. Outskirts, borders; purlieu originally meant land an the borders of a forest, which, having been illegally added to the forest, was afterwards rendered exempt from the forest laws; or simply 'free from trees.' Fr. pur, pure or free, and lieu, place. Another derivation is pour oller, perambulatio, a walking round, the process by which the purlieus were made.

842. The buxom air. Plant, yielding; der. A. S. bocsum, easily bended, Ger. beugsam, pliable, obedient. By buxom we now mean lively, gay, spritely; but in old writers it meant yielding, obedient.

Abraham as a true servant fulfilled the Lord's commandment, and for his buxonness and truth, God sware unto Abraham that he would multiply his seed. Fox. Acts and Monuments; the Ploughman's Complaint, Bk. iv.

In v. 270, Milton applies the same epithet to the air; and Keightley quotes as a parallel 'cedentem aera.' Horace, Satires, ii, 2, 13.

855. Living might. The third edition, 1678, has 'living wight,' which Bentley considers to be the correct reading, as 'living might' would not except God himself, and 'living wight' occurs at line 613.

856. His commands above. The commands of him 'who reigns above.'

859. Office. Duty, service; lit. what one is bound to do:

Man hath invented laws to defend and preserve good men, and to punish and keep evil persons in office and good order. Langley. Polydore Virgal, in. 1.

860. Inhabitant of Heaven. Agreeing with me.

868. The Gods that live at ease. A literal translation from Homer:—

θεοί βεία ζωόντες. Iliad, vi. 138.

874. Portcullis. A hanging gate, made so as to be let down suddenly; Fr. porte, a gate, and coulisse, a groove.

883. Erebus. A place of darkness above Hades; Erebus was the son of Chaos, and married to Night.

891—916. It would be difficult, says Professor Masson, to quote a passage from any poet so rich in purposely accumulated perplexities, learned and poetical, or in which such care is taken, and so successfully, to compel the mind to a rackingly intense conception of sheer inconceivability.

891. The hoary deep. The deep is called 'hoary,' Job, xli. 32;

here used in the sense of 'ancient.'

lii notes.

898. Four champions. In allusion to the theory of the four elements, or first principles in nature.

Frigida pugnabant calidis, humentia siccis,

Mollia cum duris, sine pondere habentia pondus.

Ovid. Metamorphoses, i. 19.

900. Embryon. This is one of the words that Addison says Milton coined (Spectator, 285), but it occurs in Ben Jonson's Poetaster, Sylvester's Du Bartas (ed. 1613, p. 9), and in other poets prior to Milton.

901. Each his. This appears to be an instance of the use of his to represent the possessive case, and to stand for each's.

904. Barca or Cyrene. Cyrene and Barca were the two principal cities of Cyrenaica in Africa, the surrounding country consisted chiefly of sandy deserts. Todd quotes from Heylin:—

This country is all over covered with a light sand, which the winds remove continually up and down, turning vallies into hills, and hills into vallies. Microcosmus. Ed. 1627, p. 749.

The modern name of Barca is Merjeh, and Cyrene is now Cairoan.

905. Levied literally means raised, Lat. levo.

Poise their lighter wings. Give weight to the wings of the winds.

Poise, inf. on levied.

906. Lighter. Too light; used like the Latin comparative.

To whom these most adhere, &c. To whomsoever (of the four champions) these atoms adhere most, he rules for a while.

908. By decision. By his judgment or sentence.

911. The womb of nature, &c. Shakspeare has a similar expression:—

The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb. Romeo and Juliet, ii, 3.

Thyer quotes—

Omniparens, eadem rerum commune sepulchrum. Lucretius, v. 260.

917. Into this wild abyss. These words are repeated, after the long parenthesis, from 910.

918. Stood and looked. For standing looked, so in v. 360, 'To sit and taste,' for 'sitting to taste.'

919. No narrow frith. The gulf he had to cross was far from being a narrow one.

921. To compare great things with small. An expression from Virgil:—

Parvis componere magna. Eclogue, i, 24.

922. Bellona. Bellona was the Roman goddess of War and the wife of Mars.

927. Sail-broad vans. Dante also describes Satan as having wings which he compares to sails:—

Under each [face] shot forth Two mighty wings, enormous, as became A bird so wast. Sails never such I saw Outstretched on the wide sea. Hell, xxxiv. Vans is another form of fan. Both are used in the sense of wings':—

With quick fan

Winnows the buxom air. v. 269.

Straight a fiery globe
Of Angels on full sail of wing flew nigh,
Who on their plumy vans received him soft.

Paradise Regained, iv. 581-583.

930. Cloudy chair. Car or chariot formed of clouds. Car, cart, chair, and chariot are all from the same root, A. S., cyran, to turn. Chair was formerly used for chariot.

933. Plumb. Straight and quickly, as lead would fall. Fr. plomb,

Lat. plumbum, lead.

937. Instinct. Animated, impregnated with; the opposite of extinct; see vi. 752.

938. That fury stayed, &c. That fury having ceased, being quenched in a boggy Syrtis, which was neither water nor firm land.

939. Syrtis. There were two gulfs, each called Syrtis, on the north coast of Africa, proverbially dangerous from their sandbanks and quicksands. Here Syrtis is used for any quicksand, as 'Alp' is for any high mountain, line 620.

940. Nigh foundered. Almost sunk; Lat fundus, the bottom.

, 941. The crude consistence. The unfinished mixture, the boggy

Syrtis.

Half on foot, half flying. Partly walking and partly flying. Spenser describes the movements of the old dragon in similar words:—

The dreadful Beast drew nigh to hand,

Half flying and half-footing in his haste.—Faerie Queene, i, xi, 8.

942. Behoves him. Behoves is properly a so-called impersonal, and 'oar and sail' are in apposition with the inceptive it or there; the construction is similar in

Nor these to hold wants her fit vessels, v. 348.

Roth oar and sail. A nautical metaphor, meaning every means, all appliances.

A gryphon. The gryphons or griffins were fabulous creatures, the upper part of their body being like an eagle, and the lower like a lion.

945. The Arimaspian. The Arimaspi were a people in the north of Scythia; they are represented as being a one-eyed people and having their hair adorned with gold. Herodotus (iii. 16) speaks of frequent battles between the Arimaspians and the Gryphons for the possession of gold mines which were guarded by the latter.

948. Or steep. Bentley's emendation, o'er steep, is very natural, and an improvement on the text.

951. Hubbub. The following passage, in which the origin of the word is given, is worth preserving.

This manner of out-cry here mentioned to be usual in Gallia was the same which remaineth in use at this present in Wales; although not so frequent as in former times. For the custom is there, as often as any liν NOTES.

robbery happeneth to be committed, or any man to be slain, or what other outrage or not is done, the next at hand do go to some eminent place where they may be best heard, and there they may make an out-cry or howling, which they call a hooboub, signifying the fact to the next inhabitants, who tell it as passionately and deliver it further, and so from hand to hand it quickly spreadeth over all the country.

Edmond's Observations on Casar's Commentaries. Ed. 1655.

Of whom. Equivalent to 'and of him.' 957.

960. Dark pavilion. The simile is borrowed from Scripture:—

He made darkness his secret place, his pavilion round about him dark waters. Psalm, xviii. 11.

962. Sable-vested night. Euripides describes Night as μελάμπεπλος, black-robed.

964. Orcus and Ades. Latin and Greek names of Pluto, the god of the infernal regions. Orcus is the Greek for an oath, and under that name the deity punished perjury. Ades or Hades means the 'invisible.'

The dreaded name of Demogorgon. 'The name of Demogorgon' means Demogorgon himself.

Demogorgon was a terrible deity, the mention of his name even being sufficient to cause frightful disasters; his name was made use of in invocations. Spenser describes him as the 'Prince of darkness,' and presiding over Chaos.

> Great Gorgon, Prince of darkness and dead night; At which Cocytus quakes, and Styx is put to flight.

Faerie Queene, I, i. 37.

Down in the bottom of the deep abyss, Where Demogorgon in dull darkness pent Far from the view of gods and heaven's bliss The hideous chaos keeps. Ib. IV, ii. 47,

By Hell's blue flame! By the Stygian lake! And by Demogorgon's name At which ghosts quake! Hear and appear! Dryden. Song in Œdipus.

Secrets. Secret places, according to Newton. 972.

977. Confine with. Border on.

981. Directed. If my course is directed.

Reduce. In the literal sense of 'bring back.' 983.

989. Incomposed. Discomposed, confused. 993.

I saw and heard. See vi. 871-874.

The frighted deep. Todd remarks that this description may have been borrowed from Ezekiel's prefiguration of Assyria's fall:-

I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit. Ezekiel, xxxi. 16.

1000. So. In this way, thus; namely by keeping residence here, and doing all I can.'

1001. Our intestine broils. This is the reading of Milton's Editions and of all down to Bp. Pearce's (1732), who altered our to your, "the creation of Hell and the new world being the effect not of any broils in the realm of Chaos, but of the broils in Heaven between God and Satan, the good Angels and the bad, called intestine war and broils in vi. 259, 277." Newton, Todd, Prendeville, and Keightley follow Pearce and adopt your. Professor Masson, the only other modern authority, returns to the old reading.

At first sight your would seem the true reading; but a little inspection will show that our, even if it had not the advantage of being Milton's, is the best. To charge the encroachments on Satan is scarcely in keeping with the tone of the speech; though the creation of Hell and the new world encroached on the domain of Chaos, and was due to the broils in Heaven, yet if the sceptre of old Night were not weakened by their intestine broils, the Powers of the place might have defended it; and (lastly) they were 'all embroiled' with Tumult, Confusion, and Discord.

- 1005. Linked in a golden chain. The allusion is to Homer's idea of Jupiter's golden chain, by which he could draw up the gods, the earth and the sea, but they could not draw him down. Some interpret the golden chain to refer to the sun. Ben Jonson applies the simile to marriage:—

Such was the golden chain let down from heaven;
And not those links more even Than these.

Masques. Ed. 1616, p. 919.

- 1011. His sea should find a shore. That there should be a termination to his journey, and he should land at last.
- 1017. Argo. The Argo was a ship built for the expedition sent out from Iolcus, in Thessaly, to get possession of the golden fleece kept at Æa or Colchis. The Argo is said to have been the first long ship ever seen in Greece; the sailors were known as the "Argonauts;" the leader was Jason; and the events are supposed to have occurred about 1263 B. C.

1018. Bosporus. The Strait between the Black Sea and the Sea of Marmora, now called the Straits of Constantinople. Bosporus is so called because Io crossed it in the form of a heifer, or because cattle can-swim across. Der. Gr. βους, an ox, and πόρος, a channel; thus corresponding with the English word Oxford.

The justling rocks were two small rocky islands at the entrance of the Black Sea, called the Symplegades, i. e., striking, or (as Milton translates it) 'justling,' together, because they appeared to meet and recede according as a ship varied in its course.

1019. Ulysses, called Odysseus by the Greeks, was one of the principal heroes of the Trojan War, his travels on his return home from it are related in Homer's Odyssey. He sailed with much difficulty between Scylla and Charybdis, several of his companions being carried off by the former.

On the larboard. 'The larboard' means the left side of the ship. The passage means, Ulysses keeping to the left avoided Charybdis.

1020. The other whirlpool. Bentley objects to Scylla being described as a whirlpool; but Virgil speaks of it as drawing ships against the rocks (Æneid, iii. 425).

1023. But he once past, soon after. The construction is, But, he having accomplished his journey over it, shortly afterwards, when the fall of man took place, a great change was brought about.

1028. A bridge of wondrous length. The bridge is described in x.

299-305. 1039. Her outmost works. Nature's utmost works, or fortifications.

Holds the port is a classic phrase; Æneid, i. 399, and 1043.

Fortiter occupa portum.-Horace. Odes, i. 14.

Undetermined square or round. Its extent was such that it was impossible for Satan to determine whether it was square or round.

This pendent world. Not the earth merely but the new-1052.

created universe.

BOOK III.

1. Offspring of Heaven firstborn. Genesis, i. 3.

2. Of the Eternal, &c. 'May 1 without blame (for so doing) call thee the co-eternal beam of the Eternal God? Since, &c. And then he assigns reasons for calling Light the co-eternal of the Eternal.

 In unapproached light. 1 Timothy, vi. 16; 1 John, i. 5.
 Hearest thou rather, &c. Wouldst thou rather be addressed as the pure ethereal stream whose source is unknown? This use of hear is a Latinism; audire being to hear oneself called, to be spoken of:-

Matutine pater, seu Jane libentius audis. Horace, Satires, ii. 6, 20.

Spenser also employs the idiom:—

If old Aveugle's sons so evil hear .- Faerie Queene, i. 5, 23.

And Milton in Areopagitica:-

What more national corruption, for which England hears ill abroad, than household gluttony?

Before the Sun, &c. See vii. 243-249.

Wert. This is not, as Bp. Louth and others have supposed, a grammatical error for wast, but is the past tense indicative of the obsolete A. S. verb weorthan, to be; the second pers. sing. imperfect of which is wurde.

Thou therefore that wast nothing before thou wert, &c-

·Thou which wast not, wert made.—

Give me a reason, if thou canst, how thou wert created.

Heywood, Hierarchie of the Blessed Angels, 1635, p. 383; Quoted in the Student's English Language, p. 214.

10. As with a mantle didst invest. The metaphor of 'as with a mantle' is contained in invest; cf i. 208.

12. Won. Gained, formed.

14. Long detained, &c. He refers to the subject of the First and Second Books.

- 16. Utter and middle darkness. Utter is outer; and 'utter darkness' is Hell (i. 72); 'middle darkness,' the gulf between Heaven and Hell. This is Newton's, and I think the correct explanation of these terms, though Professor Masson takes the 'obscure sojourn' to be Chaos, and 'utter and middle darkness' "the two stages of Chaos, the nethermost, before the court and throne of Chaos were reached, and the upper." But Milton, or the poem, is not 'long detained' in Chaos, the gates of Hell being opened only at line 882 of Book ii; and in i. 72 'utter darkness' is Hell; and in v. 614 it also clearly refers to Hell.
- 17. With other notes, &c. In a different strain, and differently inspired, than Orpheus, who had also sung of Chaos and darkness, in his Hymn to Night. For an account of Orpheus, see Note on vii. 34.

21. Though hard and rare. From the Sibyl's answer to Æncas:—

Revocare gradum superasque evadere ad auras, Hoc opus, hic labor est. Eneid, vi. 128.

25. Drop serene. Gutta serena, which he translates literally, was the name formerly given to a disease of the eye now called amaurosis; and so called because there is "an appearance of a clear speck (serene drop) causing a dimness or total loss of sight." Bailey's Dictionary.

26. Suffusion. Suffusio was the term formerly applied to the dimness which ends in cataract of the eye; another name for it was the 'pin and web.'

Yet not the more cease I. I do not cease on this account.

29. Smit with the love, Sc. Smit agrees with I. Newton quotes:

Mo vero primum dulces ante omnia Musæ, Quarum sacra fero, ingenti percussus amore, Accipiant.—Virgil. Georgics, ii. 475.

Chief, thee, Sion, &c. He means that, great as was his love for the study of the ancient poets, his chief delight was in the songs of Sion, that is in the Holy Scriptures.

30. The flowery brooks. Kedron and Siloa; see i. 11. The epithet 'flowery' was supplied by his own imagination, so true to nature and reality; it is amusing to read Keightley's remark that "they (flowery brooks) are rarely to be found in the hot, and regions of the East."

32. Nor sometimes forget. And often remember; a Latinism.

33. Those other two. As he names four, 'those other too' has been proposed; but this is, as Newton observes, 'botch.' Though he mentions four, he chiefly resembles and desires to resemble two, Thamyris and Homer, each of whom he distinguishes by the epithet 'blind'; moreover the latter two were not poets but prophets, and 'minor' ones.

34. So were I, &c. Would that I were equally famous.

35. Thamyris. An ancient poet, born in Thrace; Homer mentions him in the Iliad, ii. 595. He wrote a poem on the war of the Titans with the gods, another giving an account of the world; and is said by Pliny to have invented the Doric measure. So great was his skill in music that he challenged the Muses, who deprived him of his sight after defeating him in the contest; according to Plato his soul passed into a nightingale.

lviii notes.

Mæonides, Homer; so called either from his father's name, which is said to have been Mæon, or from Mæonia, the Homeric name for Lydia, one of the disputed birth-places of the poet; whence he is called 'Mæonides vates,' and 'Mæonius senex.'

The blind seer Tiresias of Thebes is a conspicuous figure in the Grecian mythology; in his day took place the expedition of the "Seven against Thebes," and the war of the Epigoni, both prior to the siege of Troy.

Phineus, king of Salmydessus in Thrace, was another celebrated soothsayer; he was deprived of his sight by the gods, and is said to have been slain by Hercules. In his Defensio Secunda Milton refers to the 'Augur'Irresias' and Phineus together, as well as other illustrious blind men, when replying to the taunts of his adversaries on account of his blindness.

38 The wakeful bird. The nightingale.

39. Durkling. In the dark. In Milton's day it was not a common word, but has been revived of late. It occurs in Shakspeare:—

Out went the candle and we were left darkling. Lear, 1. 4.

Keightley wrongly considers it the "part of an obsolete verb, darkle, the same as dark, to be in the dark." It is an adverb in ling; the termination long or ling (A. S.) denotes belonging; hence the diminutive ling. Headlong was formerly headling, and darkling darklong:—

Behold the whole herd of swine was carried with violence hedlyng into the sea, and peryshed in the water. Bible, 1551, Matthew, viii. 32.

Such as for poverty be not able to go to that charges, are in the night darklong, without all pomp or ceremonies, buried in a dunghill. Hackluyt. Voyage II, 11. 86.

41. Not to me returns, &c. With the allusions to his blindness here and at lines 23-26, compare the Twenty-second Sonnet written in 1655:—

Cyriack, this three years' day these eyes though clear,
To outward view, of blemsh or of spot,
Bereft of light, their seeing have forgot;
Not to their idle orbs doth sight appear
Of sun, or moon, or star, throughout the year,
Or man, or woman. Yet I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot
Of heart or hope; but still bear up and steer
Right onward. What supports me, dost thou ask?
The conscience, friend, to have lost them overplied
In Liberty's defence, my noble task,
Of which all Europe rings from side to side.
This thought might lead me through the world's vain mask,
Content though blind, had I no better guide.

47. For. Instead of.

48. Presented, &c. To Pearce and Newton the syntax of this sentence was "very much embarrassed," and they would read 'All nature's works. &c.,' placing a semicolon after blank; "otherwise" says Newton, "it is not easy to say what the conjunction 'and' copulates 'wisdom' to." Todd thought the difficulty was cleared up by taking wisdom as the genitive case, 'a blank of nature's works, and of wisdom.' But Milton was not presented with a 'blank of wisdom.' The construction is, 'Cloud surrounds me cut off from the cheerful ways of men, and presented with a blank of nature's works, and wisdom being quite shut out at one entrance.'

Wisdom. Nom. abs.

49. Expunged. Expunge is not etymologically connected with spunge, though similar in meaning; expunge is from the Lat. expungere, and that from punctum, the point, sc., of the stylus or pen with which the Romans wrote.

Rase, to erase; Lat. radere, to scrape with the top of the stylus, which was formed for erasing.

61. From his sight. From beholding him.

The radiant image, &c. See Hebrews, i. 3.

71. On this side Night. On the side nearest to Heaven. On this side is a prepositional phrase governing Night.

72. Sublime. Aloft, on high; vi, 771; agreeing with Satur.

74. This world. Not our earth, but the universe.

76. Uncertain which, &c. Hard to say whether in water or air; uncertain agrees with land, and is used like undetermined, ii, 1048.

In ocean is to be taken with embosomed.

84. Interrupt. Professor Masson says: "past participle passive (interruptus), 'thrown ruggedly between.'" I take it as one of Milton's adjective-nouns, the 'vast abrupt' of ii. 409.

97. He had of me. He received from me.

103. Not free. If they had not been created free.

105. Needs. Of necessity; an adverb.

108. Reason also is choice. By the use of reason we can discriminate and choose. The same expression occurs in Areopagitica: -

Many there be that complain of Divine Providence for suffering Adam to transgress. Foolish tongues! When God gave him reason he gave him freedom to choose, for reason is but choosing.

111. As. A pronoun having 'so were created' for antecedent.

If I foreknew. Though I foreknew; no uncertainty is implied in the 'if.'

Immutably foreseen. So foreseen as to be rendered immutable. 121.

123.

What they judge, &c. In what they judge, &c. The first sort. The fallen Angels. Suggestion, see i. 685, note. 129. Compare. A noun; an old form. Cf. ix. 228; vi. 705; i. 588. 137.

In him all his Father shone. See Hebrews, i. 3. Todd quotes: 139.

Full of his father shines his glorious face.

Fletcher. Purple Island, xii. 81.

143. Which uttering. Showing forth or expressing this compassion and love.

The innumerable sound of Hymns. Transferred epithet for 'the sound of innumerable hymns.'

153. His own folly. The sentence breaks off imperfect here. That be from thee far. Genesis, xviii. 25.

164. For him. On his account.

165. So. If such were the case.

lx NOTES.

170. My word, &c. Revelation, xix. 13; 1 Corinthians, i. 24.

175. Renew his lapsed powers. A legal expression; or perhaps simply 'restore his fallen faculties.'

186. Betimes. In good time, before it is too late. Betimes is by time, i. c., early.

The more betimes they rose by the said cabal, the sooner was the beet pot put on. Sir T. Urquhart, Gargantua, iii. 15.

What may suffice. Adverbial phrase to clear.

Soften stony hearts. See this fulfilled in the case of Adam and Eve:-

> From the mercy seat above Prevenient grace descending had removed The stony from their hearts, and made new flesh Regenerate grow instead, xi, 2-5

192. Endeavoured. Endeavour was formerly used as an active verb, now it is only used in a neuter sense.

196. Light after light. They shall obtain one degree of light after another, if they use it well. The idea may have been borrowed from Proverbs:-

The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. iv. 18.

208. Sacred and devote. Doomed and destined; sacer and devotus being thus used in Latin authors.

> Intestabilis et sacer esto. Horacc. Devota morti pectora. Ib. Odes, iv, 14.

214. Mortal. Here we have mortal meaning 'liable to death,' and in the next line, 'causing death.'

215 Just the unjust to save. Which of you will be just to save the unjust? The clause does not bear close inspection; the angels were just or righteous; and, their righteousness would not save man. It is simply an expression which is stated of Christ, quoted as it stands in the Scriptures; He became mortal to redeem man, and "hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust." 1 Peter, iii. 18.

217. The heavenly choir stood mute. The idea is taken from Revelation, viii, i. "There was silence in Heaven."

Newton observes that as there was silence in Hell, when it was proposed who should be sent on the dangerous expedition to destroy mankind, there is likewise silence in Heaven, when it is asked who would be willing to pay the price of their redemption. Satan alone was fit to undertake the one, as the Son of God the other. But though the silence is the same in both places, the difference of the expression is remarkable; in Hell it is said 'all sat mute' (ii. 420), as there the infernal peers were sitting in council; but here it is said they ' stood mute,' as the good Angels were standing round the throne of God.

218. Intercessor none. "He saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor." Isaiah, lxi, 16.

224. In whom the fulness dwells, &c. "In him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." Colossians, ii. 9,

231. Unprevented. Unpreceded, no act of man coming before it;

so in xi. 3, it is called 'prevenient grace.'

Prevent literally means to 'come before,' which might be either to anticipate or to hinder; the former meaning is now obsolete, though common in the seventeenth century; thus in the Bible of 1611, David speaks of his prayer preventing God's mercy.

Unto thee have I cried, O Lord; and in the morning shall my prayer prerent thee. Psalms, lxxxviii. 13.

Are we to forsake any true opinion, because idolaters have maintained it, or to shun any requisite action, only because we have in the practise thereof been prevented by idolaters? Hooker. Ecclesiastical Polity, v, 12.

233 Once dead. So soon as he is dead.

236. Me then; me. Compare x. 935, 936, and

Me, me, adsum, qui feci, in me convertite ferrum. Eneid, ix. 427.

246. All that of me can die. A noun clause in apposition with I. 247. Thou wilt not leave, &c. See Psalms, xvi. 10, and Acts, ii, 27.

255. Hell captive. Psalms, lxviii, 18; Col. ii, 15.

Maugre. In spite of, against the will of; Fr. molgre; Ital. malgrado; i. e. mule gratum.

265. In thy presence joy entire. Psalms, xvi. 11; Isaiah, xxxv, 10. 268. Above which only shone, &c. His love to man was surpassed only by his filial obedience.

277. Nor man the least. The least dear. 'Though last not least' is a well-known expression; perhaps the earliest instance of it is in Spenser, who applies it to Action, supposed to be intended for Shakspeare:—

And there, though last not least, is Aetion;
-A gentler shepherd may no where be found;
Whose muse, full of high thought's invention,
Duth like himself heroically sound.

Colin Clout's Come Home Again, 444-447. It occurs also in Shakspeare, Lear, i. 1; Julius Cæsar, iii. 1.

278. That. So that; so dear that I spare thee.

281. Whom thou only canst redeem, &c. Join to thy nature also that of those whom thou art alone able to redeem.

292. Renounce their own both righteous, &c. Claim no merit for their righteous deeds, and forsake their evil ways. Isaiah, lxiv, 9.

299 Giving to death. Giving himself to death. "The man Christ Jesus gave himself a ransom for all." 1 Tim. ii, 6. Or, in 'heavenly love' we might see the love of the Father and of the Son, the former 'gave his only begotten Son,' and the Son died to redeem mankind.

325-335. Thessalonians, iv, 16. Revelution, xx, 11. 1 Corinthians.

xv, 51. 2 Peter, ii, 12, 13.

341. God shall be all in all. 1 Corinthians, xv, 28.

Gods. Angels; see Psalm, xcvii, 7, and cf. Hebrews, i. 6.

344. All the multitude of angels, ... uttering joy. The whole clause is in the nominative absolute; and uttering agrees with multitude.

348. Jubilee. Rejoicing; properly a time of rejoicing; it is a Hebrew word meaning liberty.

lxii NOTES.

Hosannas. Songs of praise; hosanna is a contracted form of a Hebrew expression meaning 'Save, I beseech thee.'

350. Either. Each.

351. Down they cast their crowns. Revelation, iv. 10.

352. Amarant. A purple flower which is said to be unfading. Gr. dudparros, unfading. The allusion is to 1 Peter, i. 4; v. 4.

357. Shading the fount of life. See xi. 78, 79.

359. Amber. Clear and transparent.

360. With these. With these flowers. Bp. Pearce says these refers to crowns.

362. Now in loose garlands, &c. The bright pavement, that shone like a sea of jasper, smiled impurpled with celestial roses now thrown off in thick loose garlands.

363. A sea of jasper. Jasper is a precious stone of a bright green colour. Cf. xi. 209.

367. Quivers. Quiver is from the Fr. couvrir, to cover.

372. Newton points out the resemblance this address bears to the hymn to Hercules, Eneid, viii. 293.

377. But. Except.

380. Dark with excessive bright, &c. So dazzling as to render them dark; cf. v. 599.

382. Veil their eyes. Isaiah, vi, 2.

387. Whom else, &c. Whom no creature can otherwise behold except through the Son. John, i. 18.

403—409. No sooner.....he,....offered himself. We must understand but or than before He (406), according to the punctuation of the text which is that of the original editions. If, however, a comma is inserted after but (405), no word need be supplied; and in that case the 'much more to pity inclined' of line 406 will refer to Son, and inclined agree with Ho; but this would not be a repetition of line 402, as seems intended.

431. Imaüs. Imaüs was the ancient name of a part of the great chain of mountains in Central Asia, or used indefinitely for the modern Himalayas; or more accurately the Hindu Koosh, or a north-western spur of the Himalayas. Imaüs was used indefinitely to refer to the far east. "From Calpe (Gibraltar) to Imaüs" occurs in Sylvester's Du Bartas, Ed. 1612, p. 106. It is mentioned by Megasthenes in his Indica:—

'Οροι δὲ τῆς 'Ινδῶν γῆς πρὸς μὲν βορέου ἀνὲμου ὁ Ταῦρος τὸ ὅρος. Καλεέται δε οὰ Ταῦρος ἔτι ἐν τῆ ηῆ ταύτη. ἀλλ' ἄρχεται μὲν ὁ Ταῦρος ἀπῶ θαλάσσης τῆς κατὰ Παμφύλους τε καὶ Λυκίην καὶ Κίλικας. Παρατείνει τε έστε τὴν πρὸς ἕω δάλασσαν, τέμνων τῆν 'Ασίην πᾶσαν. ἃλλη δε ἄλλο καλέεται τὸ ὑρος, τῆ μὲν Παραπαμισός, τῆ δὲ 'Ημωδὸς. ἃλλη δε 'Ημαον κληίζεται. Fragm. iii. Ed. Schwanbeck.

΄Απὸ δὲ τῆς `Αριανῆς μέχρι τῆς έωας θαλάσσης, ἄπερ οἱ 'επιχὼρισι κατὰ μέρος Παρυπάμισόν τε καὶ 'Ημωδὸν καὶ 'Ίμαον καὶ ἄλλα ὀνομάζσυσι. Μακεδόνες δὲ Καυκασον. [Hod. Hindu Kush.] Id. iv.

432. Snowy ridge. Milton may either have used snowy as a natural epithet for a high mountain; or on the authority of Pliny:—

Gentes, quas memorare non pigeat, a montibus Emodis, quorum promontorium Imaüs vocatur, incolarum lingua nivosum significante. vi. 21.

But nivosus is not a correct translation of the Sanskrit hima, as there is no word for 'snow' in Sanskrit. Imaüs is from the Sanskrit, himavant, cold; hima, primarily means winter, (Lut. hiems), hence also Himalaya, the place of cold.

434. Yearling. Young; A. S. eanian, to bring forth. Shakspeare has eanling, Merchant of Venice, i. 3.

436. Hydaspes is the Greek form of the modern Jhelum.

438. Sericana, or Serica, was the name given to a region in the east of Asia, corresponding with the north-west of China.

Chineses. A China-man in the geographies and books of travel of the sevententh century is called a Chinese, hence the plural Chineses; in Goldsmith's Citizen of the World a China-man is a Chinese. Now the word is only a collective noun, the people of China, or an adjective, belonging to China.

439. With sails, &c. Newton quotes—

Agreeable unto the observation of modern writers, the country is so plain and level, that they have carts and coaches driven with sails, as ordinarily as drawn with horses in these parts. Heylin, Cosmography, p. 867.

442. Creature. Created things; creature formerly not being confined to living things.

444. Hereafter. After this time.

Store. Numbers, abundance. See v. 322, note.

456. Unkindly. Contrary to their kind or nature. See iv. 668, note.

459. As some have dreamed. Ariosto, Orlando Furioso, xxxiv. 70, speaks of things lost on the earth as preserved in the moon. Pope alludes to the idea in the Rape of the Lock:—

Some thought it mounted to the lunar sphere, Since all things lost on earth are treasured there. There heroes' wits are kept in ponderous vases,

And beaus in snuff boxes and tweezer cases. &c. v, 113-122.

463. Sans and daughters. The allusion is to Genesis, vi. 2; the 'sons of God,' i. e., the worshippers of the true God, took wives from among the 'daughters of men,' or idolaters.

Born agrees with giants. Genesis, iv. 6.

467. Sennaar. Genesis, xi. 2. In the Vulgate Shinar is called Senaar.

469. He. In apposition with single.

To be deemed a God. Empedocles, a philosopher of Agrigentum in Sicily; he was a pupil of Pythagoras, and flourished about 450 B. C. In order that it might be supposed that he was a god, and had left the earth miraculously, he threw himself into Ætna, but the manner of his death was discovered from one of his sandals being found, thrown up from the burning mountain.

470. Fondly. Foolishly. Peter Levins, in his Manipulus Vocabulorum, Ed. 1570, translates fond, stolidus, foolish; and in Chaucer fonne, is a fool. Fond, with its derivatives, has lost this primary meaning, only retaining that of loving very much. Dote, which has gone through a similar process, retains both meanings, to be foolish, and to love excessively or foolishly.

lxiv Notes.

473. Cleombrotus. Cleombrotus was a philosopher of Ambracia in Epirus; after reading the Phædon of Plato on the immortality of the soul and its happiness in the next world, he leaped into the sea so as to enjoy the bliss of Elysium at once. Newton quotes:—

Εἴπας, ἥλιε, χαῖρε, Κλεομβροτος ὡ μβρακιώτης, Ἡλατ' ἀφ' ὑψηλοῦ τείχος εἰς ἄιδην.

Αξιον δυδεν ίδων θανάτου κακόν, άλλα Πλάτωνος

Έν το περί ψυχης γράμμ άναλεξαμενος. Callimachus, Epistle, 29.

Many more too long. Many more (came single, whom it would take) too long (to describe.) The same expression occurs in Paradise Regained, ii. 182.

475. White, black, and grey. The Carmelite, Dominican, and Franciscan friars; so called from the colour of the habits of their respective orders. Trumpery. Rubbish. Fr. tromper, to cheat.

The Carmelite order is named after Mount Carmel; the tradition being that Elisha founded an order there. Ferrari the Canonist says it is regarded by some as the most ancient order, and began about 1160. Bibl. Prompt. viii. 38.

The Dominican order was founded by St. Dominic in 1206; and the Franciscan by St. Francis d'Assisi in 1208.

477. In Golgotha, &c. He alludes to pilgrimages to the empty sepulchre of our Saviour at Jerusalem.

Golgotha was the place of execution outside Jerusalem, and in Hebrew means the Place of a Skull.

478. Who, to be sure of Paradise, &c. It was formerly believed that to be buried in a Dominican or Franciscan habit was a safe passport to Heaven. Bowle quotes—

So grew in the minds of the silly simple souls this wicked opinion of these monstrous-marked friars, that to wear their weed, or to go clothed in that colour, was good against the quartain ague, and other diseases; and (that worse is) that, to be buried in that habit, was the very right way to go to Heaven. Pasquine in a Traunce, Ed. 1584, fol. 15.

479. Weeds. Weed is clothing, either of the field or the body; but it is obsolete in the latter sense, except in the single phrase 'widow's weeds.

Dominic. Dominic de Guzman was born at Calatorra, in Old Castile, in 1170; besides being the founder of the order which bears his name he took a leading part in the Albigensian Crusade, and was appointed Inquisitor General of the Inquisition. He died in 1221, and shortly after was canonized by Gregory JX.

480. Franciscan. St. Francis was born at Assisi, in Umbria, in

.1182; he died in 1226.

481. The planets seven. In this and the following lines Milton speaks according to the Ptolemaic system; the 'planets seven' are our solar system. The 'fixed' is the sphere of the fixed stars. Beyond it was the 'crystalline sphere,' to which the Ptolemaic theory attributed a libration or balancing of the trepidation or irregularities in the movements of the stars.

'That first moved' is the primum mobile, the sphere which set the others in motion; and next to it was the empyrean Heaven, the abode of God and the Angels.

The trepidation talked. The trepidation so much spoken of. Saint Peter &c. Milton does not say that St. Peter stands at Heaven's gate; but that to these souls he seems to be waiting to receive them; the passage being in ridicule of the doctrine of the Roman Church that St. Peter and those who claim to be his successors are in a peculiar or exclusive manner entrusted with 'the power of the keys.'

489. Devious. Pathless.

492. Indulgences. An indulgence, according to the doctrine of the Roman Church, is the remission of penance or of a portion of the punishment of Purgatory. At the time of the Crusades indulgences were given as a reward for zeal or to induce men to join the Crusading army. The earliest grant of a 'plenary indulgence' was made at the Council of Clermont by Urban II, in 1095. The sale of indulgences and pardons in the beginning of the sixteenth century led to the Reformation in Germany.

Bulls. A document or edict issued by the Pope is called a bull; originally it was the round seal attached to the mandate that was called the bulla, or bull, afterwards the document itself was so named. Bulletin, bullet, bullion, and ball are from the same root.

493. The sport of winds. Cf. 'rapidis ludibrio ventis,' An. vi. 73.

A Limbo. The souls of the patriarchs and other good men 495. who died before the birth of Christ were supposed to be detained until his second coming in a place on the border of hell, called Limbus Patrum: limbus is the Latin for the border of a garment.

497. Now unpeopled. Now, when Satan arrived there. Travelled steps. Travelled, weary; travail, labour. 501.

502. Ascending. Agreeing with structure.

Steps; degrees (Lat, de and gradus) is used literally.

509. By. The first by goes with inimitable, and the second, with drawn.

510. Such as whereon Jacob, &c. Genesis, xxviii. 10-22.

513. In the early editions there was a comma after Luz, this was corrected by Newton. The clause 'in the field of Luz' is to be taken with dreaming.

516. Stair. A stair is a number, or 'flight,' of steps; A. S. stæger, from stigan, to ascend.

Mysteriously was meant. Had an allegorical meaning. 521. Wafted by angels. In this line he alludes to the 'translation' of Lazarus, Luke, xvi. 22; and in the next to Elijah's being taken up to heaven, 2 Kings, ii. 11. Milton refers again to the 'fiery chariot' by which Elijah was 'rapt' or caught up :-

The great Thisbite, who on flery wheels Rode up to heaven.—Paradise Regained, ii. 16.

- Though that were large. That, the passage over 'the Pro-530. mised Land.
- 534. His eye. Eye, nom. to passed understood. Pearce thinks a verse to be wanting to describe what 'his eye' did. Todd and Bentley suggest that eye may be used in the same sense as in lines 650 and 660, and the passage read as follows:-

On high behests his Angels to and fro Passed frequent, as his eyes, with choice regard, &c. IXVI NOTES.

535. Paneas. Paneas was a city near the source of the Jordan, originally Dan; and so 'From Paneas to Beersaha' is another form of the proverbial expression 'From Dan unto Beersheba,' that is, from north to south of the Holy Land.

541. Scaled. Ascended like a ladder; Lat. scala, a ladder.

544. Gone. Having gone.

551. We must supply at the end of the sentence, to complete the sense,-" he looks down with wonder."

552. Though after Heaven seen. Although accustomed to the splendour of Heaven, the sight of all this world filled Satan with wonder. Seen may be taken as qualifying world, i. 554; or as a Latin idiom like "since created man," i. 573.

557. From eastern point of Libra, &c. From east to west. Libra, is exactly opposite to Aries, the Ram, or 'fleecy star,' and is said to bear Andromeda, because that constellation is situated over Aries.

559. Andromeda. The fable is that in consequence of her mother having boasted of Andromeda's beauty exceeding that of the Nereids, Poseidon sent a sea-monster to lay waste the territory of her father, Cepheus. In obedience to an oracle Cepheus delivered Andromeda to the monster, but she was rescued by Perseus, and became his wife. Andromeda was afterwards placed among the stars.

565. That shone stars distant. That in the distance appeared to be stars. Stars, nom. after the neuter verb shone.

568. Those Hesperian gardens. The Hesperides, daughters of Atlas and Hesperis, were the guardians of the golden apples which were given by Gé (Earth) to Juno, on her marriage with Jupiter. The gardens in which the golden fruit grew were supposed to be in a group of islands on the west coast of Africa, probably the Cape de Verde Islands. See iv. 250, and Paradise Regained, ii. 35-7359.

569. Fortunate fields. The description is borrowed from Virgil:-

Devenere locos lætos, et amæna vireta

571. Above them all. More than they all.

574. But up or down, &c. But it is hard to tell whether in his ourse towards the sun he went North or South, towards the centre or from it; or by longitude, East or West.

576. Longitude. Length east or west; the portion of the world known to the ancients from east to west was greater than what they knew from north to south and so was called longitude, and from north to south latitude or breadth, as in line 560, 'from pole to pole he views in breadth'; modern geography has reversed the distinction.

580. Numbers. Measures, keeping time with the music of the spheres.

585. Though unseen. Qualifies penetration.

588. A spot. The Fiend himself. The spots in the sun were discovered by the Astronomer Galileo, 'through his glazed optic tube,' in 1611.

593. Informed. Impregnated, animated...

597. To the twelve, &c. He mentions four of the twelve stones that adorned Aaron's breast-plate, and includes the rest by the expression 'to the twelve.' Exodus, xxviii. 15-20.

That stone, &c. Either the philosopher's stone or one like 600. it. The philosopher's stone was the name given to an imaginary stone, which was supposed to have the power of converting other metals to gold.

Here below. In this world.

602. Bind volatile Hermes. Render fluid quicksilver solid.

603. Hermes. Mercury or quicksilver.

Sol gold is, and Luna silver we threpe, Mars iron, Mercurie quicksilver we clepe; Saturnus lead, and Jupiter is tin, And Venus copper. Canterbury Tales, 16, 294-16, 297.

Old Proteus. Proteus was the old man of the sea who tended the flocks of Neptune; he was able to turn himself into various shapes and forms, but when bound fast would return to his proper By this simile Milton refers to the different experiments of the alchemists in search of the philosopher's stone.

605. A limber. A vessel for distilling liquor.

Regions here. Here, in the sun. 606.

Elixir. He probably refers to the Elixir vitae, another of the 607. quests of the Alchemists; it was a liquid which was supposed to prolong life.

608. Potable gold. Aurum potabile; liquid gold—'to be drunk.'

The arch-chemic sun. Compare iv. 673, and Shakspeare:--609.

To solemnize this day, the glorious sun Stays in his course, and plays the alchemist; Turning, with splendour of his precious eye, The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold. King John, iii. 1.

611. Here in the dark. In the earth.

613.

New to gaze. Gaze, a noun; 'new to sight,' iv. 287. Whence no way round, 3c. From whence no shadow can fall 618. from an opaque body anywhere round about it.

No way round. Adverbial phrase to fall.

The same whom John saw, &c. Revelation, xix. 17. 623.

Fledge. Feathered; it properly means able to fly, and so 627. feathered.

633. Our beginning woe. The beginning of our woe.

Casts. Plans, deliberates; common in this sense in Spenser. 634.

637. Not of the prime. Newton considers this to mean 'not of the prime order and dignity.' Warton regards it as 'youthful'.

Succinct. Girded up, so as to be 'fit for speed'; cf. the scriptural expression 'Gird up your loins.'

Decent. Graceful, becoming; in the sense of the Lat. decens. 644. Admonished by his ear. That is, he heard the movements of Satan before he saw him.

Straight was known. Was immediately recognised as.

Uriel in Hebrew means 'Light of God,' he is therefore represented as 'Regent of the sun,' 690. His name does not occur in the Scriptures, but he is spoken of in the Apocrypha, 2. Esdras, x. 28.

650. Are his eyes. "Those seven, they are the eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole earth." Zechariah, iv. 10.

lxviii notes.

654. Those seven Spirits, &c. The Jews believed that there were seven Angels who were the Captains or Chiefs of the heavenly host. The first three were Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and after them Uriel.

Both seven and Spirits are monosyllables in scanning this line.

656. The first art wont, &c. Art the chief of those who are accustomed to carry his will. Authentic, authoritative.

664. Delight and favour. The object of his delight and favour.

670. But all these shining orbs. &c. But has all these shining orbs to inhabit at his choice. Dwell was used without a prep. as a transitive verb:

We sometimes,

Who dwell this wild, constrained by want come forth.

Paradise Regained, i. 331.

His choice. Adverbial phrase to dwell.

381. For. Because; what follows explains why he was unperceived.

686. Though Wisdom make, &c. Though a wise man may be on his guard, he will often allow his own goodness of nature to take the place of suspicion, his own uprightness preventing him from suspecting evil in others.

703. To be all had in remembrance. Psalms, exi. 4. (Old Version.)

710. Heard his voice. See Psalms, xxxiii. 6-9.

712. At his second bidding. God first created the heaven and the earth, and his 'second bidding' was 'Let there be light.' Genesis i. 1-5.

715. Cumbrous elements. Cumbrous, or heavy, as compared with the quintessence of pure fire.

716. Ethereal quintessence. According to an ancient theory, besides the four elements, there was a fifth essence or ethereal quintessence out of which the stars were formed. See vii. 243—245.

719. And how they move. And thou seest how they move.

721. The rest. The remainder of the quintessence which had not 'turned to stars.'

725. Which else. And otherwise night would invade the side of the earth next us as it does the other hemisphere.

The antecedent of which is hither side.

730. Countenance triform. Crescent, full moon, and waning. The 'Diva triformis' of Horace, Odes, iii. 22-4.

731. Hence. From the sun, in which they were standing.

742. Niphates. A range of mountains in Armenia bordering on Mesopotamia; in iv. 126, it is called the 'Assyrian Mount.' Niphates means 'snowy range;' the modern name is Nimroud Tagh.

BOOK IV.

- 1. This book opens with an exclamation, similar to the opening words of Shakspeare's Henry V.
 - O! for a muse of fire, that would ascend

The brightest heaven of invention! Chorus.

and in Romeo and Juliet:—

O! for a falconer's voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again! ii. 2.

He, who saw the Apocalypse. St. John, to whom a revelation was made of what was to happen afterwards, and at the end of the world. This he records in his book of the Revelation, or the Apocalypse.

Apocalypse is derived from two Greek words, apo, from, and kalyptein, to cover; an uncovering, and so literally corresponds with the word Revelation, from Lat. re, back, and velare, to veil, cover; so an unveiling, disclosing.

Cry. Inf. depending on heard.

The Dragon. "The great Dragon," says St. John, "was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world." Rev. xii. 9.

Put to second rout. A second time put to rout and driven forth; the first time being when he was driven out of Heaven with the rebel angels before the creation of the world.

4. Came furious down, &c. "The devil is come down unto you having great wrath, &c." Rev. xii. 12.

5. Woe to the inhabitants on earth! These were the words of the 'voice' which St. John heard. Rev. xii. 9.

The clause may be taken as the object of the verb cry.

6. While time was. While there was time, before it was too late. Warned the coming. The prep. 'of,' usually found after this verb, is poetically omitted here; so before:--

> The rest shall hear me call, and oft be warned Their sinful state. iii. 185.

Sometimes, however, Milton retains the prep:-

-to forewarn

Us timely of what might else have been our loss. vii. 73, 74.

Warn is from the O. E. warnian, whence come wary, ware, aware, beware, unowares, &c.

Warn used formerly to mean to summon, thus in Shakspeare:-Who is it hath warned us to the walls? King John, ii. 1.

Haply. By chance. Hap is derived from A. S. haban, to have or hold, and thus means something had; just as luck, A. S. læccan, to catch, means something caught, a good catch. A happy person is one to whom good chance falls, who is lucky; hapless, the reverse; happily, haply, used without reference to good or bad fortune; perhaps, by chance; so too fortuna, fortune, is from fors, chance. According to some, hap, happen, &c., are from the Keltic hab, luck.

The passage may be paraphrased thus :- Oh that that voice (which St. John heard crying," Woe to the inhabitants of earth," when he lxx notes.

saw the great Dragon, a second time defeated, falling from Heaven, about to wreak his wrath on mankind,) had been heard by our first parents, so that they might have had warning in time of the coming of their insidious enemy, and, by attending to it, perhaps have escaped his fatal temptation.

10. The tempter ere the accuser. These are two of the titles of Satan; he was the Tempter (1 Thess. iii. 5,) before the Accuser of mankind. The 'voice' said, "The accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God, day and night."

Ere. Before. A. S. ær, formerly applied to the morning; cf. early; ær is the root of the termination er, or, our, which denotes the prime person, the agent; or in the expression or e'er, or ever, is the same word; ere is used in composition, erc-while ere-long, ere-now; erst, formerly, is the superlative of ere.

11. Wreak. In the original and some modern editions it is spelled wreck. Der. A. S. wrocan; rack, an instrument of torture, wrack, and wreck, to shatter, or something shattered, wreak, to inflict, and wretch, one wrecked or distressed, are all different forms of the same word.

To wreak his loss. To take vengeance on man on account of his having himself lost Heaven.

13. Not rejoicing in his speed. Although when far off from the place to which he was to bring ruin he was bold and fearless, yet as he approached it he did not rejoice in his swift course, for horror and doubt distracted him.

Speed means here simply haste, quickness; it also occurs as a verb, as in the description of his flight in the Third Book;—

Satan, bowing low,

Sped with hoped success. iii. 736-740.

Speed is used to denote both quickness and good success; as the old proverb shows:—The more haste the less speed. The facetious Fuller winds up his notice of John Speed by saying:—

Thus we take our leaves of Father Speed, truly answering his name, in both the acceptions thereof, for celerity and success.

Worthies of England, Cheshire.

14. Nor with cause to boast. The object of his coming down to the earth was one that he could not boast of or glory in.

15. Dire, dreadful; from A. S. derian, to hurt; according to Horne Tooke from the same root comes dear, beloved, valuable; dearth is the third pers. sing. of the verb, and means that which dereth, makes dear, or causes hurt, hence dearth, famine; hence dear is highly prized, precious. Against this derivation, however, we find that deore, from deoran, or dyran, to love, was the Old English for beloved, and deores, for lovers. Shakspeare applies the word dear to any strong emotion of the mind causing either love or the very reverse; as—

Golden quoifes, and stomachers, For my lads to give their dears.—Winter's Tale, iv. 3. Would I had met my dearest foe in Heaven, Ere I had ever seen that day. Hamlet, i. 2. 17. Like a devilish engine, &c. Mitford quotes as a parallel passage the couplet from Shakspeare:—

For 'tis the sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petar. Hamlet, iii. 4.

Recoils. Reverts, starts back on; used formerly be written recule; der. Fr. reculer, to go backwards.

20. The hell within him. So in Shakspeare:-

Within me is a hell,-King John, v. 7.

Within him hell he brings. Cf. Sir Thomas Browne:-

Every Devil is a hell unto himself .- Religio Medici.

21. Nor from Hell, &c. The same idea occurs in Satan's solilo-quy in the First Book, 251-255.

25. Of what he was, what is, and what must be. The meaning is, Conscience wakes the bitter recollection of what he was, his present state, and what he must be hereafter,—a worse condition, for the worse the crimes committed, the greater punishment will ensue.

He is understood before is, and must be.

I have followed the punctuation of Prendeville and Keightley; the original as well as all other editions I have seen have:—

Of what he was, what is, and what must be Worse; of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue

Memory, applied here to the present and future, is used in its Latin sense of reflection.

- 30. In his meridian tower. At noon, when the sun is highest. The metaphor of a tower is borrowed, says Richardson, from Virgil:—
 - Igneus æthereas jam sol penetrarat in arces. Culer, v. 41.
- 35. Hide their diminished heads. A well known quotation. Pope imitates this line:—

Ye little stars! hide your diminished rays. Moral Essays, iii. 282.

45. Upbraided. Reproached; so in the Scriptures:-

God giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not. James, i. 5.

Der. A. S. brægan, to tear away, make a sudden motion; hence bray, to make a loud noise, upbraid, accuse loudly.

46. What could be less, &c. Compare our Lord's answer to the Tempter in Paradise Regained:

What could he less expect
Than glory and benediction, that is, thanks?
The slightest, easiest, readiest, recompense
From them who could return him nothing else.—iii. 126—129.

49. Wrought. Brought about, caused, worked. The past part of work was worked, workt, which, by substituting h for k, becomes worht, and by transposition, wroht, wrought, which is now used both as past tense and part. of work; cf. 'wright,' as in ship-wright, wheelwright, cart-wright.

lxxii notes.

So in the Argument to this Book:-

Satan, with resolution to work their fall.

And,-

Their armour helped their harm, crushed in and bruised Into their substance pent, which wrought them pain. vi. 657.

As when a ship by skilful steersman wrought. ix. 513.

50. Sdeined. This is the Italian form of disdain; it is used also by Spenser.

51. Quit. Discharge, pay off. Acquit, quit, and requite, are all from the same root, Lat. quietare, to render quiet, through the Fr. acquitter. Shakspeare uses quit in the sense of requite:—

Is't not perfect conscience To quit him with this arm? Hamlet, v. 2.

Latimer has acquit in the same sense of requiting or resenting:—
There is a man hath done me wrong, taken away my living, or hurt me of my good name; the devil stirreth me against him, to acquit him, to do him another foul turn, to avenge myself of him.

Sermons on the Lord's Prayer.—Ser. 7.

Quit occurs in the Bible in the sense of to clear, free from blame:—
If one smite another with a stone, and he die not, but walk abroad, then shall he that smote be quit. Exodus, xxi. 19.

And again for repaid:-

If an ox gore a man or a woman that they die, then the dx shall be surely stoned, but the owner of the ox shall be quit. Exodus, xxxi. 28.

So too in Fuller:-

Fishermen prefer rather their vessels lie and rot in their haven, than to undergo much pain and peril for that which would not at their return quit cost in any proportion. Worthies of England. Seamen.

- 53. So burdensome, &c. It being so burdensome still paying, and still to owe.
- 55. A grateful mind, &c. The very gratitude of one who has received a favour, is an acknowledgment of the debt and at the same time frees him from it.

To the same effect, and illustrative of this sentiment, is the following passage from a Sermon preached by Isaac Barrow in 1661:—

It was not altogether unreasonable, though it went for a paradox, that dictate of the Stoics, that Animus sufficit animo, and, that Qui liberter accept, beneficium reddidit; that he, who with a willing and well-affected mind receives a courtesy, hath fully discharged the duty of gratitude.—

Sermon on Eph. V., 20.

Somewhat similar is the following from Rabelais:-

This is the nature of gratitude and true thankfulnes. For time, which gnaws and diminisheth all things else, augments and increaseth benefits; because a noble action of liberality, done to a man of reason, doth grow continually by his generous thinking of it, and remembering it.

Sir T. Urquhart. Garyantua, i. 50.

59. I had stood. I would have stood or continued.

65. To. Against; to be taken with armed. From within or from without goes with temptations.

69. Since, love or hate, &c. Since, whether it is love or hate, eternal punishment is what it metes out to me. The punctuation of Newton and Todd is :---

Since love or hate,

To me alike, it deals eternal woe.

Deals. Portions, imparts, Der. A. S. dælan, to divide, distri-70. bute; hence dole, to deal out in small portions, and dole, a small quantity, and the termination-dle in middle, the mid deal or part.

- 72. Ruc. Lament, regret, feel sorry for; the noun is ruth, sorrow, pity; the verb rue is a common provincialism, meaning to be sorry for; formerly it was also used for 'repent,' without any idea of regret, as "The Lord swore and it shall not rewe him." Wiclif. Hebrews, vii. 21. Cf. also rueful and ruthless. There is also an herb called rue, and Shakspeare makes Ophelia play upon the word in Hamlet, iv. 5.
 73. Fly. Escape from; here used actively.
 - 75.

Myself am hell. See note on line 20. To. In comparison with, compared to. So in Shakspeare:—

War is no strife To the dark house, and the detested wife. All's Well, ii. 3. The harlot's check, beautied with plastering art,

Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it, Than is my deed to my most painted word. Hamlet, iii. 1.

And Marlow :--

There is no music to a Christian's knell; How sweet the bells ring, now the nuns are dead, That sound at other times like tinkers' pans! The Jew of Malta, iv. 1.

O, then, at last relent. Newton, Todd, Prendeville, and Professor Masson take this speech as addressed by Satan to himself. Keightley thinks that it and what follows is addressed to God.

No place left for repentance. The words are borrowed from the Scriptures :-

He found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears. Hebrews, xii. 17.

Seduce. To draw aside from the right path; Lat. sed, from, and ducere, to lead.

Ay me. This form occurs several times in Milton's poems:—

Ay me unhappy! then my fears are true. Comus, 511.

and Lycidas, 56; 154; Samson Agonistes, 330; and again in Paradise Lost, x. 813. Most of the modern editions have substituted Ah me! but the form in the text is the correct one, and is so printed in the old dramatists.

87. Dearly. See note on dire, line 15.

Abide. 'Purchase dear' (101), suffer the consequence of, rue, pay dearly for; dcr. A. S. abie, to suffer for; Skinner derives it immediately from buy, to pay for.

lxxiv NOTES.

It is also written aby, as in Shakspeare:—

Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,

Lest, to thy peril, thou aby it dear. Midsummer Night's Dream, iii. 2.

Thou shalt 'by [al. buy] this dear. 1b.

Let no man abide this deed

But we the doers. Julius Casar, iii. 1.

In Newton's Todd's, and most modern editions there is a comma after grown, in this line, and a full stop after hell in the next; the punctuation in the text is that of the original editions, and of Keightley and Masson.

93. Suy. Supposing that, if it were possible that, I could repent.

96. Recant. Revoke, unsay; lit. sing again.
100. Which. And this—this act of recanting the vows made in pain—would only lead me to a greater fall.

101. So should I purchase dear, &c. Cf. in the lament of Adam: ...

O fleeting joys

Of Paradise, dear bought with lasting woes! x. 741, 742.

Smart. Severe pain; formerly more common, meaning some sharp and severe hurt or pain.

105. All hope, &c. All hope being then excluded, behold mankind created, a new source of delight for Him, in place of us now exiled and banished from his presence, and this world created for man's use. Delight and world are obj. on behold, and mankind is in apposition with delight.

108. Farewell hope. I bid good bye to hope; farewell is in the imperative, third pers. With this and the following lines compare the words of Satan when baffled in his temptation :-

All hope is lost

Of my reception into grace; what worse? For where no hope is left, is left no fear.

Paradise Regained, iii. 204, 206.

110. Evil, be thou my good. Satan gives expression to the same sentiments in Paradise Regained:-

> I would be at the worst; worst is my port, My harbour, and my ultimate repose--The end I would attain-my final good. iii. 209-211.

111. Divided empire, &c. The construction is :- By means of three (Evil) I now possess divided empire with the King of Heaven, He reigning in Heaven, I in Hell, and by thy means I shall reign superior to Him, perhaps, ruling more than half, if I succeed in conquering this new world, as man and it will soon discover.

More is the nom. in app. with I_i , from und to will reign.

Newton remarks that "this passage has occasioned much perplexity and confusion;" the punctuation of the text, however, in line 112, shews the construction; in other editions there is a comma after thee only. Perhaps is to be taken with more than half.

115. Each passion, &c. Newton's note is, "Each passion, ire, envy, and despair, dimmed his countenance, which was thrice changed with pale through the successive agitations of these three passions. For that paleness is the proper hue of envy and despair everybody knows, and we always reckon that sort of anger the most deadly and diabolical which is accompanied with a pale, livid countenance."

Keightley:—"It is rather doubtful if, as Newton says, it was these passions that turned him pale. It might be as the punctuation seems to intimate, that the flush produced by each of them was succeeded by paleness."

Masson: "The meaning is not, as usually interpreted, that Satan's face grew pale three times-first with ire, then with envy, then with despair; but that a shadow or dim scowl of each of these passions in succession passed over his face, followed by paleness."

Pale. Paleness, pallor. It occurs again as a noun:—

So much of death her thoughts

Had entertained, as dyed her cheeks with pale. x. 1008, 1009.

Ire, envy, and despair, are in app. with passion. In the Argument he is said to have fallen into 'many passions, fear, envy, and despair.'

116. His borrowed visage. In order to escape detection, on his way down to this world, Satan had disguised himself under the form of a Cherub; as we read in iii. 634-639.

Betrayed him counterfeit. Would have betrayed him as false and feigning to be what he really was not.

117. If any eye beheld. If any eye should have beheld, if any person were to have seen him.

120. Smoothed. The nom. is he. Soon becoming aware that the changes that passed over and dimmed his face gave expression to the thoughts within, he calmed his disturbed feelings with the outward appearance of composure.

Appearance, resemblance without the reality; so the Show. adj. showy means having a gaudy exterior, plausible, ostentatious. So again at line 316:-

With shows instead, mere shows of seeming pure.

and Shakspeare:-

Read on this book.

That show of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,-'Tis too much proved, that, with devotion's visage, And pious action, we do sugar o'er Hamlet, iii, 1. The devil himself.

123. Deep malice, &c. The order is: He was the first that under saintly show practised falsehood to conceal deep malice couched with revenge. Couched. Laid, lying concealed with; agrees with malice.

Uricl. The 'glorious angel' whom Satan, in the form of a Cherub, had deceived, and from whom he had discovered the situation of Paradise by telling him that he was desirous of seeing man, and admiring the new creation of the Universal Maker. See iii, 621-742.

The Assyrian mount. Niphates, in Armenia, and on the borders of Assyria; iii, 742. It is in Assyria that Milton places Eden. Whose eye pursued him, &c. After Satan and Uriel had ended their conversation, the former sped "down towards the coast of earth lxxyi notes.

beneath." Uriel, however, does not lose sight of him, but follows him with his eye, and, "saw him disfigured on the Assyrian mount."

128. Sort. Kind, condition.

129. Alone refers to Satan; the construction being, He marked the fierce gesture of him then alone as he supposed. A similar construction occurs in Book Ten,—

Thou hast achieved our liberty, confined Within hell-gates till now. 368.

130. All. Entirely, altogether; an adv.

131. Fares. Goes, proceeds on his way; Der. A. S. faran to go; fare in farewell is the imperative; and we still say, 'how fares it?' i.e., 'how goes it?' The noun fare means the sum paid for going; the person conveyed; then treatment, provision, entertainment.

132. Eden, where man was first placed by God after the creation,

Eden means delight, or pleasure.

Paradise. The garden of Eden; der. Gr. paradeisos, a park, a pleasure ground.

133. Crowns. Tops, is on the summit of. Ezekiel speaks of Paradise as being on a hill, "Thou hast been in Eden, the garden of God, . . . thou wast upon the holy mountain of God." xxviii. 3, 14.

134. Champaign head. Flat, level summit. This word is not often now used; it occurs as a noun in vi. 2. Lat. campus, a field.

135. Hairy. Rough with shrubs and underwood, the epithet is similar to "shaggy hill," (224.)

Grotesque. Fantastic, oddly formed; der. Fr. grotesque; "grotesques," says Cotgrave, are "pictures wherein (as please the painter) all kind of odd things are represented without any peculiar sense or meaning, but only to feed the eye."

137. Access denied. Prevented any ingress.

· Overhead. Above the thicket.

139. Cedar, pine, fir and palm, in apposition with shade.

141. Shade above shade. The first shade is nom. abs., shade being above shade.

A woody theatre. The trees as they rise in rows above one another give the side of the hill the appearance of a theatre with its benches raised in tiers. There is a very similar description in Sidney's Arcadia:—

About it (as if it had been to enclose a theatre) grew such sort of trees as either excellency of fruit, stateliness of growth, continual greenness, &c., have made at any time famous. They became a gallery aloft from tree to tree, almost round about.

Theatre. Nom. to upgrew, or 'is formed,' und.; or, like scene (140), may be nom. in app. with height of loftiest shade.

142. Yet. Still; qualifying higher; 'far higher.'

143. Verdurous wall. The same as before spoken of as 'the enclosure green.'

144. Our general sire. Adam, the first man, the ancestor of the human race; so Eve is called 'our general mother' (line 492), and Adam again, 'our general ancestor,' (line 659); the common ancestor of us all.

The same expression occurs again, viii. 307; ix. 577. 147.

Enamelled. Variegated, spotted; connected with A.S. meltan, to melt, to produce different colours by melting in the fire.

Of pure now purer air. Pure air is succeeded by still purer.

Of is here used in its original sense of 'from,' 'out of.'

Native perfumes. Natural scent, odours arising from the 158. trees and flowers around.

Whirper whence they stole, &c. This reminds one of Shakspeare's familiar lines :-

> It came o'er my ear like the sweet south That breathes upon a bank of violets,

Stealing, and giving odour. Twelfth Night. i. 1.

159. To them, to be taken with blow (161).

162. Subean. From Sabea, a country of Arabia Felix, or Araby the Blest.

Spicy shore. He alludes to the fragrant odours that were wafted over the deep from the shores of Arabia, in Paradise Regained:—

--Winds

Of gentlest gale Arabian odours fanned

From their soft wings, and Flora's earliest smells. ii. 363-365.

Asmodeus. There dwelt at Echatana, a city of Media, Raguel, whose daughter Sara had been betrothed to seven husbands, but before the marriage, each had been slain by Asmodeus, an evil spirit. Tobit, a captive Jew, had, when purveyor to the king of Assyria, left a sum of money with a friend at Rages, which, on his becoming poor, he sent for by his son Tobias. As Tobias was looking for a guide for his journey, the Angel Raphael appeared in the form of a man, and volunteered to go with him. By the advice of Raphael, after they came to Echatana, Tobias was betrothed to Sara, and in order to escape the fate of her former husbands, he burnt the heart and liver of a fish, the smoke of which, the angel had told him, would drive away a devil or evil spirit, so 'when the evil spirit had smelled [the fishy fume] he fled into the utmost parts of Egypt, and the Angel bound him,—and thus secured

His marriage with the seven-times wedded maid.

With all speed; with the haste of a post rider. Adv.

Fast bound. Securely chained.

174. So thick entwined. The order is :- The undergrowth of shrubs and tangling bushes, so thickly entwined together, like an endless thicket, had perplexed all path of man or beast that passed that way.

175. One. Entire.

Brake. A thicket, a place covered with briers and brambles.

177. That passed that way. That is, that would have passed that way.

181. At one slight bound. Here and at line 171 we have the word bound used in three different senses,—tied, a spring, a limit. In this line there is a pun on the word, and so too in the following from Shakspeare:—

xxviii Notes.

I am too sore empierced with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers, and so bound
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe. Romeo and Juliet, i. 4.

188. The cash. The word cash is now applied to coin, but originally meant the cash or case in which it was kept.

Fr. Casse, a box, case, or chest, also a merchant's cash, or counter.

Cotgrave.

I would take them at that very instant nick of time, when both those of the one and the other side should be weary and tired of making war, when they had voided and emptied their own cashes of all treasure and com.

Sir T. Urquhart. Pantagruel, ii. 41.

It is quite possible the word is used here by Milton in the sense of a money-box or chest.

192. Thief. Satan is called the "thief of Paradise," Paradise

Regained, iv. 604.

193. Into his Church. See John, x. 1-16; and Lycidas, 113-131.

Lewd. Wicked; the word lewd primarily meant unlearned, ignorant; then wicked; and lastly, its sole present meaning, obscene, wanton. Tooke derives it from lewed, the past part. of the A. S. lawan, to mislead.

This every lewed vicar and parson Can say, how ire engendereth homicide.

Chaucer. The Canterbury Tales, 7890.

196. A cormorant is a sea-bird, but Milton may have introduced it from Isaiah, xxxv. ii, where it is placed in the ruins of Bozrah.

200. Prospect. A place from which to view or gain a prospect of what was to be seen.

204. Satan perverted the tree to worst abuse by siting in it devising death, and to its meanest use, by using it to look about him.

- 211. From Auran eastward. Sc. Auran, Haron, or Charran, a city of Mesopotamia, near the Euphrates. Selencia, the capital of Western Asia, situated on the Tigris, a little south of where Bagdad now stands; it was built by Seleucus I, king of Syria, the successor of Alexander the Great. It is here called great as there were several other cities of the same name, but this on the Tigris was the most important of them all, surpassing Babylon itself in wealth and splendour.
 - 213. Long before. Long before the existence of Auran or Seleucia.
- 214. Telassar. A province on the Tigris and Euphrates, inhabited by the children of Eden. Isaiah, xxxvii, 12.

218. All. Entirely, exactly; an adv.

219. Blooming. Bearing blossoms, or producing in full bloom; here used actively. Ambrosial. See ii. 245, note.

224. Nor changed his course. It was not diverted from its course by the mountain, but passed underneath it. His for 'its.'

226. As his garden-mould. God had placed the mountain there as the earth or mould of which his garden was composed.

227. Which, through veins, &c. The current, drawn up through the mountain, ascended in the form of a fountain, and thus watered the garden; then the different streams uniting ran down the sides of the hill, and rejoined the waters of the parent river.

231. Darksome. The termination some is same, and denotes sameness, having some of the quality, or to a certain degree. Words of this formation were once more common, and those that still exist are, with a few exceptions, confined to poetry or only colloquial. Milton uses gamesome, vi. 620, and unlightsome, vii. 355.

233. Four main streams. See Genesis, ii, 10-14. Their names were Pison, Gihon, Hiddekel, and Euphrates.

234. Wandering. Wandering over; used actively.

225. Neals no account. No account is needed.

237. Suppliere. Sapphire-coloured a light blue.

Crisped. Curled, with ripples. Shakspeare too applies crisp to a river or brook:—

You nymphs called Naiads, of the windering brooks, Leave your crisp channels. The Tempest, iv. 1.

Three times did they drink, Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood; Who, then affrighted with their bloody looks, Run fearfully among the trembling reeds,

And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank.

1 Henry IV, i. 3.

240. Nectur. Cognate obj. on ran, which is used like wept, line 248. Nectur was the drink of the gods.

242. Curious knots. Flower-beds nicely arranged and cut into ornamental shapes.

Curious is derived from the Lat. curiosus, and that from cura, care; it is used both in an active and a passive sense; (a) auxious to learn, desirous to know the why and wherefore, inquisitive; (b) strange, remarkable, what causes inquiry by any peculiarity or odd appearance; and the same double meaning is retained in the noun curiosity, (à), 'the care of knowing causes,' as Hobbes defines it, inquisitiveness; ('b) something strange or uncommon, a rarity.

- (a) —Who first with curious eye
 Perused him, then with words thus uttered spake
 Paradise Regained, i. 319.
- b) No more curious chapter in the history of language could be written than one which should trace the transgressions of its most primary laws. Trench. English Past and Present, vi.
 - d)

 It was a weakness
 In me, but incident to all our sex,
 Curiosity, inquisitive, importune
 Of secrets, then, with like infirmity
 To publish them, both common femare raults,
 Samson Ayonistes, 782-786.
- 'b) At the end of the gallery stand two antique marble pillars, curiously wrought with the figures of the old Roman arms and instruments of war. After a full survey of the gallery, we were led into four or five chambers of curiosities that stand on the side of it. Addison, Remarks on Italy, Florence.

Curious has then two distinct meanings—inquisitive, and strange, odd; but in old writers we find it employed in several senses, now lxxx NOTES.

either obsolete, or merged in its modern one of strange. Thus it had the primary meaning of full of care, anxious, and incurious, the reverse, heedless, indifferent.

I marvel then why he is so curious to cause us to worship the saints that are asleep. Firth. R

I cannot see how such men can maintain them to be the bones of men, except the avonchers be as incurious of their credit as the traveller was, who, affirming that he saw bees as big as dogs, and yet their hives of our ordinary size; and being demanded what shift they made to get in, 'Let them,' said he, 'look to that.' Fuller. Worthies of England, Essex.

Methinks the mother,

As if she could renew her youth, in care,

Nay curiosity, to appear lovely,

Comes not behind her daughters. Massinger. The City Madam, i. 1.

In a chapter on the History of New Words, D'Israeli remarks:--

Montaigne created some bold expressions, many of which have not survived him; his incuriosite, so opposite to curiosity, well describes that state of negligence where we will not learn that of which we are ignorant. With us the word incurious was described by Heylin, in 1656, as an unusual word; it has been appropriately adopted by our best writers; although we still want incuriosity. Curiosities of Literature.

Richardson, however, supplies an instance of incuriosity:—

But his [Pilate's] incuriosity or indifference, when truth was offered to be laid before him as a private man, and by one, who, he knew, had the repute of exercising every spiritual power necessary to inforce it, shews him in a light much less excusable. Warburton. Works, Vol. ix. Ser. i.

The ancients were so curious in the newness of their fish, that that seemed not new enough that was not put alive into the guest's hand.

Walton. Complete Angler, iii.

Or artistic, wrought by art; in which sense it is used by Milton in the passage before us. It will be observed that the idea of care runs through all the meanings of the word.

Boon. Liberal, bountiful.

245. Unpierced. Unpenetrated by the sun.

248.Odorous gums. So again :-

-Sweet-smelling gums, and fruits, and flowers. xi, 327.

Burnished. Of a bright brown colour; der Fr. brunir, to make brown, to polish by giving a burned colour.

Amiable. Lovely.

Hesperian fables true, &c. What is related of the gardens of the Hesperides is true only of this garden. See iii. 568, note, and

> -Ladies of the Hesperides, that seemed Fairer than feigned of old, or fabled since

Of fairy damsels. Paradise Regained, ii. 357-359.

255. Irriguous. Watered with streams and lakes.

Without thorn the rose. It was an opinion held by some of the Fathers that before the fall the rose was thornless. Todd quotes:

Before man's fall the rose was born,

St. Ambrose says, without the thorn. Herrick. Noble Numbers.

262. That to the fringed bank, &c. The banks of the lake are covered with shrubs and trees, and crowned with myrtle, and the reflection of the foliage is seen in the waters below.

264. The birds their choir apply. Attend to their songs, engage in song. This is an old use of the word apply; it is equivalent to the shorter form ply, be busied about. Cf:

Go through all estates; whoever applieth his business with faith, considering that God willeth him so to do; surely the same is most beloved of God.

Latimer. Sermon Matt. xx. i. An. 1552.

He is the most diligent preacher in all the realm; he is ever at his plow; no lording nor loitering can hinder him; he is ever applying his business, you shall never find him idle I warrant you. Ib. Sermon of the Plow.

And eke a little hermitage thereby, Wherein an aged holy man did lie, That day and night said his devotion,

No other worldly business did apply. Faerie Queene, i. x. 46.

Mr. Browne, the Clarendon Press Editor, strangely mistakes the meaning; he says, "Apply, 'join to' the melody of the streams and the airs."

266. While universal Pan, &c. While all nature joining in dance with the graceful Seasons, led on perpetual Spring.

264. That fair field, &c. Enna was a town in the centre of Sicily. The story is that Proserpine was gathering flowers in one of the fertile fields near Enna, and, when in the act of plucking a narcissus, the earth opened under her, and she was carried off by Dis or Pluto, the god of the infernal regions; her mother Ceres, not knowing how she had disappeared, wandered in search of her, until at last she was told by the Sun how she had been carried off.

271. Ceres. Dative case after cost.

All that pain. So much pain and trouble.

272. That sweet grove of Daphne. Daphne was a beautiful spot situated on the banks of the Orontes, in Syria, about five miles south of Antioch. In it were a grove and a temple dedicated to Apollo, and in the grove was the Castalian spring, spoken of here, which is not to be confounded with the more celebrated one of the same name on Mount Parnassus.

275. Strive. Be compared with, or vie with it in beauty.

That Nyseian isle. The island of Nysa, in the river Triton, in Africa, in which Bacchus and his mother Amalthea were hid by Zeus or Jupiter.

276. Old Cham. Cham, or Ham, the son of Noah, and so called old. From him were descended the Egyptians and Lybians; by the Greeks he was called Ammon, and by the Romans, Jupiter or Jove.

278. Her florid son. Bacchus, or Dionysus from his being brought up at Nysa, is generally said to have been the son of Semele; but there were several legends of deities of this name, and Milton follows the story of Diodorus Siculus. He is called florid or ruddy from his being the god of wine.

280. Abassin kings. The kings of Abyssinia used to keep their children confined on the top of Mount Amara, and when a king died the rightful heir was brought from it to succeed.

lxxxii NOTES.

281. Mount Amara: Nom. to might strive, und.

The field on Enna, the grove of Daphne, the Nyseian isle, and Mount Amara were all celebrated among the ancients for their beauty and loveliness, but none of them, Milton says, could vie with the Paradise of Eden.

Though this by some, &c. Although some imagine that Mount Amara was the actual site of the garden of Eden.

282. The Ethiop line. The equinoctial line.

A whole day's journey high. Todd quotes the following:-

The hill of Amara is a daye's journey high; on the toppe whereof are thirty-four pallaces, in which the younger sonnes of the emperour are continuallie inclosed, to avoid sedition. This mountain hath but one ascent up, which is impregnablic fortified, and was destinate to this use anno 470, or thereabouts. Heylin, Microcosmus, 1627.

This Assyrian garden. The garden of Eden in Mesopotamia, which was included in Assyria.

287. New to sight. So in the Third Book:-

Here matter new to gaze the devil met undazzled. 613.

Severe. Their sanctitude or holiness was severe, that is strict; but, although it was so, they stood in the relation of children to their Creator, and were free, their law being the law of liberty.

Whence. From truth, wisdom, and sanctitude. Or, according to Professor Masson, "to make the whence refer to filial freedom is more in accordance with Milton's mode of thought; and the original pointing seems to warrant this."

She for God in him. Bentley proposes to read 'She for God and him?' But at line 634, Eve says to Adam, 'God is thy law, thou mine.'

301. Hyacinthine. The colour of the hyacinth, dark brown.

305. Tresses. Ringlets, locks of hair.

Dishevelled. Hanging loose. Der. Fr. disheveller, from the 306. Lat. capillus, the hair.

307. Which implied subjection. See 1 Corinthians, xi. 9-15.

311. By him best received, &c. It was best received by him when vielded with gentle submission.

314. Honour dishonourable. The idea is taken from S. Paul. "Those members of the body which we think to be less honourable, upon these we bestow more abundant honour." 1 Corinthians, xii. 23.

How have ye troubled, &c. The use of ye has puzzled several commentators. Newton says, "Should we not read, Sin-bred, how have you troubled, &c.; for, what is he speaking to besides shame?" And Mr. Browne (Clarendon Press) observes, "Ye; -i. e. false shame and honour."

Shame only is addressed, for honour dishonourable is to be taken in apposition with dishonest shame, as the quotation from S. Paul shows. It was very common in old poetry to apply ye to a single person, and it may have been used here to convey the idea of contempt. The fact that you is equally a plural form appears to have escaped Newton, though he recognizes that shame alone is addressed.

321. The loveliest pair that ever since, &c. That is, Lovelier than any pair that ever since were joined in love; Adam, surpassing all his descendants, and Eve more fair than any woman since born.

325. A green. A grass plot.

327. They sat them down. Them is reciprocal, and sat used as the past tense of the active verb seat.

329. To recommend. To render pleasing or inviting; the primary meaning is to hand over or entrust to another; der. Lat. re, con, and manus, the hand.

331. They fell. They commenced (to cat); so again:-

So down they sat,

And to their viands fell. v. 433, 434.

To 'fall to' would be considered a vulgar phrase now, though not so formerly; thus in Marlow:-

I shall turn her into other weeds.

And make her dainty fingers fall to work. Tamburlaine, iii. 3.

Compliant. Used in its literal sense, bending down. -

Sidelong. On their sides. See Note on iii. 39.

Recline. The Latin form for reclined.

334. Damasked. Variegated.

337. Purpose. Conversation, discourse; another form of propose, which was also used in this sense, like the French apropos. Spenser frequently has purpose for conversation:

Faire-seemly pleasaunces each to other makes,

With goodly purposes there as they sit. Faerie Queene, i. iii. 30.

'To my purpose' is a common expression in old writers for 'to return to the subject.'

338. Wanted. Were absent; the subject is purpose and smiles. So before:—

Nor did there want

Cornice or frieze, with bossy sculpture graven. i. 715, 716.

And Book ii. 341, and cf. Cowper:-

-- Nor wanted aught within, That royal residence might well befit For grandeur or for use. The Task, v. 156.

Of all chase. Beasts of all chase; that is, all beasts that are chased, or hunted, in all kinds of ways.

The lion ramped. Reared itself on its hind legs; der. Fr. 343. ramper, to climb. Cf:-

The tawny lion, pawing to get free

His hinder parts, then springs as broke from bonds,

And rampant shakes his brinded mane. vii. 464, 466.

The bold Ascalonite Fled from his lion ramp. Samson Agonistes, 138, 139.

344.

345.

Ounces. Der. Fr. once, It. lonza. Lat. lynx.
Them. Dat.; to make mirth for them, to amuse them,
Proboscis. The trunk of the elephant; der. Gk. bosco, to feed. 346.

Insimuating. Folding and unfolding itself. 347.

lxxxiv NOTES.

Gordian twine. Intricate fold. Gordius was a King of Phrygia, who having originally been a ploughman dedicated his waggon to Jupiter after his election to the throne; the pole of the waggon was so ingeniously fastened to the yoke that no one could tell where the knot began or where it ended; an ancient oracle had predicted that whoever undid the knot should rule over all Asia; when Alexander the Great arrived at the city of Gordium he cut the cord through with his sword, and applied the prophecy to himself. Hence, the phrase to 'cut the Gordian knot' means to solve a difficulty; but in the passage before us, Gordian twine means intricate twistings and folds.

Twine. Twine is from twin, twain, two; just as twist is twiced.

349. Braided train. His twisted tail.

350. Gave proof unheeded. These twistings and contortions of the serpent gave proof of his sly insinuating nature, and of the fatal deceit he was to practice on man, his movements being typical of his fraud, though not then regarded as such.

Bedward ruminating. Chewing the cud on their way to bed. The ocean-isles. The islands in the western ocean. Among 354.

the ancient poets the sun is represented as rising and setting in the sea. In the ascending scale of heaven. In the autumnal equinox the sun is in the sixth sign of the zodiac, called Libra, or the Balance; day and night are then equal, as if weighed in scales; hence the metaphor here of the scale of heaven weighing night and day, the one ascending as the other sank.

Failed speech. Speech that had failed him. 357.

Little inferior. Psalms, viii. 2. 362.

Lively. Life-like; lively was formerly used in the sense of 363. living:-

At what time God had made Adam and Eve, and set them in Paradise, he entreated them like a most loving and gentle father; for he made them lords over all lively creatures, both beasts, fish, and fowl.

Cranmer. Catechism of 1548.

That his dear father might interment have, See, the young son entered a lively grave!

Massinger. The Fatal Dowry, ii. 1.

Deliver ye. In Anglo-Saxon the nominative plural of the 368. pronoun of the second person was ye (ge), and the objective you, eów. In many old writers, however, ye is frequently found as the objective.

Those you make friends, And give your hearts to, when they once perceive The least rub in your fortunes, fall away Like water from ye, never found again But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, Pray for me! I must now forsake ye. Henry VIII, ii. 1

And sometimes nominative or objective singular.

Poins. 'Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee. 1 Henry Fourth, ii. 4.

Fal. A' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will not budge a foot. P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct. Ib.

Fal. I grant ye upon instinct.

Milton frequently has ye in the objective. See x. 562-564.

370. But for so happy, &c. For persons so happy you are badly protected to continue in that state long, and this heaven of yours is badly defended against the foe who has now entered.

381. Hell shall unfold. Isaiah, xiv. 9.

385. Thank him who puts me, &c. You may attribute it to him who has caused me to take revenge on you, who have done me no wrong, instead of on him who has injured me.

387. Who wrong me not. Todd and some others read wronged.

For him. Instead of him.

389. Melt. Commiserate, feel sorry for.

Public reason just, &c. Public reason, namely the honour gained thereby, and the empire which will be acquired by conquering this new world, compels me to perform what otherwise I should loathe to do. I have removed the comma after enlarged, found in both Newton and Todd. The Clarendon Press (Second) Edition has a full stop after enlarged, and reads compel; but, as the Text is utterly untrustworthy, it is hard to say whether it is a misprint or intentional.

393. Necessity, the tyrant's plea. This is a famous quotation. Pitt no doubt borrowed from it his

Necessity is the law of tyrants, it is the creed of slaves.

Speech on the Indian Bill, Nov. 1783.

402. A lion now he stalks. Having assumed the form of a lion he prowls about.

405. Straight. Immediately, quickly.

- 408. When Adam, &c. The construction is, When Adam thus moving speech turned him (Satan) auxious to hear what he was about to say. The passage is incorrectly punctuated in most editions; Dunster, who is followed by Todd and many others, regards Adam moving speech as the nominative absolute, and observes, "The ellipsis of the pronoun $h\epsilon$ before turned produces no inconsiderable obscurity." It is better, however, to take Adam moving speech as the subject of turned.
 - 409. Moving. Commencing, beginning; a participle.

410. Turned him all car. Changed him to be all ear. All ear. Very attentive. See Comus, 560.

411. Sole partner, δc . Amid all these joys, thou, who art my only partner, and alone art a part of myself.

412. Necds. Of necessity, necessarily; an adv.

417. At his hand. From him.

421. This easy charge. So again, line 432; and in Book V .:-

'—Obey him whose command

Single is yet so just. 551, 552.

439. Were....were. Even if it were tiresome, with you it would be pleasant.

442. To no end. To no purpose, would have no reason for being in the world.

447. Odds. Difference, inequality, advantage. Odds is scarcely sufficiently dignified for poetry now, but occurs several times in Milton,—vi. 319; 441; ix. 820; x. 374.

453. A murmuring sound, &c. The sound is poetically said to issue, to spread into a plain, and to stand unmoved.

457. Laid me down. Me, myself; reciprocal.

Just opposite. Adverbial phrase to appeared. 460.

461. A shape appeared. This episode is an imitation of the story of Narcissus, as related by Ovid. Narcissus was a beautiful youth who was inaccessible to the passion of love; the nymph Echo became enamoured of him, but finding her love was not returned she pined away with grief, till nothing was left but her voice. To punish Narcissus, Nemesis caused him to see his own image in the water and to become so enamoured of it, that he in his turn died of grief, and was metamorphosed into the flower called after him.

467. What thou seest, &c. Cf. Ovid:--

Quam cernis imaginis umbra est;

Nil habet ista sui; tecum venitque manetque;

Tecum discedet, si tu discedere possis. Metamorphoses, iii. 457.

470. Stays. Awaits.

471. He. Nom. in app. with no shadow. I will bring thee where no shadow, a real form, he whose image thou art, stays thy coming.

A platane. A plane-tree; der. Gr. πλατύς, broad.

Methought. In A. S. there were the verbs thincan, to think, and thencun, to seem; it is from the latter the impersonal methinks comes, it seems or appears to me, me being the dative.

> Or that I further in this tale pace, Methinketh it according to reason,

To tellen you all the condition

Of each of them. Canterbury Tales, Prologue, 36-39.

Then is it wisdom, as it thinketh me,

To make a virtue of necessitie. Ib. The Knight's Tale, 3043, 3044.

Him thought, he by the brook of Cherith stood,

And saw the ravens with their horny beaks

Food to Elijah bringing. Paradise Regained, ii. 266-268.

The other impersonals in English are me seems and me listeth.

486. Individual. Inseparable, that cannot be divided; so again: United, as one individual soul. v. 610.

488. My other half. He calls her his dearer half, in v. 95, and My other self, the partner of my life. x. 128.

With that. Thereupon, at the same time.

Our general mother. The mother of us all.

Unreproved. Unblameable, not to be reproved; it occurs in 493. the same sense in Il' Allegro, 38, 40; another instance is :-

The gentlewoman has been ever held

Of unreproved name. Ben Jonson. The Foa, iv. 5.

Gold. Her golden tresses, line 305. Gold and yellow are from the same root, gealowe, another form of gealid, the past part. of A. S. geælan, to brighten.

500. Impregns. Impregnates. 503. For envy. With or through envy.

Lever. A lowering look; der, A. S. hleor, the cheek.

504. Askance. Sidelong; the Gloss on the Shepherd's Calendar explains it askow, asquint.

507. Eden. The sight of their happiness, happier than Paradise itself.

509. Where neither, &c. The verb is is understood after where. Where there is neither joy nor love.

511. Pines. Causes pain; dor. A. S. pinan, to pain; now always a neuter verb; Milton has it actively again; 'pine his entrails,' xii. 77.

513. It seems. To be taken with all is not theirs.

516. Suspicious. Knowledge being forbidden is what is suspicious, or likely to cause distrust. Suspicious is now always used in a bad sense, but just as we still use suspect for foresee, imagine, so suspicious formerly meant simply 'to be supposed':—

It is suspicious that in process of time we shall loose the mystery of ling-catching, and perchance the art of taking and handling some other kind of good and sound fish.

Fuller. Worthies. Seamen.

521. Of fair foundation, &c. What a good opportunity this will afford me to cause their ruin!

528. Narrow. Close; narrow is another form of near. The same expression is used of Satan afterwards:—

Thus the orb he roamed
With narrow search and with inspection deep
Considered every creature. ix. 82-84.

530. A chance but chance. There is a chance that fortune will lead me; or, more simply, Perhaps I may accidentally meet. Milton indulges very often in the use of words with rhyming sounds:—

Which tempted our attempt, and wrought our fall. i. 642. At one slight bound high over-leaped all bound. iv. 181. Saw, undelighted, all delight. iv. 286.

Beseeching or besieging. v. 869.

That brought into this world a world of woe. ix. 11. Fruitless to me, though fruit be here to excess. ix. 648. The world crelong a world of tears must weep. Xi. 627. Famish him of breath, if not of bread. xii. 78.

539. In utmost longitude. In the extreme.

541. Aspect, always accented on the second syllable in Milton.

Alabaster. A sulphate of lime that forms a soft, transparent, marble. 542. The Eastern gate. Keightley includes this passage in his "Errors in Paradise Lost," regarding it as an "oversight of the poet's, as the gate was on the east and the sun on the west of Paradise"; and Professor Masson is also of opinion that Milton "has possibly made a slip."

As I differ from their conclusions I give the notes of both in full. Keightley:—"Here no critic seems ever to have asked himself the question how the sun who was sinking in the west could level his "rays directly against the eastern gate of Paradise. It might be said, "that it was against the inner side of the gate and that the rays came "over Paradise; but this is contrary to all analogy; for no one but

"Satan (sic) entered the garden except at the gate, and Uriel came on lxxxviii notes.

"one of those beams. Besides it is refuted by the following "passage:--

" And Uriel to his charge

"Returned on that bright beam, whose point now raised,

"Bore him slope downwards, to the sun now fallen

"Beneath the Azores. iv. 589."

Masson:—"Mr. Keightley was the first we believe to point out "(Life of Milton, p. 431) that here Milton has possibly made a slip. "The sun, setting in the west, could not level his rays direct against "the eastern gate of Paradise (its only gate, as Milton has told us, "line, 78, and facing towards the present Persia) unless it were the "inside of that gate. Milton may have meant this; but it is hardly "likely, since in what follows he seems to be describing the gate "from the outside."

The first remark that suggests itself is that the very transparency of the so called 'error,' undetected by Milton, or for nearly two hundred years by his critics, goes very strongly against the conclusion that it is a 'slip.' We are told that it was the evening rays in the same sentence that the gate is described as the existern gate; and not only does Milton say that there was only one gate, (line 178) but he never refers to it without speaking of it as the existern gate; besides the passages in this book, at the end of the Twelfth we are told

In either hand the hastening Angel caught Our lingering parents, and to the eastern gate Led them direct, and down the cliff as fast To the subjected plains, then disappeared. They looking back, all the eastern side beheld Of Paradise.

xii. 637-612.

It was, then, the eastern gate, and it was the evening sun; but, say the critics, 'the setting sun could not level his rays direct against the eastern gate;' certainly not, either inside or outside, if the gate were like an ordinary garden gate, but it was 'a rock piled up to the clouds,' and 'conspicuous far.' The gate then is put for the two 'rocky pillars,' an 'entrance high,' above the garden, upon which the rays of both rising and setting sun must fall. The 'rock of alabaster' which formed the gate was to the rest of the garden what the tower of a church is to the body of the building, and we can easily understand how the setting sun would shine on the eastern tower; and how from the tower one would look slope downwards to the sinking sun, just as the descent of Uriel is described to have happened.

548. To climb. To be climbed.

549. Gabriel. 'The word Gabriel means the Man of God.

551. Exercised heroic games. The order is, The unarmed youth of heaven exercised heroic games.

553. Armoury. Arms, weapons; here used for armour; its usual meaning is a place where armour is kept.

Helms. A poetical word for helmets, dcr. A. S. helun, to cover. 556. Swift as a shooting star. Thus the Attendant Spirit in Comus says:—

Swift as the sparkle of a glancing star I shoot from heaven. 30, 31.

557. Thwarts. Crosses, darts or flashes across. Milton has thwart as an adj. in x. 1075, and an adv. x. 703.

567. God's latest image. In iii, 151, man is called God's youngest son.

I described his way bent all on speed. Keightley says "I described the way to him who was," etc. Some editions have described. Described appears to me to mean marked, traced out; i. e. 'I traced with my eye the way he took.' Describe is used here in its literal, technical, geometrical sense, 'describe a triangle,' and in Joshna, xviii. 4. "They shall rise and go through the land and describe it, according to the inheritance of them."

571. Passions. Some read passion; the plural is correct, see line 115.

590. Point now raised. When Uriel came to the garden it was on a level beam or horizontal line from the sun, now the point of the line touching the sun had sunk with it, and so the other point was raised.

591. Slope. Obliquely; an adv.; used as an adj., line 261.

592. Whether the prime orb, &c. Whether the sun, with wonderfully swift motion, had rolled there in the space of a day, or the less rapid earth, by shorter flight to the east, had left the sun at the Azores. Milton here leaves the reader to choose which theory he pleases, the Ptolemaic or the Copernican,—whether the sun moves round the earth or the earth round the sun.

599. Sober livery. So too Shakspeare:-

Come civil night!

Thou sober-suited matron, all in black. Romeo and Juliet, iii. 2.

Livery. Dress, clothing; livery is from the Fr. livrer, to deliver, or hand over; it is now only applied to the clothes delivered to servants to be worn as a uniform. Formerly it also meant the food given to servants, and an allowance of horse-meat, hence livery-stables; and again livery of seisin, a law term, the delivery of possession of land.

What livery is, we by common use in England know well enough, namely that it is allowance of horse-meat, as they commonly use the word in stabling, as to keep horses at livery; the which word, I guess, is derived of livering or delivering forth their nightly food. So in great houses the livery is said to be served up for all night, that is their evoning's allowance for drink. And livery is also called the upper weed which a serving man weareth so called, as I suppose, for that it was delivered and taken from him at pleasure. Spenser. View of the State of Ireland.

603. Descant. In musical language a descant means a variation of theme.

608. Apparent. Evident, manifest, undoubted. To this meaning is now superadded that of seeming to be, and yet not being what the thing seems to be; so that apparent, which used only to mean real, indisputable, now more frequently means unreal; and this occasionally causes an ambiguity as to which meaning is intended. In the following passages it means clear, unmistakable:—

Love was not in their looks, either to God,

Or to each other, but apparent guilt. Paradise Lost, x. 111-112.

In these apparent calamities, (and marvel not that I say apparent calamities, for he that sees not a fire is begun, that shall burn more than we look for, unless God in His mercy quench it, is more than blind) let us not be discouraged.

John Knox, Sermon, Isaiah, xxvi. 13—16.

626. Yon. That there (in the distance); same as yonder; der. A. S. gond, part. of gongan, to go; a demonstrative pronoun. Cf. beyond, compounded of the imper. be and gond; so 'beyond that place' means, 'be passed that place,' or be that place passed.

628. Manuring. Tending; manure is another form of manauvre from the French main, the hand, and œuvre, a work. Manure formerly meant to manage, to till or dress the ground in any way, to tend, but is now restricted to fertilizing the ground with soil or manure, in which sense, however, it occurs so far back as Hall's Satires (1599). It is used in its old sense by Shakspeare:—Othello, i. 3.

So whilst a virgin doth untouched abide All unmanured, she grows old with her pride. B. Jonson, Hymenwi. Fruits of more pleasing savour, from thy seed Sown with contribution in his heart, than those Which, his own hand manuring, all the trees

Of Paradise could have produced. Paradise Lost, xi. 26-29.

636. Unarqued. Undisputed, without being opposed; qualifying what thou biddest. Richardson does not notice this meaning.

639. Conversing. See note on ii. 184.

640. Seasons. Divisions of the day. 642. Charm. Songs; see note on i. 561.

648. Her solemn bird. The nightingale; see line 602, and

-Till even, nor then the solemn nightingale

Ceased warbling, but all night tuned her soft lays. vii. 435, 436. 661. Those. Newton altered those of the original editions to these, and has been followed by nearly all editors since.

668. Kindly. Of the same nature, kind, or sort.

The kindly fruits of the earth. Litany
—Grosser sleep,

Bred of unkindly fumes, with conscious dreams Incumbered, now had left them. Paradise Lost, ix. 1050.

Kin is from cyn, a nation, from which also comes king; and kind is what is kinned or related; the adj. kind refers to such qualities as persons who are kinned should show to one another.

A little more than kin, and less than kind. Hamlet, 1, 2. In kind a father, but not in kindliness. Old Play.

669. Influence. 'Influence,' says Cotgrave, 'is a flowing in, an influent course of the planets, their virtue being influend into, or their course working on inferior creatures.'

The supposed effects produced by the heavenly bodies on the lives of men and earthly things was formerly the sole allusion contained in this word.

Some there are that do so greatly fear the conjunctions and influences of the heavenly planets and bodies above, that when they judge by their learning in astronomy, or hearsay of other men, that the signs in heaven do threaten common plagues or calamities, by and by they tremble for fear.

Cranmer, Catechism of 1848.

They taught the fixed

Their influences malignant when to shower. Paradise Lost x. 661, 662.

In all the places where the word occurs in Shakspeare, ten in number, the reference is astrological only.

Traces of this faith in the influence of the stars survive in 'disastrous,' 'ill-starred,' 'ascendancy,' and 'lord of the ascendant;' lunacy too is derived from luna, the moon.

Temper. To mix the component parts so as to produce the proper quality, to qualify, moderate.

The sun's more potent ray. In allusion to the belief in the chemical powers of the sun; see iii. 606-612, and note.

Want. Be without. 675.

682.To. To be taken with singing.

688. Divide. Mark the different watches, which they did with songs instead of trumpets, as in the Roman camp.

693. I have placed a comma after shade.

694. Laurel and myrtle. Nom. in app. with shade.

What higher grew, &c. Taller trees with firm, sweet-smelling leaves.

698. All hues. Of may be understood before all hues.

699. Flourished. Variegated, flowery; from Lat. flos, a flower.

700 Mosaic. This word is a corruption of musicum, or museum, and must not be confounded with Mosaic, the adjective of Moses. Opus musivum is a graceful and ornamental work, the work of the Muses: the Gk. mousa and mousike were not restricted to music only, but included any art or elegant accomplishment over which the Muses presided. Richardson's Dictionary supplies:-

Mosaic is a kind of painting in small pebbles, cockles, and shells of sandy colours, and of late days likewise with pieces of glass, figured at pleasure, an ornament, in truth, of much beauty, and long life, but of most use in Wotton. Elements of Architecture. pavements and floorings.

Where it is made of lesser stone, or rather morsels of them, assisted with small squares of thick glass, of which some are gilded or cemented in the stuc or plaster, it is called mosaic work, opus musivum.

Evelyn, Miscellaneous Writings, 1423.

Wrought mosaic. Formed a mosaic work of blossoms on the ground. 702. Broidered. Embroidered, wrought like needle-work; so in Comus :--

> By slow Meander's margent green, 232, 233. And in the riolet-embroidered vale.

Emblem. A device or picture inlaid in stone, from the Greek, emballein, to inlay. As emblems were painted parables intended to convey some moral truth, the word has its present meaning of a figure or type.

712. What day. On the day that.
714. Pandora. In the Greek mythology, in order to be revenged on Prometheus, who had stolen fire from heaven, the gods had a beautiful woman made by Vulcan, and each of them invested her with some gift by which she was to seduce and ruin mankind, hence she was called Pandora, or All-Gifted. Hermes brought her to Epimetheus, or After-thought, the son of Iapetus, who unwisely received her as his wife, forgetting the advice of his brother Prometheus, or xcii Notes.

Fore-thought, not to receive any gifts from the gods. Pandora induced Epimetheus to open a box she had brought with her from heaven, and out of it sprang all the evils that have since afflicted mankind.

715. And too like. Eve was like Pandora in her loveliness, and also in having ensuared mankind, and brought woe upon the world.

716. When to the unwiser. The order is, Whom the gods, to be avenged on him who had stole Jove's authentic fire, endowed with all their gifts, when she, brought by Hermes to the unwiser son of Japhet, ensuared mankind with her fair looks.

Unwiser. No comparison is intended; but the comparative is used as in Latin for 'not so wise as he ought to have been.

717. Japhet. Iapetus; it would be better to print it Japet, to avoid his being confounded with Japhet, the son of Noah.

Anthentic. Original, real.

719. Who had stole. It is stole in the original, though stolen would be better rythm and grammar. Keightley prints stolen, which he believes Milton must have dictated; who had in that case coalesces, and the accent does not fall on the unimportant had.

729. And this delicious place. Obj. on madest.
735. My gift of sleep. "He giveth his beloved sleep." Psalms, exxvii, 2; and cf. Virgil, Eneid, ii. 969.

739. Handed. Hand-in-hand; 689.

Eased the putting-off. Being eased from the putting-off.

741. Ween. Think, suppose; obsolete.

750—770. Hail, wedded Love! 'An ingenious friend' says Newton, 'has informed me that this address to wedded Love is borrowed from one of Tasso's Letters, Lib. ii. p. 150.' Todd 'begs leave' to refer to Murtola's culogy on matrimony in his Creatione del Mondo, Canto xv. Dunster thinks that the ground-work may be found in Sylvester's Du Bartas. Whatever resemblances there may be in the lines before us to the passages cited, and after all they are very slight, there can be little doubt, that the ground-work is to be found in Ben Jonson.

The golden tree of marriage began In Paradise, and bore the fruit of man; On whose sweet branches angels sat, and sung, And from whose firm root all society sprung. Love (whose strong virtue wrapt heaven's soul in earth, And made a woman glory in his birth) In marriage opens his inflamed breast, And, lest in him Nature should stifled rest, His genial fire about the world he darts, Which lips with lips combines, and hearts with hearts. Marriage Love's object is, at whose bright eyes He lights his torches, and calls them his skies. For her he wings his shoulders, and doth fly To her white bosom, as his sanctuary; In which no lustful finger can profane him, Nor any earth, with black eclipses, wane him. Humenæi.

751. Propriety. Property; formerly propriety and property were synonymous, but now propriety refers to a moral quality.

Laughter is indeed the propriety of a man, but just enough to distinguish him from his elder brother with four legs.

Dryden. Parallel of Poetry and Painting.

752. Of. Among.

756. Charities. Endearments, affections; used in the Latin sense of the word.

769. Serenate. The Italian form of serenade, music played by a lover under the window of his mistress in the evening or night. Ital. sereno, cool, calm. Starved. Perishing with cold; ii. 600, note.

775. Know to know no more. Have wisdom to be satisfied with your present knowledge.

776. Her shadowy cone. The shadow cast by the earth is in the form of a cone, which, according as the sun sinks, ascends on the vault of heaven till it reaches its height at midnight. The shadow had not reached half-way up to its highest point, that is, it was half-way between sunset and midnight, or nine o'clock.

777. This vast sublunar vault. A portion of the heavens, not reaching as far as the moon.

Vault is governed by measured, which is qualified by the adverbial phrase half-way.

782. Uzziel in Hebrew means Strength of God; Ithuriel, discovery of God; and Zephon, Searcher of secrets.

Coast. March by the side of, keep near to. Formerly coast was applied to any boundary or district, and not merely to the sea-shore.

785. Half wheeling to the shield, half to the spear. Turning to the left hand and the right, that is, south and north; it is a classical expression, and occurs in both Livy and Xenophon.

791. Secure of harm. Not fearing any danger. See Note on secure, i. 261.

792. Arrived. The nom. is the antecedent of who.

798. These to the bower direct. These went directly to the bower. These refers to Ithuriel and Zephon.

804. Or if. Assaying is und.

812. Temper. Composition, mould, fashion, make; thus Satan's shield is described as Ethereal temper, massy, large, and round. i. 285.

813. Of force. Perforce, necessarily.

815, Laid fit for the tun. The sentence would be improved if all were omitted down to war; so far as the simile is concerned it makes no difference what the powder is for.

821. Grisly. Horrid, dreadful; A. S. grislic, horrible; grizzly is another word altogether, and means grey, grey with age.

830. Not to know me, &c. Cf.-

Thou knowest me now,

If thou at all art known. Samson Agonistes, 1081, 1082.

836. Or in diminished brightness to be known. The passage is printed in all editions.

Think not, revolted Spirit, thy shape the same, Or undiminished brightness to be known, As when thou stood'st in Heaven upright and pure. xciv Notes.

Most commentators take exception to the passage, or explain it in an unsatisfactory manner. By a very slight alteration I have suggested a reading, which, if it be not what Milton dictated, appears to suit the context better than the received or proposed readings.

The following are the only explanations I have seen :-

Pearce: --Dr. Bentley judges rightly enough that the present reading is faulty; for if the words, thy shape the same, are in the ablative case put absolutely, it is necessary that undiminished should follow brightness; and accordingly the Doctor reads or brightness undiminished, which order of the words we must follow, unless it may be thought as small an alteration to read thus,

Think not, revolted Spirit, by shape the same Or undiminished brightness to be known.

But the answer to both these interpretations is that his shape was not the same, and his brightness was diminished.

Newton:—Without any alteration may we not understand shape and brightness as in the accusative case after the verb think? Think not thy shape the same, or undiminished brightness to be known now, as it was formerly in Heaven.

Keightley: -Thy brightness undiminished so as that thou shouldst be known.

Masson:--The construction is somewhat difficult; but the meaning seems to be: 'Think not thy shape the same, or thy brightness undiminished, so as to be known.'

This, however, is a very forced construction. The changing of un to in makes it perfectly simple. In reply to Satan's question, Know ye not mo? Zephon accounts for his not knowing him at first, and says, 'Do not think that your form is the same, or that you will be known in diminished splendour, as when you stood upright in Heaven, for your glory departed from you when you lost your goodness, and you now resemble your sin and the foul place you inhabit;' and further on we are told that the devil pined

His loss; but chiefly to find here observed His lustre visibly impaired. 847-850.

846. Abashed is formed from abaisit, the past tense of abase.

883. Employed. Agreeing with thee, to be taken out of thy; the bold entrance of thee employed.

886. The esteem of wise. The character of being wise.

895. To thee no reason, δc . This will not be regarded as a reason by you, who have had no experience of evil or suffering, and wilt answer that the will of him who confined us was sufficient reason.

897. Surer. More securely. Adv. to bar.

904. To judge of wise. To judge of wisdom; who could discern what was wise.

906. And now returns him. The nom. to returns is Satan.

911. However. In whatever way he can; adv. to fly.

918. All hell. All the inhabitants of hell.

927. Thy fiercest. Thy fiercest attack or onset.

931. Argue thy inexperience, &c. Prove how little you know what becomes a faithful leader,—what a faithful leader should do after many hard attempts and reverses, namely, not to hazard all his followers in unknown and dangerous ways which he had not explored himself.

945. And practised distances to cringe. With is to be supplied before practised distances; or the expression may be taken as a nom. abs. To hymn his throne with songs, and to cringe with practised distances. That is, to sing hymns around his throne, and pay homage, keeping at a respectful distance.

953. Army of Fiends, &c. In the early editions this line is wrongly pointed off with a full stop as belonging to the previous sentence; but after mentioning the rebel Angels in 952, Gabriel apostrophises them from 953 to 956, and then resumes his address to Satan.

962. Areed. Advise, counsel. Der. A. S. rædan, to counsel.

Take heed is a good read. Old Proverb. Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads, And recks not his own read. Hamlet, i. 3.

Avaint! Begone! Der. Fr. avant, before; from the same root are vaunt, vant, vantage, advance.

I drag. The present instead of the future, for the sake of 965.

emphasis.

966.

And seal thee, &c. Revelation, xx. 3.
Limitary Cherab! Limitary, guarding the limits. Cf. v. 964. 971. Ride on thy wings. The allusion is to Psalms, xviii. 10. and 974.

Ezekiel, xi. 22.

980. Ported. A military term, meaning borne across the breast slanting from right to left, with the points projecting beyond the left shoulder.

983. Careful. Full of care, auxious.

Methinks I hear the clerk,

That knolls the careful knell;

And bids me leave my woeful work

Ere Nature me compel.—Lord Vaux. The Aged Lover.

The man groans, but Death hears him not; he looks ghastly, carefully, dejectedly; he sighs, he sweats, he trembles, Death matters nothing.

John Bunyan. The Barren Figtree.

984. Lest. To be taken with doubting. The comma generally found after stands is better omitted.

986. Dilated. Expanded and extended to his full size; see Note,

i. 423.

987. Unremoved. Immoveable.

Cape. Arch, roof, top. Der. Lat. caput, the head; hence 992.

cap, cape, cop, coping.

Hung forth, &r. This, as Addison remarks, Spectator, No. 321, is a refinement on Homer who describes Jupiter, in the Twentysecond Iliad, as weighing the fates of Achilles and Hector; in like manner in Virgil, Eneil, Air. 725-728, the fates of Turnus and Æneas are weighed: -

> Jove sets the beam; in either scale he lays The champions' fate, and each exactly weighs. On this side, life and lucky chance ascends;

Loaded with death that other scale descends. Dryden, xii. 1053-1059.

xevi Notes.

Yet seen, &c. Which are still seen between Astræa, or the Virgin, and the Scorpion. Milton identifies the scales with Libra, one of the twelve signs of the Zodiac.

999. Wherein all things, &c. In which he first weighed all created things, the round world, counterpoised with air, and now ponders all events, the fate of nations and kingdoms.

1003. The sequel each, &c. He puts two weights in the scales, one to indicate the result of Sutan's retreating the other of his engaging in fight. Satan is not weighed against Gabriel, nor the result of a contest between them; Satan's conduct alone was weighed (1012); and, the consequences of a contest proving the lighter he judged flight the better course.

Bentley's proposal to read signal instead of sequel is ingenious, but incorrect.

1014. No more. And said no more.

BOOK V.

1. Rosy steps. The epithet 'rosy' is frequently applied to the morning in poetry; vi. 3, and:—

It is, methicks, a morning full of fate!

It rises slowly as her sullen car

Had all the weights of sleep and death hung at it!

She is not rosy-fingered, but swollen black. Ben Jonson. Cataline, 1.

5. Which. The antecedent of which is sleep. He was awakened only by the ripple of the waters, the fanning of the wind among the leaves, and the charm of earliest birds.

Professor Masson, however, regards it as "more natural and more consistent with the subsequent image to take temperate vapours bland as the antecedent." I think just the reverse; the image of the 'fan' dispersing the vapours suits well enough, but not the 'shrill song of birds,' which would be a most natural awakener from sleep.

6. Funing rills. Hume explains it, 'rills purling as if angry'; while Newton takes funing in its literal sense, and refers to 'steaming lake' in line 186.

16. Mild as when Zephyrus, &c. As soft as the gentle west wind breathes upon the flowers.

22 Our tended plants. Traded is the reading of the original editions. Newton, Todd, Prendeville, and the Clurendon Press Editor have tender, but do not tell us why.

25. Sweet. An adj. qualifying the noun liquid; if it were sweets, liquid would be an adj.

30. For I this night, 3c. For this night I have dreamed—if it was a dream and not some frightful vision—not of you, as I generally do, nor of the labours of the past and coming day, but of trouble and transgression.

The Clarendon Press Edition makes nonsense of the passage by omitting to place a comma after not, and retaining one after wont, line 33; and Professor Masson misprints a semicolon after design.

The night-warbling bird. The nightingale was a favourite bird of Milton's; see Paradise Lost, iii. 37; iv. 602; 648; 771; vii. 435; viii. 518; Il Penseroso, 61; Comus, 234; Sonnet, i. In all which it is feminine, but here it is masculine, as the words are addressed to Eve.

56. Distilled ambrosia. Emitted a fragrant smell.

Or envy, or what reserve, &c. Is it envy that prohibits you from being tasted, or what restraint is it that withholds you?

Vouched. Confirmed, followed up by. 66.

But he, &c. But he, overjoyed, spake thus. 67.

79. Sometimes in the air. Be is understood. Be among the gods; sometimes be in the air.

Wondering at my flight. As I was wondering at my change, I suddenly missed my guide, and thought 1 sank down and fell asleep.

93. Her night. The events of the night.

Fancy. Here Milton regards Fancy as a higher faculty than 102. Imagination; and Addison, as he says himself, Spectator No. 411, used the words 'promiscuously.' They had not then undergone the desynonymizing process that has since assigned to each its own do-Each has now, however, a distinct and definite acceptation, main. and they cannot well be used indifferently.

To Wordsworth is due the credit of bringing about this. 'Before he wrote, says Abp. Trench. 'it was, I suppose, obscurely felt by most that in 'imagination' there was more of the earnest, in 'fancy' of the play, of the spirit, that the first was a loftier faculty and gift than the second; yet for all this the words were continually, and not without loss, confounded.' Study of Words, Lect. VI.

DeQuincey writes: - Long before Mr. Wordsworth had unveiled the great philosophic distinction between the power of fancy and imagination, the two words had begun to diverge from each other, the first being used to express a faculty somewhat capricious and exempted from law, the other to express a faculty more self-determined. Letters to a Young Man, Letter v.

Represent. Present, give representations of. 105.

Off in her absence, &c. In the absence of Reason, Fancy often imitates her.

The whole of this passage appears to be based on Burton's account of the Inward Senses, in his Anatomy of the Soul.

The time of sleep, this faculty (phantasie) is free, and many times conceives strange, stupend, absurd shapes, as in sick men we commonly observe. His organ is the middle cell of the brain; his objects, all the species communicated to him by the common sense, by comparison of which, he feigns infinite other unto himself.

Sleep is a rest or binding of the outward senses and of the common sense for the preservation of body and soul, as Scaliger defines it; for, when the common sense resteth, the outward senses rest also. The phantasic alone is free, and his commander reason; as appears by those imaginary dreams which are of divers kinds, natural, divine, demoniacal.

Anatomy of Melancholy, i. 1, 2, 7.

117. God. Angel, as in line 60.

So unapproved. Provided that it is unapproved of. Professor Masson considers it more natural to take so, as meaning 'in this manner, referring to Eve's dream. Todd wrongly reads unreproved.

xeviii notes.

123. Cheerful. The primary meaning of cheer was the face, the countenance:—

In swoot of thi cheer thou schalt eat thi breed, till thou turn ayen in to the erthe of which thou art taken.

Wickliff. Genesis, iii. 19. Tr.

Amid the theatre shrouded in a tent,

There came out men, ghastful of their cheers.

Lydgate. Troy Book. xi. F. 6.

All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer.

Midsummer Night's Dream, iii. 2.

A moment changed that lady's cheer, Gushed to her eye the unbidden tear.

-Lay of the Last Minstrel, iv. 25.

Cheer soon came to be applied to the outward appearance generally, as betokened by the expression of the face; to whatever has the effect of gladdening the countenance,—good news, entertainment:

With many a word of kindly cheer.—Lay of the Last Minstrel, iv. 35.

Many a friend to friend made known

Partook of social cheer. Ib. vi. 6.

127. Bosomed. Embosomed, treasured up and concealed in the bosom.

131. Either. Each (of the two).

134. As the gracious signs of sweet remorse. The tears that Eve let fall were the signs of her sorrow occasioned by the dream, and of her fear lest she might have offended.

137. From under shady arborous roof, &c. The order is, But first they lowly bowed adoring, as soon as they came forth from under the shady roof of the bower to the light of day and the sun just risen.

In the original editions there was a comma, a misprint probably, after roof; but the correct punctuation shows that from under is to be taken with were come forth in the next line.

147. Wanted they. They were not without various style or holy raptures. Want, now generally to be in need of, formerly meant simply to be without, not to have, like the Lat. carere, or deese:—

So shalt thou be compelled to complain, and to cry out at last, with Phoroneus, the lawyer, How happy had I been, if I had wanted a wife! Si uxor decsset, nihil mihi ad summam felicitatem defuisset.

Anatomy of Melancholy, iii. 2, 6, 4.

150. Numerous. Melodious; numbers is verse or song.

-Thoughts that voluntary move

Harmonious numbers. iii. 38. With cautious freedom if the numbers flow,

Not wildly high, nor pitifully low. Crabbe. The Library, 674, 675.

153. Their hymn of praise (153—208) is a paraphrase of Pealm exhiii. and the Song of the Three Children.

156. Unspeakable. That cannot be described. Christ is spoken of as God's unspeakable gift.' 2 Cor. ix. 15.

159. Beyond thought. Greater than we can even think of or imagine. Power obj. on declare.

Day without night. See line 645, and Revelation, xxi. 25. 166. Fairest of stars. Venus, which if it is west of the sun rises and sets before him, and is called Lucifer, or the Morning Star; and when it is east of the sun rises and sets after him, and is called Hesperus (Vesper) or the Evening Star.

Professor Masson quotes Donne, who in his Progress of the Soul, in describing the passage of the disembodied soul through space, says:-

> Venus retards her not, to enquire how she Can, being one star, Hesper and Vesper be.

Prime. The early morning.

Moon, that now meetest, &c. The order is, Moon, that now meetest, now fliest the orient sun, together with the fixed stars, resound his praise.

176. Fixed in their orb, &c. The fixed stars are fixed relatively to each other, while their orb or sphere moves.

177. Five other wandering fires. The planets besides Venus, already mentioned, known in Milton's time, were Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn; either he forgot that he had already mentioned Venus, or includes her again. Adam does not address the earth as one of the 'wandering fires;' he is, however, subsequently told that the earth is possibly a planet, viii. 128.

The word planet means a wanderer.

In mystic dance. The allusion is to the Pythagorean doctrine of the music of the spheres. Compare the words of Lorenzo, in what Hallam considers to be the most sublime passage in Shakspeare: -

> There's not the smallest orb which thou beholdest But in his motion like an angel sings, Still choiring to the young-eyed cherubim. Merchant of Venice, v. 1.

That in quaternion, &c. That run a perpetual circle of fourfold change. It was formerly thought that there were but four elements, fire, air, earth, and water, which were constantly changing into one another, and that out of them all things that exist were formed and nourished.

195. Warble melodious murmurs. The same expressions almost as in an ode of Randolph's:-

The thrush and blackbird lend their throats, To Anthony Stafford. Warbling melodious notes.

202. Witness. Bear witness, testimony (against me). See i. 57. If the night, &c. If the night has gathered or concealed any 206.

evil thing, disperse it.

214 Fampered. Luxuriant; Lat. pampinus, a vine-leaf.

They led the vine, &c. The metaphor is in the first instance taken from Horace, Epode, ii. 9. Milton may have had Jo'nnson's lines in his mind too:-

> If, by fortune, she [the vine] be married well To the elm her husband, many husbandmen And many ouths inhabit by her. Hymenæi c NOTES.

216. Wed. The A. S. wed is a pledge, a surety.

When I was thrall to make me free,
My Love from heaven to earth him led,
My love alone have wolde he,
Therefor he laid his life in wed.

Therefor he laid his life in red.

The Sweetness of Jesus. Lambeth Mss. 852.

221. Raphael, the sociable spirit, &c. The story is told in the Book of Tobit. See the Note on iv. 170. Raphael means the Health of God.
235. Happiness, &c. Happiness in the power of him left free to will.
238. Too secure. Too confident, so heedless, off his guard. See

Note on i. 261.

249. Ardours. Seraphim, flaming spirits.

255. On golden hinges turning. So again in vii. 205 - 208.

257. From hence, &c. The construction is. There being no cloud or star, not even the smallest, interposed to intercept his view, he sees the earth, not unlike the other heavenly bodies, and the garden of God crowned with cedars higher than the highest hills.

In Newton's, Todd's, and the Clarendon Press Editions there is no comma after small, and all of them take it as referring to the earth, "much diminished by distance." Keightley, though quoted by Mr.

Browne as his authority, points as in the Text.

261. The glass of Galileo. The telescope, in which Galileo made such great improvements that he may be regarded as its inventor. This is the second time for him to mention Galileo, and the third reference to the 'optic glass,' (i. 288, and iii. 590); in Paradise Required, iv. 42, he speaks of the telescope by that name.

Less assured. Less certain of what it observes than the angel.

Assured agrees with glass.

265. Delos or Samos, &c. When Delos or Samos first appears in view from among the Cyclades. The Cyclades. A group of islands in the Ægean sea, so called because they encircle Delos. Gk. kuklos, a circle. Samos was not one of the Cyclades, but Milton may have used Cyclades as a general term for a group of islands.

266. A cloudy spot. The simile is, The earth appears like a small spot to Raphael, just as the regions in the moon to one observing it through a telescope, or like the speck on the horizon seen by a pilot on the look out, when land first appears in sight.

Keightley and Professor Masson have a comma after kens, making it govern Delos, to which spot is thus put in apposition. I think it preferable to take Delos.....appearing a nom. abs., and spot governed by kens.

271. To all the fowls he seems, &c. As Raphael approached the earth and came within sight of the birds, he appeared first like a phœnix.

272. A phænix. The phænix was a fabulous bird of Arabia; it is described as of the size of an eagle, with gold-coloured feathers on its neck, a white tail, and the rest of its body purple. Only one existed at the same time, hence it is here called 'that sole bird.' According to Herodotus, it lives for five hundred years, and at the end of that period builds a funeral pile of myrrh and precious herbs in which it burns itself, but from its ashes it revives in all the freshness of youth, and carries off its reliques to Egypt, where it enshrines them in the temple of the Sun.

Gazed by all. On whom all the other birds gaze with wonderment. 274. Egyptian Thebes. He calls it Egyptian to distinguish it from Thebes in Bosotia. This Thebes was the capital of Upper Egypt; Herodotus places the Sun's temple in Heliopolis in Lower Egypt.

276. To his proper shape returns. At a distance he seemed like a phoenix, but, when he reached the earth, his real form was apparent.

a seraph winged.

277. Six wings he wore, &c. See Isaiah vi. 2.

279. Mantling. Spreading, extending like a mantle; see vii. 439, Note.

280. Regal ornament. The colour of royal robes, imperial purple. 283. Dipped in heaven. Possessing the bright tints of the rainbow, and the dazzling hues of clouds variegated with the rays of the sun.

284. Feathered mail. A covering or coat of armour of feathers. In a coat of mail the plates of metal overlap one another, like the feathers of a bird.

Mail is derived from the Fr. maille, the mesh of a net.

285. Sky-tinctured grain. Of a purple colour like that of the clouds. In Old English the word skewe, sky, meant a cloud: -

And let a certeine winde go That blewe so hidously and hie, That it ne left not a skie In all the welkin long and brode.

Chaucer. House of Fame, iii. 501-511. R.

Grain. The purple colour produced by the coccus insect, from the ovaria of which several scarlet dyes were obtained. This coccum, from its resemblance to a berry or seed, was called in Latin gramum; and such quantities of it were produced in Spain that, according to some, the territory of Gramada was so called from the abundance of gramum exported from it. Thus the word grain was applied by early English writers to a crimson or purple dye.

How the red roses flush up in her cheeks, And the pure snow with goodly vernil stain

Like crimson dyed in grain. Spenser. Epithalmion, 226-228. The habit of cardinals is all scarlet; whereof Theodore Beza tartly enough thus expresses himself :--

Crede meæ nullo saturantur murice vestes,

Divite nec cocco pallia tincta mihi.

My clothes in purple liquor ne'er were stewed, Nor garments, trust me, richly dyed in grain.

Fuller. Worthies of England. Cardinals.

The word grain occurs four times in Milton in the sense of a colour or dye:—

(a) Come, pensive Nun, devout and pure,
 Sober, steadfast, and demure,
 All in a robe of darkest grain,
 Flowing with majestic train. Il Penseroso. 31-34.

cii notes.

Here 'darkest grain' means deep violet tinted purple.

(b.) It is for homely features to keep home,
They had their name thence; coarse complexions
And cheeks of sorry grain will serve to ply
The sampler, and to tease the housewife's wool;
What need a vermeil-tinctured lip for that,
Love-darting eyes, or tresses like the morn?

Comus, 748-754.

Colour is again what is expressed by grain and not the texture, the cheek of sorry or pale tint is contrasted with the lip tinctured with vermilion.

(c) In the passage before us all the imagery is lit up with the most gorgeous colours painted by the poet's imagination; each pair of wings was of a brilliant hue:—

—The pair that clad Each shoulder broad came mantling o'er his breast With regal ornament; the middle pair Girt like a starry zone his waist, and round Skirted his loins and thighs with downy gold, And colours dipped in heaven; the third his feet Shadowed from either heel with feathered mail, Sky-tinctured grain.

(d) And lastly in Paradise Lost, xi.:-

—The Archangel soon drew nigh,
Not in his shape celestial, but as man
Clad to meet man; over his lucid arms
A military vest of purple flowed
Livelier than Melibæan, or the grain
Of Sarra, worn by kings and heroes old
In times of truce; Iris had dipped the woof.—238-244.

The Archangel's robe was of a brighter purple than that of Melibera or Tyre. Melibera was a city on the coast of Thessaly celebrated for a shell-fish from which one of the finest dyes was procured. Sarra was another name for Tyre, long famous for its purple. Sar was the Phœnician name of the fish from the blood of which the dye was made.

Maia's son. Hermes, or Mercury, the herald and messenger of the gods. Maia was the daughter of Atlas, and one of the Pleiades.

297. Enormous bliss. Objective on pouring forth. In the original editions there is a semicolon after art; the comma was substituted in Fenton's Edition of 1727. Newton makes sweet and wild qualify bliss; are they not rather to be regarded as adjectives to Nature?

299. As in the door he sat, &c. What follows is based on the narrative in Genesis, xviii.

305. And not disrelish thirst, $\mathcal{S}c$. Not to spoil the relish of sweet draughts from juicy fruit.

306. Between. Taken alternately with the food. 310. Seems. The subject is it or he understood.

311. Behest. Command, order. A. S. haitan, to name, to order; hence hight, behest, and hest; the latter occurs in Shakspeare:—

O my father, I have broke your hest to say so. The Tempest, iii. 1. 322. Store. Supply, quantity; store of was formerly commonly used for abundance of, much, or many. Cf. ix. 1078, and

Surely it shows not want of breeding, but store of spirit, when a man will not be put out of his way for every swelling emptiness that meets him therein.

Fuller. Worthies. Cambridgeshire.

With store of ladies, whose bright eyes Rain influence. L'Allegro, 122.

323. All seasons, &c. A small quantity is sufficient to lay by where abundance at all times hangs on the tree ready for gathering; except such fruits as become more firm and nourishing by being stored, or dry up unnecessary moisture.

326. Brake. By brake is meant bushes, such as produce gooseberries, blackberries, &c.

333. What choice, &c. To choose that choice which was most delicate, and that order which would be so arranged as not mix tastes which would not come well together.

Choice to choose. Milton often uses the cognate obj. For the use of choice for 'things chosen,' cf. 'pluck choice,' line 327.

335. Inelegant. Adverbial to mix. Kindliest. 'Most natural.'

337. Bestirs. The subject is she understood.

339. Middle shore. The countries of the Mediterranean Sea.

340. Pontus. A small kingdom on the Black Sea.

The Punic coast. The territory of Carthage.

Where Alcinous reigned. Alcinous was the king of the Phæaces who inhabited the island of Scheria in the Mediterranean; his gardens are celebrated by Homer in the Odyssey. This island, 'where Alcinous reigned,' was supposed by the ancients to be the same as Corcyra, the modern Corfu.

342. Rined. In the first three Editions the lines stand:

Fruit of all kindes, in coate,

Rough, or smooth rin'd, or bearded husk, or shell.

Rined, or rin'd, is an adjectival participle formed by Milton from rine, another form of rind, just as 'coated' would come from 'coat.' If we retain the comma after coat, the construction will be, 'Fruit of all kinds—in coat, whether rough or smooth rined coat.' Omitting the comma, 'Fruit of all kinds, rough-coated, or smooth-rined.' In the former case, rined qualifies coat, and in the latter it qualifies fruit, which is more in accordance with usage. Newton's reading is:—'in coat rough or smooth rin'd,' but he has no note. Todd reads:—'in coat rough or smooth rind,' without any note to tell us why he has made the change. Keightley has:—'in coat rough or smooth rined,' and says "We have here retained the orthography of the original editions (rin'd). It should properly be rinded, as a verb to rine could not be formed from rind. Spenser, however, whom the poet probably had in his mind, used the subst. rine (still used in some parts of England):—

But now the grey moss marred his rine.

Shepherd's Calendar, Feb. iii.

Editors in general give the subst. rind." Mr. Browne (Clarendon Press) observes:—"Keightley retains the rin'd of the original editions.

NOTES. CIV

It should be rinded. Spenser (Shepherd's Calendar, Feb. iii) uses rine (subst). But as I can nowhere find rine as a verb, I have printed rind as a substantive, 'in rough coat or (in) smooth rind.' Cf. 'fruits of golden rind' ("Various Readings, Comus, first speech)." If we can form rinded from rind, surely rine will give us rined, and there is no verb to rind any more than to rine. But it is one great strength of the English Language.—that property of making a verb of any word. There is no difficulty whatever in the use of rined; we have the noun rine, and it was as simple to say 'in coat rough, or smooth rined.' as to say 'in coat rough, or smooth skinned,' and the alliteration of 'in rind rough or smooth skinned, is avoided by the reading which is Milton's own.

345. Inoffensive. Not intoxicating.

Must. New wine; Lat. mustum. Meaths. Mead, a light, sweet wine.

347. Tempers. Produces by mixing the proper ingredients. Nor these, &c. Nor does she want suitable vessels to hold them.

349.Unfumed, Unfumed may be taken either with odours or shrub. Unfamed odours means scents not produced by burning; shrub unfamed, a shrub having a natural scent, and not burnt to exhale an odour.

355. Retinue. Accented here on the second syllable.

356. Besineared with gold. Gaudily decked with gold lace and gilt trappings.

Sets them all agape. Makes them open their mouths with astonishment. Gape, der. A. S. ge-yppan, to open.

361. Other place none. No other place.

To want. To be absent from. 365.

371. Virtue. One of the degrees among the angels; see line 601. and the quotation from Wyclif, in Note on virtue, 320.

Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers, 601.

Therefore. For the purpose of sitting and resting with you. 372.

374. Though Spirits. As may invite even Spirits of Heaven.

377. At will. At my disposal.

378. Pomona. The Roman goddess of fruit-trees. Lat. pomum, an apple.

382. Mount Ida. A range of mountains in Mysia, in Asia Minor.

384. Virtue-proof. Proof by her virtue against temptation, strong in virtue.

385.Altered her cheek. Caused her to blush.

386. The holy salutation, &c. Luke i. 28.
388. The fairest yoddess, &c. Venus. The allusion is to the contest in beauty between Venus, Minerva, and Juno; the 'Judgment of Paris,' who was appointed to act as judge, was in favour of Venus.

393. Her. For 'its;' viz., the table's.

Autumn. The fruits of Autumn. Piled. Past participle, 394. agreeing with autumn, and governed by had.

Though Spring, &c. They had all the fruits we have in autumn; but it was spring-time too with them, -all one season.

405. Man in part spiritual. Man who is partly a spiritual being. 406. Of. By; to be taken with found.

415. Of elements, &c. The grosser elements feed the purer; the earth feeds the sea.

All this from 415 to 425, which is an expansion of what he has said before of the elements 'running perpetual circle,' is false philosophy and incorrect.

419. Those spots. The spots we see in the moon are caused by the inequalities in its surface, mountains and valleys, and not as explained here according to the philosophy of Milton's day.

Sups with the ocean. According to the ancient poetic notion that the sun rose and set in the sea; thus in iv. 354, and Spenser: -

The sun that measures heaven all day long

At night doth bait his steeds the ocean waves among.

Faerie Queene, I, i. 32.

4:30. Pearly grain. Manua. Exodus, xvi. 14, 31; Psalms, cv. 40.

433. Nice. Fastidious, scrupulous.

434. Nor seemingly the Angel. The angel did not merely appear.

to eat, but in reality partook of the viands before him.

The common gloss, &c. The usual explanation of theological commentators, who interpret those passages, where angels are described in the Bible as eating, to mean that, as Josephus says, they 'only make a show of eating.'

Gloss. Exposition, interpretation. Gloss comes from the A. S. gleasan, which is connected with the Gr. glossa, the tongue. It means, as here, an explanation, a note: --

I have no text of it, as 1 suppose.

But I shall find it in a manner glose. The Canterbury Tales, 7502.

Hence glossary. Then it comes to mean bright glossy appearance: -

Groves, fields, and meadows, are at any season of the year pleasant to look upon, but never so much as in the opening of the spring, when they are all new and fresh, and have their first gloss upon them .-- Spectator, No. 412.

Then to glose is to talk speciously, to flatter:

What though on me they pour their spite,

I may not use the gloser's trade,

I cannot say the crow is white,

But needs must call a spade a spade. H. Gifford, 1580.

And so to speak deceitfully: -

Man will hearken to his glozing lies. Paradise Lost, iii, 93.

Nor wonder, &c. And do not wonder that Spirits can partake of earthly food and turn corporeal to incorporeal, when the alchemist believes he can turn common metals to pure gold.

440. Empiric. Making experiments; der. Gr. πείρα, a trial.

Alchemist. One who practised alchemy, the science of converting baser metals to gold. Gr. xevew, to pour.

443. As from the mine. As pure and perfect as from the gold mine.

445. Crowned. Filled to the brim.
447. The Sons of God. Angels. See Genesis, vi. 2.

Mind. Thought, inclination, intention. 452.

453. Occasion. Opportunity. Lat. occasio: i. 178, Note. evi Notes.

455. Of their being &c. Of the state and existence of those who dwell in Heaven.

458. Divine effulgence. The brightness of the Deity. Effulgence is explanatory of and in apposition with forms. Forms and power are the subject of exceeded.

460. Empyreal. Heavenly; in ii. 771, he calls Heaven 'the empy-rean,' from its fiery splendour and brightness. Gr. πῦρ, fire.

467. What compare. What comparison is there between these earthly fruits and the high feasts of Heaven?

472. Such. Good. Created, a participle agreeing with all.

481. Consummate. Perfect.

488. Discursive or intuitive. Discursive knowledge, or discourse, is such as is derived mediately, discurrendo, by running about right and left, as it were, and drawing conclusions after reasoning them out. Intuitive knowledge, or intuition, is such as is apprehended immediately. Thus the old metaphysicians divided all acts of the mind into discursive and intuitive, or the reasoning faculty and intuition. This explains the Shakesperian expression 'discourse of reason' and the passages that follow are explanatory of the usage:—

O Heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of reason, Would have mourned longer. Hamlet, i. 2. Sure, he, that made us with so large discourse Looking before and after, gave us not That capability and godlike reason To fast in us unused.

Ib. iv. 4.

Is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause
Can qualify the same?
Troilus, ii. 2.

Philosophy we are warned to take heed of; not that philosophy which is true and sound knowledge attained by natural discourse of reason, but that philosophy which to bolster heresy and error, &c. Hooker, Ecclesiastical Polity, iii.

In vain it were to speak anything of God, but that by reason men are able somewhat to judge of what they hear, and by discourse to discern how consonant it is to truth. Ib.

The glory of God is that divine excellency whereby he is eminent above all things, his omnipotent, infinite, eternal, being, which Angels and glorified Saints do intuitively behold, we on earth apprehend principally by faith, in part also by the experience of those effects, the greatness whereof exceedeth the powers and habilities of all creatures both in heaven and earth. Ib. v.

The act of the mind which connects propositions, and deduceth conclusions from them, the schools call discourse, and we shall not miscall it if we name it reason.

Glanville.

Understanding is a power of the soul, by which we perceive, know, remember, and judge, as well singulars as universals, having certain innate notices or beginnings of arts, a reflecting action, by which it judgeth of his own doings and examines them. The object first moving the understanding is some sensible thing; after, by discoursing, the mind finds out the corporeal substance, and from thence the spiritual. His actions, some say, are apprehension, composition, division, discoursing, reasoning, memory, (which some include in invention), and judgment. Anatomy of Melancholy, 1.1.2.10.

As the intuitive knowledge is more perfect than that which insinuates itself into the soul gradually by discourse, so more beautiful the prospect of that building, which is all visible at one view, than what discovers itself to the sight by parcels and degrees.—Fuller. Worthies of England. Canterbury.

489. The latter most is ours. See the third quotation from Hooker.

498. Tract of time. Long course of time.

504. Your fill. May be taken as an adverbial phrase to enjoy.

509. The scale of nature. Scale is here used in the sense of a ladder; one first matter is the centre, from which we approach gradually to the circumference that bounds human knowledge.

518. Apprehend. Grasp with the understanding.

538. On other surety none. On no other surety.

548. Nor knew I not. And I did know that I was created free to act and will.

553. Though what thou tellest, δr . Though what you tell me of the fall of some in Heaven causes some doubt in my mind, but greater desire to hear the full account of it, if you consent.

554. Move. Move is in the subjunctive depending on though, with the sentence as its subject.

557. Worthy of sacred silence. A classical phrase, meaning deserving of such attention and silence as was preserved during religious ceremonies.

Utrumque sacro digna silentio

Mirantur Umbræ dicere. Horace. Odes, ii. 13, 29.

579. Upon her centre poised. Cf. in the description of the creation:—Earth self-balanced on her centre hung. vii. 242.

589. Gonfalons. Gonfalon is an Italian word, the Pope's standard; properly a banner suspended at the end of a lance.

592. Tissues. Cloth embroidered with gold and silver.

Emblazed. Illuminated, emblazoned, worked in bright characters on the tissues. From the A. S. blesan, to blow, come blaze, to rush forth like a blast and so to spread, to publish; hence emblaze and blazon, terms in heraldry.

599. Brightness had made invisible. The same thought occurs before :-

Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear. iii. 380.

620. Yonder starry sphere. In allusion to the music of the spheres. 624. Then most, δc. Most regular when they appear to us to be least so.

633. Rubied. The colour of rubies; in Samson Agonistes, 543, wine is called the 'dancing ruby.'

636-641. In the First Edition instead of these six lines there were only the following three:—

They eat, they drink, and with reflection sweet Are filled, before the all-bounteous King, who showered With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy.

647. The unsleeping eyes of God. Psalms, cxxi. 4; Iliad, ii. 1.

648. Wider far, &c. Far more extensive than all the round world would be if it were spread out into a plain,—'from one entire globose stretched into longitude.'

cviii NOTES.

652. By living streams. On the banks of living streams; the streams of the 'river of water of life,' on either side of which was there the 'tree of life.' Rev. vii. 17; xxii. 1, 2.

653. Pavilions and tabernacles are in apposition with camp.

Reared is a participle qualifying parilions.

657. Alternate. Sing in turns.

Remove, decamp; neuter; see vi. 7; 413. 669. Dislodge. 671. His next subordinate. Beclzebub. See i. 79-81.

673. What sleep, &c. How can you sleep when you remember the decree which was issued so lately as yesterday?

678. Both waking, &c. When wake we have always been united in thought and action, how can you by sleeping pursue a different course from mine?

680. New laws, &c. New laws enacted by our sovereign may excite new feelings and designs in us his subjects. For the meaning of minds, cf. line 452.

689. The quarters of the North. The expression is borrowed from Iswiah, xiv. 12; see line 766, note. In Shakspeare (1 Henry VI. v. 3.) Satan, or some chief Fiend, is spoken of as 'monarch of the North.'

696. He together calls. I. e. 'The associate' calls.

697. Several. Separately; each by himself, one by one; an adverb.

Der. old Fr. severer, Lat. separare.

702. Casts between ambiguous words. Introduces insidious words in his speech to try their fidelity and corrupt them. The expression: is taken from Virgil:--

Hino spargere roces In vulgum ambiguas. Eneid, ii, 98.

The morning star. Lucifer, or the morning star, is one of the titles of Satan. Isaiah, xiv. 12, 13.

709. The starry flock. The stars; 'the train of night,' i. 66.
710. Drew after him. The subject of drew is counterance. This line occurs in ii. 692; the expression is taken from Rev. xii. 3. 4.

The golden lamps, &c. "There were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God." Rev. iv. 5.

Smiling. In keeping with the irony of the speech that follows. Said. The 'Eternal Eye,' which, as an attribute of God, is put for the Omniscient Himself, is the subject of said.

719-732. The whole of this speech is ironical; as in Psalms, ii. 4.

He that sitteth in the Heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in derision.

729. Let us advise. Let us take counsel together.

730. All employ in our defence, &c. Ironical; as if He stood in need of aid.

734. Lightning divine. The 'brightness of God's glory'—Hebrews, i. 3.—'Divine effulgence.' Lightning, a noun, in apposition with Son. As it is spelt light ning in the original edition, Keightley and Masson make it a participle, and divine, an adverb; lightning divine, would then mean flashing in a divine manner. But I have seen the word where it is unmistakeably a noun printed light'ning in books of the day.

Ineffable. Inexpressible, 'unspeakable,' line 156.

739. Illustrates. Renders more illustrious.

In event. In the result, in the issue.

744. An host. This is the original reading-on where we should now say u. Impearls. Makes dazzling and bright like pearls; as in the opening lines of this Book, Aurora is said to have sowed the earth with orient pearl.

750. In their triple degrees. The degrees, according to the pseudo-Dionysius, were Angels, Archangels, Principalities; Powers, Virtues, Dominations; Thrones, Cherubim, Seraphim.

To which. Compared with which. See note on to, iv. 78.

To all the earth, &c. Compared with the extent of the earth and sea, if they were to be stretched out into a plain.

Globose. Globe, sphere; an adj. used as a substantive. Which. Subject of called, line 766.

762.

766. The mountain of the congregation. The reference is to Isaiah, xiv. 12, 13; ---

How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! How art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations! For thou hast said in thine heart,

I will ascend into Heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God. I will sit upon the Mount of the Congregation, in the sides of the North.

768. To consult. Inf. on assembled.

770. Thither to come. Who was to come there; referring to the King. 773. If these magnific titles, &c. I may still call you so, unless these titles are only empty names. See x. 460.

Yet unpaid. Never before paid. 782.

The supple knee. The same expression occurs in Shakspeare: 788. And had the tribute of the supple knee. Richard II, i. 4.

If ye know yourselves, &c. If ye recollect that you are the sons of Heaven.

790. Possessed before by none. Possessed refers to Heaven; meaning they were the aboriginal inhabitants.

Jur not. The metaphor is borrowed from music, and appears to be taken from a passage in Shakspeare:—

Government, through high, and low, and lower, Put into parts, doth keep in one consent, Congreeing in a full and natural close, Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth Heaven divide

The state of man in divers functions. Henry V, i. 2.

Who without law err not. We have no laws to guide or limit our actions, still we do not transgress.

799. Much less for this, &c. Newton says, 'This passage seems to me as inexplicable almost as any in Milton;' accordingly he does not attempt to explain it.

Bentley would meet the difficulty in his usual 'slashing' style; instead of for this he proposes forethink, 'or, if we have no regard to the likeness of the letters, aspire, presume, or other such word.

10

CX NOTES.

Warburton:- 'Who can introduce law and edict on us, when we can conduct our actions rightly without law? much less for this introduction of law and edict claim the right of dominion.

Bp. Pearce:—'Much less can he for this, namely our being 'less in power and splendour,' (1.796) assume to be our Lord.'

Richardson considers this to refer contemptuously to the Messiah, and the construction to be, Much less can he introduce a law and edict for this (new King) to be our Lord and receive adoration

Keightley's note is:—' Much less, sc. reason is there. This, οδτος;

probably in contempt, this new person, this upstart.'

Prendeville suggests 'an ellipsis of the substantive verb is (which is very common in Milton), and that 'this' is spoken contemptuously. 'Much less is it just or expedient for this new functionary to exercise dominion over us to the abuse and disparagement of our inherent right to govern.'

Professor Masson:—"The most feasible supposition scems to be Warburton's--which is that for this refers to introduce law and edict, and that the meaning is, 'Who can introduce law and edict on us, &c?' much less can any one assume, towards this end, or because of so doing, to be our Lord," &c.
800. To the chase, Which would result in the lowering of our titles. To is not to be taken with look.

805. Abdiel. Abdiel is the Hebrew for Servant of God.

809. Blusphemous. The old pronunciation was, as here and elsewhere in Milton, blasphèmous.

820. And equal, &c. To let an equal reign over his equals.

821. With unsucceeded power. Without a successor.

830. More near. More closely.

To great it thee unjust, &c. Supposing we do admit that it is 831. unjust that an equal should reign as a monarch over his equals, yet do you count yourself, or even all the angelic host, the equal of him who is the Begotten of the Father and by whom all things were created? To grant it thee. I am willing to grant you; let it be admitted.

832. Reign. Should reign; subjunctive.

841. Nor by his reign obscured. And we do not lose any of our dignity by his becoming king.

844. All honour, &c. All honour done him reverts to us, as it is paid to one of our own number.

846. These and appease did not rhyme originally, as appease was formerly pronounced appaise.
861. Futal course. The course of fate. When fate had perfected its course, and come round in due time.

862. The birth. Nominative in apposition with we, the subject (understood) of know, 860.

The sound of waters deep. The simile is from the Scriptures:

I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the God Omnipotent reigneth. Rev. xix. 6.

890. Lest the wrath, &c. Understand but before lest. I do not fly from these wicked tents, which are doomed to destruction, for any advice you have given, but lest the ruin which will speedily overtake you make no distinction, and the innocent be swallowed up with the guilty. Bentley proposes:-

The wicked tents devote, but lest the wrath.

Devoted. Given over to, doomed; a Latin use of the word.

Devota morti pectora. Horace, Odes, iv. 14. A world devote to universal wrack.

907. Proud towers. Either the towers of Lucifer's palace, or applied to the troops of angels.

BOOK VI.

Champaign. Plain; it occurs as an adjective, iv. 134; and as a noun, Paradise Regained, iii. 257; but is rarely used now. Fr.

Champaigne, It. campagna, Lat. campus.

3. Rosy hand. Rosy is a common poetical epithet for the morning; she advances 'with rosy steps,' v. 1; and 'rosy progress,' xi. 175; she is the rosy-fingered morning of Spenser (Faerie Queene, I. ii. 7.) and Ben Jonson (Cataline, i), and the 'ροδοδάκτυλος 'Hás of Homer.
8. Grateful vicissitude. 'Change delectable:' v. 628, 629. Vicissi-tude is now generally used for a change for the worse, a reverse of fortune.

10. Obsequious. Following; this is the primary signification, hence it comes to mean attentive, observant, as in line 783:-

-They heard his voice, and went obsequious.

But now both these meanings have gone out, and it is used in an unfavourable sense, being applied to one who is unnecessarily or servilely attentive; officious has gone through a similar degenerating process; see viii. 99, Note.

19. In procinct. In readiness; the metaphor is borrowed from the eastern custom of girding up the dress before engaging in work of any kind; the Latin phrase for an army ready for battle is sture in procinctu.

- 23. That one, &c. The construction is, That out of so many fallen myriads, one, even one, returned not lost. The allusion is to Luke, xv. 7, 10.
- 29. Servant of God, &c. His name, Abdiel, means Servant of God. The expressions are taken from Matthew, xxv. 21, and 2 Timothy, iv. 7.

34. Far worse to bear, &c. Thyer quotes from the Faerie Queene:— Evil deeds may better than bad words be bore. - iv. iv. 4.

39. To return.....and to subdue. Substantival clause in apposition with conquest.

41. Who reason, &c. Who refuse to have reason as their law.

Of celestial Angels prince. The battle of the Angels described in this book is founded on Revelation, xxi. 7-9, where we are told 'Michael and his angels fought against the Dragon.'

45. Prowess. Might; prow is used as a noun by Chaucer, in the sense of advantage; as an adj. by Spenser; and Milton has the superlative prowest, Paradise Regained, iii. 342. Fr. prowesse, probably from probus, approved.

55. Fiery Chaos. Tartarus, or hell, was situated in Chaos, ii. 1002.
56. Clouds began, &c. As on Mount Sinai, Exodus, xix. 16—19.

58. Reluctant. Struggling to break forth; not, as Newton explains it, 'slow and unwilling to break forth.' Reluctant is used here in its strict classical sense, as in iv. 311, and again, x. 515.

60. Gan. We only retain the reduplicated form begin of the A. S. gin; gan is frequently used by Chaucer and Spenser in the sense of did; and generally, as here, without the sign of the infinitive with the verb that follows.

63. Moved on, &c. Compare the march of the Rebel Angels, i. 560.

65. Breathed, Inspired.

69. Obvious. Standing in the way; used in its literal sense, and again in xi. 374.

72. Passive. Yielding; 'buxom air,' v. 270.75. To receive their names. Genesis, ii. 19.

78. Terrene. Terrene globe, the Earth; adjectives are frequently used as substantives by Milton; cf. v. 753; vi. 303; 381.

79. To the north. See v. 689, Note.

81. Battailous. Drawn up in array; see line 216, Note.

82. Bristled with upright beams. The region was thick with numberless spears, which, shining, stood up like bristles; cf. 'horrent arms, ii. 513. Horrere is used in the same metaphorical sense of arms.

Mille rapit densos acie, atque horrentibus hastis. Eneid, x. 178.

84. Various with boastful argument. Diversified with emblazonry and devices. Virgil uses argumentum for the device on the shield of Turnus:—

At levem elypeum sublatis cornibus Io Auro insignibat, jam setis obsita jam bos, Argumentum ingens. Eneid, vii. 791.

90. Fond. Foolish; see iii. 470, Note.

93. Hosting. Array, a body of troops mustered together; it occurs in Hollinshed, and in Spenser's View of Ireland.

99. High in the midst, &c. Compare ii. 1-5; 509-511.

101. Idol. 'Resemblance,' line 114; it is in app. with Apostate.
105. Interval. Space; dreadful, because so narrow. Interval is now generally applied to a space of time.

107. The cloudy van. The front of the army, resembling a cloud for multitude and extent.

115. Realty. Loyalty, fidelity to the king and constitution. Chaucer has realtic for royalty.

118. To sight unconquerable. Apparently invincible.

- 129. Prevention. Anticipation, coming before; see iii. 231, Note. 130. Securely. Fearlessly, confidently; see Note on secure.
- 130. Securely. Fearlessly, confidently; see Note on secure.
 134. Abandoned at the terror. Left unguarded through fear of 146. Erroneous to dissent. To dissent erroneously.

147. My sect. The party to which I belong. Thyer thinks that there is a sneer in the use of the word sect at the Royalists of the time; Milton being a Sectary as Dissenters were then called.

148. How few, &c. How may be taken either with few, or with the whole clause. 'How small a number,' or 'How a small number.'

Know. Be in the right.

150. Ill for thee, &c. It is unfortunate for you that you have returned now, at the time I have longed for to take my revenge, to receive the first onset of my enraged power.

154. Since first that tongue, &c. Since you were the first that dared to speak against us.

156. A third part of the gods. See ii. 692, and v. 710.

161. Plume. Token of victory; from a plume or feather being worn as an ornament in the helmet; cf. 'plumed victory,' and iv. 989.

To 'plume oneself' is to pride oneself.

That they success may show destruction. Success is here used in its old sense of result, or issue; and the passage means, That the result of your daring, and your want of success, may show to the rest the destruction that awaits them if they follow you. See Note on success. Warburton takes success in its modern sense, and along with 'to win some plume, and paraphrases the passage:—That thy success may show thy fellows the road to destruction, or the way to destroy their enemies. But, 'ambitious to win from me some plume,' is to be regarded as parenthetical, and the 'well' in line 159 is contrasted with the 'ill for thee' in line 150. It is ill for thee that you have placed yourself in the brunt of the fight, and before your fellows, but well for them that they may take warning by your destruction.

162. This pause between. Supply 'is granted.'163. Unanswered lest thou boast. Lest you should boast of being unanswered, or lest being unanswered you should boast of it.

All one. The same; it is rather an inelegant expression in modern English, but occurs in old writers, Spenser has:

Both day and night is unto them all one. Hymn of Heavenly Love, 71.

Ministering Spirits. The expression, which is used scornfully by Satan, occurs in Hebrows, i. 14.

Servility with freedom, &c. Slaves to contend with the free. 170. Both their deeds. The deeds of both; of 'servility,' or the good Angels, 'of freedom,' or the Rebel Angels.

173. Remote. Not merely distant, but removed, remotus. 174. Depravest. To deprave formerly meant to depreciate.

Lewdly. Wickedly; see iv. 193, Note. 182.

183. Reign thou in Hell, &c. A retort on Satan's boast:—

Better to reign in Hell than serve in Heaven, i. 263.

189. Saying. Contracted to a monosyllable in scanning

199. Thrones. Angels, powers; see i. 360; ii. 310.

202. Bid sound. Bade to sound; bid is often found followed by the infinitive without the sign to; see ii. 514.

210. Madding. Mad, furious; it occurs in Gray's Elegy.

exiv NOTES.

The dismal hiss . . . flew. The hiss of darts is poetical and animated for 'the hissing darts;' cf :-

A murmuring sound

Of waters issued from a cave, and spread Into a liquid plain. iv. 453.

Fiery cope. The 'sulphurous canopy' of Campbell, Hohen-215. linden.

216. Both buttles main. In old writers battles is applied to an army or the main division of it.

We'll charge the main battalia, fall you

Upon the van; preserve your troops entire

To force the rear. Massinger. The Bashful Lover, ii. 3.

Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames

Each battle sees the other's umbered face. Henry V, iv. Chorus.

223. How much more of power. How much more able to raise dreadful combustion. Of power. Powerful, able.
229. Though numbered such. Though so numerous.

Each divided legion. Each separate legion of which the army 230. was composed.

231. In strength each armed hand, &c. Each armed warrior appeared equal in strength to a legion.

1 would propose band for hand; he first speaks of a 'divided legion,' and lastly of a single warrior, here in the intermediate place we should expect a troop or band to be mentioned, and not an individual as it comes afterwards.

232. Led in fight, &c. Though each single warrior was led in fight, yet he appeared to be a commander in chief.

236. The ridges. The files of soldiers; the metaphor is taken from a ploughed field; cf. 'the files of war,' 339.

239. As only in his arm, &c. As if the victory depended on himself alone. The moment of Victory. The turning of the scale for victory. Moment is used in the literal sense of momentum (movimentum, i. c., quod movet), the weight that turns the balance; cf. the metaphor even scale, 345; and see x. 45.

251. Two-handed. So large that it required the two hands to wield

it. Sway. Movement.

255. His ample shield. See the description of the shield, i. 284.

259.

Arch-foe. Nominative absolute.

Unknown. Agreeing with evil. 262.

282. With wind of airy threats. With threats as empty as the wind and of as little force as the air.

284. Hast thou turned, &c.? Hast thou succeeded in putting to flight even the least of these that thou shouldst therefore hope it to be easier to engage with me?

288. Err not. Do not be so mistaken as to suppose.

However. In any case or state, Dwell depends on win 292. or turn.

turn. 296. Addressed. Prepared, got ready; from the Fr. dresser, Lat. dirigere, to make right; hence dress, to prepare, and redress, to make right again. Address is often used in this sense in Shakspeare :---

> Once methought, It lifted up its head, and did address Itself to motion. Hamlet, i. 2.

He is addressed; press near and second him. Julius Casar, iii. 1.

297. Who can relate, &c.? Supply fight after relate and liken. Who can relate this fight, or to what things on earth can one liken it sufficiently conspicuous to raise human imagination?

With the tongue of angels. Similarly in Virgil, Encid, vi. 625. 302. Stood they or moved. Whether they stood or moved.

305. Two broad suns, &c. Their shields blazed opposite to one another like two broad suns.

306. Expectation stood. There is a similar personification in Shakspeare :--

Now stood Expectation in the air. Henry V. ii. Chorus.

310. To set forth great things by small. See ii. 921, Note.

311. Concord. Nominative absolute. There was such commotion as if, the order of Nature being broken, and war arisen among the heavenly bodies, two planets were to engage in combat.

313. Aspect malign and opposition are astrological terms. If the distance between two planets was a half part of the twelve signs, they were said to be in opposition or opposite, and supposed to strive and overcome one another, and to be of evil aspect or influence. Thus in Book x.:-

> To the blanc moon Her office they prescribed; to the other five Their planetary motions and trine, and opposite Of noxious efficacy. 656-659.

316. Together both, &c. Together they both, with an almost almighty arm, raised and ready to descend, aimed a single stroke that might end the encounter, and not require to be repeated as not of sufficient force to do so at once.

319. Nor odds appeared, &c. There seemed no difference in the force of the stroke aimed by each, or their quickness in warding off the blow.

321. The armoury of God. The expression, which occurs also in

vii. 200, is taken from Jeremiah, 1. 25.

325. Descending. To be taken, probably, as qualifying sword rather than with it. For sheer, completely, and shared, cut, see Note on sheer.

329. Griding. Cutting; gird and gride are used by Spenser and Shakspeare for to cut or pierce.

Discontinuous is used in allusion to the old definition of a wound, that which separates the continuity of the parts, 'Vulnus est solutio continui.

As in the natural body a wound, or solution of continuity, is worse than a corrupt humour, so in the spiritual. Bacon. Essay. On Unity of Religion.

333. As. A pronoun; cognate obj. on bleed.

335. Was run by Angels. Angels ran; an imitation of the Latin idiom where a neuter verb is used impersonally with a passive form, cursum est.' The nom. to was run is it, und. Cf. vii. 503; x. 229.

348. Texture. Composition, frame-work.

349. No more than can the fluid air. The same simile occurs in Shakspeare:—

It [the ghost] is, as the air, invulnerable, And our vain blows malicious mockery. Hamlet, i. 1.

As easy mayest thou the intrenchant air

With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed. Macbeth, v. 7.

350. All heart, &r. Newton compares this with Pliny's account of God:—

Quisquis est Deus, si modo est alius, et quacunque in parte, totus est sensus, totus visus, totus auditus, totus animæ, totus animi, totus sui.

Nat. Hist. i. 7.

353. As likes them. As it pleases them; likes is used impersonally again, line 717, and Paradise Regained, ii. 382.

362. Uncouth pain, &c. The wound which the Old Dragon received from the Redcross Knight had a similar effect:—

The piercing steel there wrought a wound full wide, That with the uncouth smart the monster loudly cried.

Faerie Queene, I. xi. 20.

363. Foe. Objective on vanquished. Bentley and Thyer consider that the sense and metre would be improved by supplying each, and reading Raphael as a dissyllable:—

Uriel, and Raphael, each his vaunting foe.

364. Diamond. Adamant; see lines 110 and 255. Milton uses diamond in the same sense in the Apology for Smeetymnuus:—

Zeal, whose substance is ethereal, arming in complete diamond, ascends his fiery chariot drawn with two blazing meteors. Sect. i.

365. Adramelech. One of the gods of Sepharvaim, 2 Kings, xviii. 31. Heb. adra, mighty, and melech, king.

Asmodai. Asmodeus, the evil Spirit mentioned in Tobit; see iv.

168, Note. Asmodai is the rabbinical mode of writing it.

371. Ariel. Heb., the Lion of God. Arioch, Fierce Lion. Both names occur in Scripture: Ezra, viii. 16; Isaiah, xxix. 1, and Genesis, xiv. 1.

The violence of Ramiel. The violent Ramiel; similarly 'the might of Gabriel, 355, for the mighty Gabriel; Upton quotes:-

Talibus exarsit dictis violentia Turni. Eneid, xi. 376.

374. Eternize is a rare word, but is found in Sidney, Spenser, and Shakspeare.

376. The other sort. Sort is left absolutely; 'as for the other sort, let them dwell nameless.'

381. Just. For justice; a noun.

391. What stood. Those who did not 'lie overturned.'

402. Not to have sinned, not to have disobeyed. The infinitives (with the negatives) may be construed as noms. in apposition with innocence, or to yave understood.

404. Unobnoxious. Not liable or exposed to; in the literal sense of the Lat. obnoxius.

407. Inducing. Bringing on; used in the literal sense of inducere, as in Horace:

Jam nox inducere terris

Umbras, et cœlo diffundere signa parabat.—Sat. 1. v. 9.

410. The foughten field. An expression found in Shakspeare, Beaumont and Fletcher, Drayton, and other old poets:—

As, in this glorious and well foughten field, We kept together in our chivalry. Henry V, iv. 6.

411. Prevalent. Victorious, superior.

413. Cherubic waving fires. Cherubin like flames of fire; fires is in app. with watches. Cherubin are the 'night-watches,' iv. 780; ix. 68.

415. Dislodged. Removed; not now used as an intrans.

421. Pretence. Claim; see ii. 825, Note.

Affect. Seek after, desire. Affect was formerly used in a good sense, cognate with affection, affectionate; now it means to assume or pretend to, or is used burlesquely, and is akin to affectation and affected.

429. Of future may be taken either with fallible or independently; either 'We may deem him fallible as regards the future,' or, 'For the future we may deem him fallible.'

432. Known as soon contemued. When known, as soon contemn-

ed; despised as soon as discovered.

- 440. Worse. A rare form of the old verb worsen; worst is in use instead of worse, which is exactly analogical with the familiar verb better.
- 447. Nieroch. A god of the Assyrians; 2 Kings, xix. 37, Isaiah, xxxvi. 38.

455. Unpained, impassive. Those who are not liable to pain or suffering. Cf. the use of passive, line 72.

458. Remiss. Here used in the literal sense, which is stronger than the modern which simply means careless, negligent.

464. Patience. Endurance.

465. Offend. Damage, injure; lit. to knock against; cf. i. 187. Inoffensive is also used in its derivative sense, x. 305.

467. To me. In my opinion.

472. Which of us, §c. Which is the nom. to is understood. 'Which of us is there who beholds the bright surface of this ethereous mould. &c., whose eyes surveys these things so superficially as not to mind, &c.' Newton says: "The construction of this sentence is, 'Which of us who beholds, &c., so superficially surveys these things,' &c.; but, as the nominative case which of us is mentioned so many lines before the verb surveys, he throws in another nominative case, whose eye."

477. Mind. Observe.

482. Nativity. Birth-place; generally birth, or birth-day. The deep. The place where they grow 'deep under ground.'

484. Which. Refers to materials, 478.

495. Cheer. Spirits; lit., face, countenance; see v. 123, Note.

514. Concocted and adusted. Baked and dried. Adusted, also written adust, xii. 635, is from the past part. of aduro, to burn up.

519. Incentive. Calculated to set fire to.

520. Pernicious with one touch to fire. Causing ruin as soon as ignited, (and applied to the engines). Newton says that pernicious is probably not to be understood here in the common acceptation, but in the sense of quick, speedy. If so it is quite a different word, and comes from Lat pernic, from pernitor, to struggle; while pernicious, destructive, is from pernecare, to kill utterly. Johnson adopts Newton's explanation, and cites this passage as an instance—the only one, however,—of pernicious, meaning quick, swift, adding that 'us it produces an ambiguity, it ought not to be imitated.' But besides it being unnecessary to twist this sense out of it, Milton uses pernicious in four other places, and always with the idea of destructive, ruinous. Todd reads 'pernicious with one touch of fire;' which is more simple and shows the construction better than the ordinary reading; but he has no note on the point.

521. Under conscious night. That is to say, night alone was witness of the deed. Hume quotes :-

Quorum nox conscia sola est. Ovid. Met. xiii. 15.

524. Orient. Rising; see iv. 634, Note

525. To arms the matin trumpet sung. Thyer quotes Tasso's expression, which is literally the same:—

Quando a cantar la mattutina bromba Comincia à l'arme.—Gier. Lib. xi. 19.

526. The trumpet sung. Newton quotes Virgil's:—
Et tuba commissos medio canit aggere ludos. Eneid, v. 113.

528. The dawning hills. Dawning, a transferred epithet, poetically applied to the hills, as the dawn first appears rising over them.

529. Coast. Region, quarter; see i. 340, Note.

532. Him. The foe. It is the usage of modern English to regard the words 'foe' and 'enemy,' as plural if nouns of multitude; formerly, as here, a sing. pronoun was used; and by some recent writers, apparently in imitation of the French, the enemy is spoken of as 'he.'

535. Zophiel is the Hebrew for Spy of God. The name does not occur in Scripture, and was probably formed by Milton.

539. A cloud. A common simile to express multitude; line 107. 541. Sad. Serious, commonly used by Spenser, Shakspeare, and other early writers, in this sense and without any idea of sorrow; der. A. S. sed, settled, past part of sectan.

542. Adamantine cout. An expression from Horace:

Quis Martem tunica tectum adamantina Digne scripserit? Odes, i. vi. 541. Let each, &c. An imitation of Agamemnon's speech:

'Ευ μέν τις δορυ θηξάσθω, εὐ δ' ἀσπίδα θέσθω, &c. Iliad, ii. 382.

544. Borne even or high. Held either straight out from the body, or high to protect the head. (Masson).

546. Barbed. A barbed arrow was one set with barbs or jags at the point.

548. Quit of all impediment. Free from any encumbrances such as the artillery of the enemy. Lat. impedimenta, the baggage, &c., of an army.

553. Training, &c. Drawing the train of artillery.

558-567. This speech, as also those of Satan and Belial (609-619, 620-627), are spoken in a scoffing and jesting strain; the expressions 'composure,' 'open breast,' 'overture,' 'perverse,' 'discharge,' 'in charge,' 'touch and propound,' are each capable of a double meaning, and are used ironically.

563. That I doubt. I doubt that they will like our overture, and that they will not turn back. Witness Heaven. Let Heaven bear witness.

571. Discovered. Disclosed; discover was formerly used in the sense of show, disclose, give information to others about what was unknown to them; now, to find out generally.

575. Had not refers to their being like to pillars. The construction (570-577) is:—The dividing of the ranks disclosed to us a new and strange sight—a triple mounted row of pillars, of brass, iron, or stone, for they seemed most like pillars but that their open mouths gaped on us.

576. Stony. Pearce says there were stone cannon to be seen, in his day, at Delft in Holland.

576. Mould. Substance; see i. 355.

578. Hollow truce. Raphael himself puns on the word hollow.

580. Stood. The subject is reed. It is also possible to construe it: A Scraph stood at each, and stood waving in his hand a reed. Bentley proposes held, as stood occurs three times in close succession.

581. Amused. Musing, considering; cf. 623. The idea of diversion or pleasure is only of modern introduction into the words amuse, and amusement.

582. Sudden all, at once, their reeds put forth. In most editions there are no commas in this sentence, leaving the construction of all doubtful. Major says they is understood as nom. to put forth; and Bohn points off all at once, making all an adv., but then the phrase would mean 'suddenly,' which is already expressed. All should be taken as the subject of put forth; and at once means 'together.'

584. Nicest. Most accurate and exact.

586. Whose roar embowelled, &c. The roar of the engines, that is, the roaring engines, disembowelled the air with a terrific noise.

Embowel has the two opposite meanings of to tear out the bowels, eviscerate or disembowel; and to sink into the bowels, bury or fill. The former, I hold, is the meaning here, though the same thing is said in the next line.

NOTES. CXX

Newton explains embowelled as filled, and says, The most natural and obvious construction is, Whose roar embowelled, or filled, the air with outrageous noise.

Pearce construes the passage: The roar of which (engines), embowelled with outrageous noise, tore the air and all her entrails: According to this construction embowelled would agree with roar, or rather with 'them' taken out of whose, and the comma after air should be removed.

Both Newton and Pearce further regard the outrageous noise as the instrument, and take with along with the verb; whereas with outrageous noise is simply an adverbial phrase qualifying embowelled.

589. Their. Though the roar of the engines is in reality the subject of the sentence and agrees with disgorging, he proceeds as if engines were the subject; the property of an agent often being put for the agent itself; cf. 'a sound of water issued, and spread,' iv. 453 --455.

598. Dissipation. Dispersion, rout. Dissipation was formerly used in the sense of a scattering, now it has a reference only to looseness of morals, or needless squandering.

605. Tire. Row, line 650; now written tier. In Bailey's Dictionary, Ed. 1747, tier does not occur. but tire is explained, A row of great guns placed along the ship's side, either upon deck or below.

619. *Result. The under-meaning is rebound, flying off. 625. Understand. Shakspeare puns on the word in like manner:

Speed. I understand thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff Two Gentlemen, ii. 5. understands me.

Upright. These two speeches Addison regards as "the most exceptionable in the whole poem, as being nothing else but a string of puns, and those too very indifferent ones." Spectator, No. 279.

635.Rage found them arms. Virgil's expression, 'Furor arma ministrat.' Aneid, i. 150.

640. Earth hath this variety from Heaven, &c. This variety of hill and dale Earth has derived from Heaven. From goes with hath and not with variety.

Be sure. A common expression with Milton, introduced in a speech to keep up the attention; cf. i. 158; ii. 323; iv. 841.

650. Engines' triple row. Major and the Clarendon Press read engines triple-row, making engines the obj.

656. Their armour helped their harm. Spenser has the same play upon the words;---

> Whom fierie steele now burnt, that erst him armed. That erst him goodly armed, now most of all him harmed. Faerie Queene, i. xì. 27.

Advised. Advisedly, designedly; used adverbially. 674.

Invisible. According to Newton, invisible is a neuter adjective, used for a substantive; and the sense is: In whose face what is invisible, namely, what by Deity I am, is beheld visibly. The allusion is to Romans, i. 20, and Colossians, i. 15; see also iii. 385.

Upton says it should be th' Invisible.

683. What by decree I do. What may be the nom. either to is, or is beheld, understood.

The main. The universe, all nature, the 'sum of things,' 673. My almighty arms gird on, &c. The words are taken from the 713. Psalms :-

Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O most Mighty, with thy glory and thy majesty; and in thy Majesty ride prosperously. xiv. 8, 4.

He all his father, &c. See iii. 139; vii. 196; and x. 66.

732. Thou shalt be all in all, &c. See 1 Corinthians, xv. 24, 28; John, xvii. 21, 23; Psalms, exxxix. 21.

737. These rebelled. These who have rebelled, in a state of rebellion; a stronger term than rebellious.

- 739. Chains of darkness. 'God spared not the angels that sinned. but cast them down to hell, and delivered them to chains of darkness.' 2 Peter. ii. 4; and see Jude, 6. The undying worm. See Isaiah, lxvi. 24; Mark, ix. 44.
- 748. The third sacred morn. The third day of the war. Milton makes the war in Heaven last for three days, and describes the Messiah as vanquishing the rebel angels on the third, in allusion to his resurrection on the third day, and thus a second time overcoming the powers of Hell.

Forth rushed, &c. The description of the 'chariot of pater... nal deity' and the 'four cherubic shapes,' is taken from the vision of Ezekiel, Chaps. i. and x.

752. Instinct. Moved, animated; ii. 937.

758. Whereon a sapphire throne. Some editions read, Where, on a samphire throne, and have a comma after arch.

759. Colours of the showery arch. "As the appearance of the bow that is in the clouds in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about." Ezekiel, i. 28.

Urim. Urim and Thummim were the names given to the twelve precious stones, or as others suppose to a brilliant diamond, in Aaron's Breastplate, Exodus, xxviii. 30. Urim means light, brilliant.

Bickering. Darting. To bicker is to skirmish, to quarrel. 766.

771. Sublime. Aloft, borne on high; ii. 521.

Reduced. Lead back; the literal meaning, as in ii. 913. 775.

Last. Finally, at last; Tickell and Bentley read lost. 797.

Vengeance is his. Deuteronomy, xxxii. 35; Romans, xii, 19. 808. Number to this day's work, &c. It not to multitude nor 809. armies that the work to be accomplished this day has been given:

826. Bent. A participle.

As a herd of goals. The allusion is to Matthew, xxv. 33. The wasteful deep. Wasteful, desolate, Lat. vastus. 836.

862.

They viewed the vast unmeasurable abyss Outrageous as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild.-xii. 212.

868. Ruining. Thyer says the word ruining is the Italian word ruinando anglicised; it denotes anything falling down with ruin and precipitation.

875. Yuwning. Compare the expression in Isaiah, "Hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure." v. 14.

cxxii Notes.

879. Returning whence it rolled. Returning agrees with Heaven; here we have both the fem. and neut. pronouns her and it, referring to the same noun; see the Note on its, i. 254.

892. Measuring things in Heaven, &c. Compare the opening words of Raphael's narrative, v. 572, 573.

900. He. Grammatically it ought to be him in apposition with Satan; but he is more emphatic, as if he said, That one, I mean.

909. Thy weaker. Eve; the wife is called the 'weaker vessel,' 1 Peter, iii. 7.

BOOK VII.

1. Urania means Heavenly, and the invocation is to the same Heavenly Muse whose inspiration he asks in the beginning of the Poem, i. 6.

3. Above the Olympian hill, &c. At the outset he says his song would 'soar above the Aonian Mount,' or inspiration of the heathen Muses; and here he asserts that its flight has been higher than that of any Greek or Roman poet, inspired from their Olympian heaven or soaring on the winged Pegasus.

4. Pegasèan wing. Pegasus was the winged horse which sprang from the blood of Medusa, when her head was struck off by Perseus. He was called Pegasus because he made his appearance near the sources (πήγαι) of Oceanus. While drinking at the fountain of Pirene, on the Acrocorinthus, he was caught by Bellerophon with a golden bridle, which Athena had given the hero. With the assistance of Pegasus, Bellerophon conquered the Chimaera, but endeavouring to ascend to heaven upon his winged horse, he fell down upon the earth. Pegasus, however, continued his flight to heaven, where he dwelt among the stars. Pegasus was also regarded as the horse of the Muses, and in this connexion is more celebrated in modern times than in antiquity; for with the ancients he had no connexion with the Muses except producing with his foot the inspiring fountain Hippocrene. Smith's Classical Dictionary.

5. Not the name, &c. There was a Urania, (the Muse of Astro-

5. Not the name, &c. There was a Urania, (the Muse of Astronomy) among the Nine Muses, but it is not she whom he invokes but that divine inspiration whose voice he sought and followed.

7. Old Olympus. Old, celebrated of old; like 'old Euphrates,' i. 420, 'Mount Casius old,' ii. 593. Cold has been suggested for old, as already used with Olympus, in i. 516.

8. Before the hills. Taken from what Wisdom says in Proverbs:

I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, and before the earth. When there were no depths was I brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water.

Before the mountains were settled and before the hills was I brought тогед

Then was I by him as one brought up with him, and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him. viii. 28, 25, 30.

In the Latin translation it is playing instead of rejoicing, which is the word followed by Milton here and where he quotes the passage in Tetrachordon:

God himself conceals not his own recreations before the world was built. I was, saith the Eternal Wisdom, daily his delight, playing always before him.

- 9. Converse. Live with, associate with; see Note on converse, ii. 184.
- 13. Presumed. Sc. to go; and cf. a similar ellipsis after presumed, viii. 356.
- 15. Thy tempering. Tempered or adapted to my earthly constitution, by thee. Thee tempering, as Bentley observes, would be a better reading.

17. This flying steed. His Muse, carrying on the reference in line

4. Unreined. Without a bridle or rein; agreeing with steed.

19. The Alcian field. It was here, in Lycia, that Bellerophon wandered, after he fell from the winged horse. 'Alfior restor means the land of wandering; and erroneous in the next line is used in its literal sense of 'wandering.' The story of Bellerophon is told in the Iliad, vi.

But when at last, distracted in his mind, Forsook by Heaven, forsaking human kind, Wide o'er the Aleian field he chose to stray A long, forlorn, uncomfortable way. Pope.

21. Half, &c. Newton's note is: "I understand this with Mr. Richardson, that 'tis half of the episode, not of the whole work that is here meant; for, when the poem was divided into but ten books, that edition had this passage at the beginning of the seventh as now. The episode has two principal parts, the war in Heaven, and the new creation; the one was sung, but the other remained unsung, and he is now entering upon it."

This Book, however, even when seven of ten, is the commencement of the second half; half the poem as well as half the episode remain unsung. Newton overlooked the fact that the last four Books of the First Edition were not shorter than the present last six.

Bound. Newton takes bound as a participle; Keightley as a noun, with the article omitted, and in apposition with the next line.

22. The visible diurnal sphere. The Astronomical Universe of Man, which appears to revolve round the earth daily in twenty-four hours. (Masson.)

23. Rapt. Snatched up. Lat. raptus.

25. Though fallen on evil days. In allusion to his condition after the Restoration, and the fall of the Republican party, of which he had been so prominent a member,—blind, friendless, and exposed to danger.

30. Govern. Direct; literally, from gubernare.

٩.

32. Drive far off, &c. The reference is to the dissolute court of Charles II. The expression barbarous dissonance occurs in Comus, 550.

34. The Thracian bard. Orpheus. He was a mythical personage, and was regarded by the Greeks as the greatest of the poets before the time of Homer. His mother was Calliope, the Muse of epic poetry, and he was instructed by Apollo in the use of the lyre; so enchanting were the strains of his music that the very woods and rocks followed the sound, and the winds and rivers stopped in their course to listen to him.

CXXIV NOTES.

Unde vocalem temere insecutæ
Orphea silvæ
Arte materna rapidos morantem
Fluminum lapsus celeresque ventos,
Blandum et auritas fidibus canoris
Ducere quercus.—Horace, Odes, I. xii.

He dwelt in Thrace, and married Eurydice; on his wife's death he. followed her to Hades, and by the charms of his music won her back from the god of the lower regions, on condition of his not looking behind at her until they reached the upper world; but having turned round to see that Eurydice was with him, just as they were about to cross the fatal bounds, he beheld her caught back again to Hades. His grief at her loss led him to treat with contempt the Thracian women, who in revenge tore him to pieces under the excitement of their Bacchanalian orgies. After his death the Muses collected the fragments of his body, and buried them at the foot of Mount Olympus. His head was thrown into the Hebrus, down which it rolled into the sea, and was borne across to Lesbos; his lyre was also said to have been carried to Lesbos; but both traditions are simply poetical expressions of the fact that Lesbos was the great seat of the music of the lyre. In Book iii. 17, Milton refers to the 'Orphean lyre,' and he alludes to his fate, again, in Lycidas:—

What could the Muse herself that Orpheus bore,
The Muse herself, for her enchanting son,
Whom universal Nature did lament,
When, by the rout that made the hideous roar,
His gory visage down the stream was sent,
Down the swift Hebrus to the Lesbian shore? 58—63.

39. Thou. The Heavenly Muse, Urania.

41. Affable. 'Sociable,' as he is called, v. 221.

47. If they transgress to be taken with lest the like befall.

50. Wandering. Passing from one object to another, not fixed to one; agreeing with appetite.

Consorted. Consort was an active verb in Milton's time, and the form consorted is found in Spenser and Donne. (Masson.)

For all that pleasing is to living care
Was there consorted in one harmony. Facric Queene, ii. 456.
Leave me; and in this standing wooden chest
Consorted with these few books, let me lie. Satire, i. 70.

52. Muse. Musing, reflection.

57. Redounded as a flood. 'To redound means to flow back upon as a flood (re and unda); and he again translates the metaphor, 'with a fierce reflux redound,' x, 739.

59. Repealed. Recalled; the technical word for revoking a law;

Fr. rappeler.

63. Conspicuous. Which might be seen, which he saw before him,

- 66. Drouth. This is Milton's word—spelling and pronunciation, but is improperly altered by some Editors to drought. Drouth is from dry; the spelling was altered to droughth, then drought; no educated person would now use the word drouth (for drought), but it is the word (though a vulgarism) in Ireland, Scotland, and the North of England. Another difference is that drought is not applied to the thirst of an individual, while drouth is, as well as to general dryness. If famine which would not now, as in ii. 847, be used for 'hunger.'
- 69. Proceeded. The nom. is Adam in line 59, the construction being, 'Adam repealed the doubts, and, led on to know &c............. proceeded.'
- 74. What might else have been our loss. What, if we had not been forewarned, might have been the cause of loss and injury to us, being unknown and such as human knowledge could not have found out.

75. Unknown. 'If unknown;' and, line 85, known, 'if known.'

79. The end, δ :c. The object for which we exist; i. e. for the will of God. "Thou has created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." Revelation, iv. 11.

83. Our knowing. Us to know; cf. the use of hearing, line 118.

As to highest Wisdom seemed. As seemed good to God in his Wisdom.

88. This which yields. The air, 'buxom,' ii. 842, v. 270; and 'passive,' vi. 72. Yields. A neuter verb; the air yields way to other bodies, or itself fills all space.

Ambient interfused denotes the air not only surrounding the earth, but flowing into and spun out between all bodies; and is a fuller and finer notation of its liquid and spiritual texture leaving no vacuum in Nature than that of Ovid, Nec circumfuso pendebat in aere tellus. Met. i. 12. (Hume.)

90. Florid. In its literal meaning of 'flowery.'

94. Absolved. Finished, completed; absolutus. See viii. 547.

97. "Remember that thou magnify his work which men behold." Job, xxxv. 24.

98. Wants to run much. Has still much remaining to run.

Though steep. Though on the decline, 'with prone career,' iv. 353.

99. Suspense. Holding back, delaying in his course.

100. Thy potent voice, he hears. I have adopted the punctuation of Pearce, who is followed by Newton, Todd, and Keightley. The original reading has no comma after the second voice. As it stands in the Text the paraphrase is, Stopping in his course, held by thy voice—thy potent voice,—he listens. This seems more Miltonic than to say 'Held by thy voice, he hears thy voice.'

102. Generation. Birth, origin.

103. The unapparent deep. "Darkness was over the face of the deep." Genesis, i. 2.

105. With her. With herself.

- 115. What thou canst attain. Attain what you can of what will enable you to serve your Maker best, and induce happiness to yourself also.
- 116. Infer thee happier. Infer is used in an unusual sense; Newton explains it: 'By inference make thee happier;' Keightley: 'Bear into a state of: Masson: 'Make thee by consequence,' or 'bring thee on.' Cf. the use of infers, ix. 754.

CXXVI NOTES.

118. Such commission, &c. See v. 224-245.

121. Inventions. There may be a reference to "They have sought out many inventions." Eccles. vii. 20; and "They provoked him to auger with their own inventions." Psalms, cvi. 29. Hope. Understand 'to find out'

122. The invisible King, &c. "The King, eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God." 1 Timothy, i. 17.

126—130. Knowledge needs her food.....to wind. Keightley quotes a parallel passage from Davenant's Gondibert, published in 1651:—

For though books serve as diet of the mind, If knowledge early got self-value breeds, By false digestion it is turned to wind,

And what should nourish on the eater feeds. ii. 8. 22.

131. Lucifer. 'Light-bringer,' was the classic name for Venus. as the morning star. In Isaiah, xiv. 12, the name is applied to the King of Babylon; early Christian writers applied the title to Satan in his fall. Cf. v. 708, 760, and Notes on 708 and 766.

135. His place. There may be an allusion to the expression used of Judas, who went "to his own place." Acts, i. 25.

139. At least, &c. The connexion of at least not being clear, it has been proposed to read at last. I take who thought as equivalent to 'in thinking,' and paraphrase the sentence: Our envious foe hath at least failed when he thought that all were rebellious.

141. Strength. Stronghold, seat of strength.
142. Us dispossessed. We being dispossessed; case absolute, which in English is the nominative, but Milton follows the Latin idiom of the ablative absolute; thus him destroyed, ix. 130.

- 143. Fraud. Misfortune, ruin; one of the senses of fraus; Æneid, x. 72.
- 144. Drew away. See v. 709, and i. 609. Their place knows no more. The expression occurs in Job, vii. 10; Psalms, ciii. 16.

146. Kept their station. Jude, 6.

152. My damage, &c. Absurdly supposed to cause injury or loss to me.

154. Self-lost. Those who are self-lost.

160. Earth be changed, &c. Earth would become like Heaven from the happy and holy lives of the inhabitants; and on their being transferred to Heaven it would resemble Earth in having the inhabitants of Earth dwelling in it.

162. Inhabit lax. Dwell apart, at large.

163. My Word. John, i. 1-3.

165. Overshadowing Spirit. See Genesis, i. 2; Luke, i. 35; and Note on i. 21.

167. Heaven. The heaven of our Universe, not the abode of God. 168—173. Boundless the deep.....fats. This passage is differently punctuated. Pearce, Newton, Todd, Major, place a full stop after space (169), and a comma after not (172); the reading in the Text is that of Keightley and Masson. According to the former punctuation the meaning is, The deep is boundless, but the space contained in it is not vacuous and empty, because there is an infinitude and I fill it. Though I, who am myself uncircumscribed, set bounds to my goodness, and do not exert it everywhere, yet neither Necessity nor Chance influences my actions. (Pearce.) According to the latter: Chaos is boundless because I am boundless who fill infinitude; nor is Chaos empty of my presence, though I withdraw myself from it, dwelling in Heaven. Keightley supplies he before who, and takes 'who fill infinitude' as the predicate of I; but the order is 'I who fill infinitude am (boundless.)'

170. Myself. Objective on retire.

Glory good will peace. Luke, ii. 14.

182, 184, 187. Glory is given to each of the three persons of the Trinity, according to their several attributes; the Goodness, Power, and Wisdom of God, or, as in line 195, 'Majesty, Sapience, and Love.'

192. So sang. Milton chooses sang as more musical here than the sung of 182.

196. All his Father in him shone. See iii. 139, and Note.

Two brazen mountains. "There came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass." Zechariah, vi. 1.

Within them Spirit lived. "The spirit of the living crea-204.

tures was in the wheels." Ezekiel, i. 20.

205. Heaven opened wide her gates. See v. 254; and cf. ii. 880.

206. Sound. Objective on moving.

207. To let forth the King of Glory. The reference is to Psalm, xxiv. 7-10.

212. Wasteful. Waste, desolate, vastus.

And surging waves. Newton and Todd think that and is a 214.

misprint for in.

215. With the centre mix the pole. Of course in Chaos there was neither centre nor pole; the metaphor is taken from the sea in a storm, the very centre of the earth mingling, as it were, with the extremities.

217. Omnific. All-creating; omnific is a word of Milton's coinage, like petrific, x. 294.

219. In paternal glory. In the glory of his Father.
224. The fervid wheels. The words of Horace, already quoted in describing the games of the fallen Angels; see ii. 532 and Note.

The golden compasses. "He set a compass upon the face of the depth." Proverbs, viii. 27, see also Psalms, civ. 5; Job, xxvi. 7; Isaiah, xl. 12.

Thus far extend, &c. Psalm, civ. 9.

Thus God the heaven created, &c. For convenience of reference the Mosaic narrative is given here in full; the following (Genesis, i. 1-25) brings us down to line 519.

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

- And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. 3. And God said, Let there be light; and there was light.
- And God saw the light, that it was good; and God divided the light from the darkness.

cxxyiii notes.

5. And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.

6. And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

- 7. And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament; and it was so.
- 8. And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.
- 9. And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear; and it was so.
- 10. And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas; and God saw that it was good.

- 11. And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth; and it was so.
- 12. And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind; and God saw that it was good.

13. And the evening and the morning were the third day.

- 14. And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years;
- 15. And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth; and it was so.
- 16. And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day,
- and the lesser light to rule the night; he made the stars also.

 17. And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth.
- 18. And to rule over the day and over the night and to divide the light from the darkness; and God saw that it was good.

19. And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

- 20. And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.
- 21. And God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kind; and every winged fowl after his kind, and God saw that it was good.

22. And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23. And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

- 24. And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth, after his kind; and it was so.
- 25. And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind; and God saw that it was good.

235. His brooding wings. See i. 21, and the Note.

239. New founded, &c. Keightley 'doubts if there be a more difficult passage than this in the whole poem.' His note is "By 'the rest,' we understand what remained after the dregs had been purged out and separated, and we take 'founded' and 'conglobed' to be participles qualifying it; 'like things to like' being parenthetic. We would then interpret the passage thus: The rest having been melted, fused, or run (comp. i. 703), and 'conglobed' or formed into two spheres (a hollow one for heaven, a solid one for earth) similar substances having combined for this purpose, he 'disparted' or separated the spheres, putting each in its 'several' or separate place, and he then 'spun out' the air between them, and 'hung' in the exact centre the earth, which was 'self-balanced,' because from its globular form, and equal distance from each point of the external sphere, it could not incline or move in any one direction more than another. Perhaps, 'founded' and 'conglobed' may be taken as active participles, governing 'like things.'"

Founded. Melted and fused together, as in i. 703, from fundere, to pour; or established, from fundare, to found.

242. Earth, self-balanced, on her centre hung. Earth is the objective on hung. Hume refers to Ovid as the original of this line:—

Nec circumfuso pendebat in aere tellus Ponderibus librata suis.—Metam. i. 12.

243—245. Light ethereal.....sprung from the deep. He does not say that light was created, but that, as already described (iii. I—12) the firstborn offspring of Heèven, the 'first of things,' it 'sprung from the deep, and 'invested the rising world.' In the description of the creation in 2 Esdras. vi., it is said, Then commandedst thou a bright light to come forth out of thy treasures.

Quintessence pure. See iii. 716, Note.

250. By the hemisphere. Because, on account of the spherical figure of the earth and heaven, the portion between them formed two hemispheres, of which, with respect to the earth, one must be in darkness when the other was in light. (Keightley).

254. Orient light. See Note on orient, i. 546. Keightley has a full stop after choirs, and supplies 'for' before when.

255. Exhaling. Rising up like a vapour; neut. 256. With joy and shout, 3c. "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?.....When the morning stars sang tegether, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" Job, xxxviii. 4,7.

264. The firmament. The Hebrew word translated 'firmament' in Genesis, i. 6, also means 'expansion,'—the word given in the margin; and so he calls it here, 'expanse of liquid air.' Compare the account in 2 Esdras: "Upon the second day thou createdst the heavenly air, and commandedst it, that, going between, it should make a division between the waters, that the one part-night remain above, and the other beneath." vi. 41.

272. Fierce extremes. Such as Chaos consisted of; see ii. 895-910.

277. Involved. Wrapped up (in the womb).

280. Prolific. Causing to bring forth; used actively, and not in its present sense of very fruitful.

282. Genial. Productive, propagating; in the literal sense of genialis; so genial bed, viii. 598.

283. Be gathered &c. The words of Genesis i. 9.

293. Direct. Straight, perpendicular.

296. Of armies thou hast heard. In Raphael's narrative of the war in Heaven, in Book vi.

CXXX NOTES.

299. Torrent rapture. Rushing rapidity, rapid torrent; both words used in their primary sense, as current in line 67; and so serpent error (302), literally, creeping wandering; and lapse, x, 263.

304. Easy. The punctuation makes easy adverbial to the verbs of the previous sentence,—found and wore; but to remove the stop at wore would improve the rythm if not the sense too.

305. All. Adjectival to ground, 'all the ground except within the banks;' or adverbial to dry, 'entirely dry, except' &c.

306. Perpetual. Perpetually, continually. Keightley explains it as 'long' perpetuus, and quotes, Perpetuis soliti patres considere mensis. Eneid, vii. 176. He says, "The idea in the poet's mind seems to have been that of a serpent, probably suggested by V. 302." Rather, as Richardson says, "the rivers are imagined as persons of great quality, the length of their robe training after them."

311. Fruit-tree after her kind, whose seed is in herself. Milton makes the fruit tree feminine, though in the Bible of 1611 it is neuter. Genesis, i. 11. This is not, however, an instance of the use of her for its, as there is a personification—herself.

315. The tender grass. The marginal reading for 'grass,' Genesis

i. 11. Verdure and verdant are from viridis, green.

317. Sudden flowered. Milton speaks of the several creations as coming into existence when the word went forth,—'forthwith,' (243), 'immediately' (285), 'sudden' (307), 'straight' (453). It is not so stated in the account in Genesis, but see 2 Esdras: "As soon as the word went forth the work was incontinently made; for immediately great and innumerable fruit did spring up." vi. 43, 44.

321. The smelling gourd. This is the reading of the First and Second Editions. Bentley proposed swelling, and it has been adopted by most editors, as making better sense than smelling, which has occurred already in 319, and would be a very natural misprint for swelling.

The corny reed. Hume says 'of or like horn,' Lat. corneus. But it is undoubtedly the adj. of corn; 'the reed of corn.'

322. In her field. This is a clear instance of the use of her for its; there is no personification, nor anything feminine about the reed.

See Note on its, i. 254.

Add the humble shrub. Add is the reading of the first two Editions, in the Third it is printed, or misprinted, and, which is followed by all subsequent editors, without remark, except Professor Masson who has restored the original reading. And is evidently a printer's error for add; the 'humble shrub' could not properly be coupled with the 'reed' nor said to have 'stood up;' for Milton uses most appropriate expressions regarding each tree or plant,—the 'gourd crept,' the 'reed stood up,' and the 'trees rose.'

323. Hair. Foliage, as coma is sometimes used; 'nemorum coma.' Horace. Implicit. Entaugled, entwined; in the literal sense as implicated from the other supine of implico, to enfold.

326. Gemmed. Budded; the primary meaning of gemma is the bud or eye of a plant; and gemmare, whence Milton's word gemmed, is to put forth buds.

331-337. God had yet not rained, &c. Genesis, ii. 5, 6.

The expanse of heaven. The 'firmament;' see line 264, Note, and Genesis, i. 14.

Altern. Alternately, 'in their vicissitude.' 348.

354. First the sun. What follows is Milton's own hypothesis.

Ethereal mould. See i. 285; ii. 139, and Notes. 356.

358. Sowed with stars. So in Spenser's Hymn to Heavenly Beauty:

That bright shynie round still moving mass The house of blessed God, which men call sky,

All sowed with glistering stars more thick than grass. 51-53.

Of light, &c. 'He took the greater part of light transplanting it from its cloudy shrine, and placed it in the sun.' This, however, is a different theory from what Milton gave in iii. 716 &c.

360. Her cloudy shrine, &c. The 'cloudy tabernacle' of 248, By tincture. By absorption. Lat. tingere, to wet, bathe. 367.

Their small peculiar. The small portion belonging to themselves independent of what they received from the sun.

Peculiar is used here as a noun and in its literal sense; the Lat. peculium (from pecunia, property, and that from pecus, cattle,) denoting the private property which a son acquired with the consent of his father, or a slave with that of his master.

370. His east. Compare the opening lines of Canto iii. of the Corsair, 'his own regions,' line 9.

The glorious lamp. The sun is called a 'lamp' in both Greek and Latin authors,-Sophocles, Antigone, 870; Virgil, Eneid, iii. 637.

372. Journal to run. The allusion is to Psulm, xix. 5., where it is said of the sun, that he "rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race."

373. Longitude. From east to west. In i ilton longitude is used when we should say 'latitude;' see iii. 576, and Note.

Seven stars in the constellation Taurus. The Pleiades. Newton observes that in saying the Pleiades danced before the sun he intimates very plainly that the creation was in the Spring, according to the common opinion. Virgil. Georgics, ii. 338.

375. Sweet influences. "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades?" Job, xxxviii. 31. See Note on influence, iv. 669.

376. Levelled west. Due west. Set. Placed. 379. In that aspect. In opposition; an astrological term.

382. Dividual. Divided; qualifying reign.

Their. Evening's and Morning's. Professor Masson has her 385.

for their, but does not tell us why.

Reptile. Literally means creeping; Lat. repo, (another form of serpo) to creep. The 'moving creature' of Genesis, i. 20, is in the margin translated 'creeping' creature; and 'that hath life' is 'living soul,' Milton's expression.

400. Shoals. Supply 'with;' 'swarm with fry and with shoals.'

Sculls. Shoal and scull are from the same root, A. S. scylan, to divide, separate. A shoal or scull is a number of fish divided off together from the main body; a shoal, shallow, or shelf, is a separate bank rising from the main bed. Shoal and scull are generally applied to fishes; but sometimes to a crowd of persons:-

The youth in skulls flock and run together, and crave that they may have Agnes. Fox. Acts and Monuments, i.

cxxxii Notes.

409. In jointed armour. The reference is probably to lobsters.

On smooth. 'On smooth seas.'

410. Bended dolphins. By the dolphin is meant the porpoise. Bended refers to its forming its back into a curve when it is taking a spring, and the expression is taken from Ovid, 'tergo delphina recurvo. Fast. ii. 113.

412. Tempest. Richardson (Dictionary) says that Milton followed Ben Jonson in making a verb of tempest, and that he adopted the French, tempester:-

By their excess

Of cold in virtue, and cross heat in vice, Thunder and tempost on those learned heads. Poetaster, v. 1.

Leviathan. See i. 201, Note; and 2 Esdras, vi. 49, 52.

417. Tepid. Warm, so as to hatch their brood as a bird does.

420. Callow. Bare, bald, without feathers, as a young bird is when hatched. Fledge. Able to fly, feathered; see iii. 627.

421. Summed their pens. Completed the growth of their wings. In falconry summed is applied to a hawk when it has its feathers, and is fit to be taken from the eyrie. Pens, wing-feathers, is used in the sense of penna, a feather, which in the plural means wings. He uses summed again in the same sense, 'with prosperous wing full summed.' Paradise Regained, i. 14.

Souring the air. Sour, used actively; or air, cognate accusative, like 'wing the region,' (425.) Sublime. Aloft, on high; an adj.

agreeing with they. See ii, 528; iii. 72; vi. 771; and x. 536.

422. Under a cloud in prospect. To one looking the ground would have appeared to be under a cloud—shaded by the number of birds. Stillingfleet, however, explains it: They soared so high as to be just beneath the clouds.

423. In prospect. In view, in sight.

424. Eyries. Nests; from ey, egg, i. e. eggery.

425. Loosely. Singly.

426. Ranged in figure wedge their way. Forming themselves into a figure like a Λ, they make their way like a wedge. DuBartas refers to this custom, describing the migration of cranes:—

Afront each band a forward captain flies, Whose pointed bill cuts passage through the skies, Two skilful serjeants keep the ranks aright And with their voice hasten their tardy flight.

427. Intelligent of seasons. "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times, and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming." Jeremiah, viii. 7.

429. With mutual wing easing their flight. Each taking it in turn to steer the figure by flying first.

432. Floats. Flutters, undulates. Keightley says 'fleets, floats away.'

434. Painted wings. The 'picte volucres' of Virgil, Encid, iv. 525.
435. The solemn nightingale. Milton shows his fondness for the nightingale by the frequent reference he makes to it. See v. 40, Note.

438. The swan, &c. In Donne's Progress of the Soul, there is a passage on the swan containing similar expressions to those here:-

> When goodly, like a ship in her full trim, A swan so white that you may unto him Compare all whiteness, but himself to none, Glided along, and as he glided watched, And with his arched week this poor fish catched. It moved with state, as if to look upon Low things scorned. xxiv.

Mantling. Spreading themselves out like a mantle; agreeing with wings. To mantle is a term in falcoury; a hawk mantles when she spreads out her wings.

440. Oary feet. Using her feet as oars.

441. The water. The dank.

443. The crested cock. So in Ovid, 'cristatus ales.' Fasti. i. 145.

441. The other. 'The other (cock);' the peacock.

With evening harps and matin. The day began with the See Note on Subbath evening, viii. 246. Matin, morning. 450. evening. 451. Her refers to soul. In the original editions soul was mis-

- printed fowle, until corrected by Bentley. 457. Lair. The place where a wild beast lies, is laid, his bed; so layer of earth, a stratum or bed. Wons. See Note on wont, i. 764.
- Those. The 'wild beasts;' these, the (tame) cattle in the field. 461. By themselves, here and there; 'rari nantes,' Eneid, i. 118. 462. At once. Together. But Keightley explains it 'the moment they upsprung.' Broad herds. The expression occurs in Iliad, i. 678.

463. Calved. Produced young.

Rampant.....ounce. See iv. 343, and Note. 466.

467. Libbard. An old form of leopard.

Rising. To be pointed off with mole, and not, as Keightley 468.has, with ounce, libbard and tiger.

470. Scarce. With difficulty, viv.

471. Behemoth. The elephant. See 2 Esdras, vi. 49, 51, and Job, xl. 15, 24.

Flowerd the flocks, &v. The flocks rose fleeced and bleating; 472.

i. c., full-grown.

Worm. Formerly signified any reptile, and included all 'creeping things,' as here, line 482. Cf. ix. 1060; Par. Reg. i. 313; and:

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there.

That kills and pains not? Autony and Cleopatra, v. 2.

"Tis a slander,

Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue Outvenoms all the worms of Nile. Cymbeline, iii. 4. With that she takes

One of the worst, her best-beloved snakes, Softly, dear worm, soft and unseen, said she, Into his bosom steal. Cowley. Davideis, i.

Wings; see the Note on vans, ii. 927.

477. Smallest lineaments, &c. They decked their small, perfectly finished, forms in all the dress of the gay summer. Liveries. See Note on livery, iv. 599.

12

CXXXIV NOTES.

480. These. The latter, i. e. the worms.

Emmet. The old form from which ant is contracted. Provident of future, &c. The expression Horace uses of the aut, 'haud ignara ac non incauta futuri,' Satire, I, i. 35. And of bees Virgil says from which Milton adopts his in small room large heart enclosed.

Ingentes animos angusto in pectore versant. Georgics, iv. 83.

487. Pattern of just equality perhaps hereafter. Milton did not consider that 'just equality' had yet arisen; so the Angel is made to say that the ant's republic may be a type of what possibly may be found among men hereafter. Newton quotes as a parallel the following from Milton's tract, The Ready and Easy way to Establish a Free Commonwealth, published in 1660: 'Go to the ant thou sluggard,' saith Solomon, 'consider her ways and be wise; which having no prince, ruler, or lord, provides her meat in the summer and gathers her food in the harvest.' Which evidently shows that they who think the nation undone without a king, though they look grave and haughty, have not so much true spirit and understanding in them as a pismire. Neither are these diligent creatures hence concluded to live in lawless anarchy, or that commended, but are set the examples to imprudent and ungoverned men, of a frugal and self-governing Democracy or Commonwealth; safer and more thriving in the joint providence and counsel of many industrious equals, than under the single domination of one imperious lord.

490. The female bee, &c. It was an opinion in Milton's day that it was the females among the bees who worked, and that the males were drones.

497. Mane.

Virgil speaks of the manes (juba) of serpents. Æneid, ii. 206.

503. Was flown, &c. A Latin idiom; so in vi. 335, 'was run by Angels.' See the Note. Of the sixth 504. Frequent. In large numbers; see i. 797, Note. day yet remained. Sc., a part remained; it was not yet ended.

505. There wanted. There was absent; a neuter verb, see iv. 338;

v. 147, Notes. The end. The object.

506. A creature, who not prone, &c. Compare the parallel passage in Ovid:-

> Sanctius his animal, mentisque capacius altæ Decrat adhuc, et quod dominari in cætera posset..... Finxit in effigiem moderantûm cuncta deorum. Pronaque cum spectent animalia cætera terram, Os homini sublime dedit, cœlumque tueri Jussit, et erectos ad sidera tollero vultus. Metam, i. 76. A creature of a more exalted kind Was wanting yet, and then was man designed, Conscious of thought, of more capacious breast, For empire formed, and fit to rule the rest..... Thus while the mute creation downward bend Their sight, and to their earthly mother tend, Man looks aloft, and with erected eyes Beholds his own hereditary skies.—Dryden.

- 509. Upright. Erect. See quotation under Note on strict, ii. 241; and iv. 288. Front. Forehead, brow; see iv. 300.
- 510. From thence. Therefore, in consequence of his being so. 517. For where is not He present? The Divine Word or Son had
- 517. For where is not He present? The Divine Word or Son had gone forth from the Father in Heaven (v. 219) to create the world, but we are reminded that God is still present everywhere.

519-514. Let us make man, Sc. Genesis, i. 26-31; ii. 7, 8, 15-

18; as follows:--

- i. 26. And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.
- 27. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.
- 28. And God blessed them, and God said to them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.
- 29. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat.
- 30. And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat; and it was so.
- 31. And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.
- ii. 7. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.
- 8. And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed.
- 15. And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.
- 16. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely cat;
- 17. But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.
- 18. And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help neet for him.
- 535. Wherever thus created.....thence, &c. From whatever place you were thus created in he brought thee to this delicious grove. In accordance with the Scripture narrative, "God formed man, and planted a garden, and there he put the man whom he had formed;" the inference being that man was not created in Eden, but after his creation was brought there; and in 2 Esdras, iii. 6, we read, "Thou leddest him into Paradise which thy right hand had planted."

543. Works. Causes, brings; see iv. 49, Note.

557. His great idea. The original meaning of the word idea, and the sense in which it is used here, is the image, representation, or model, which we form of a thing in our mind. The following passage, in which idea has the same reference as here, will illustrate its old meaning:—

CXXXVI NOTES.

God Almighty in the fabric of the universe, first contemplated himself and reflected on his own excellencies; from which he drew and constituted those first forms which are called ideas; so that every species which was afterwards expressed, was produced from that first idea, forming that wonderful contexture of created beings.....And though nature always intends a consummate beauty in her productions, yet through the inequality of the matter, the forms are altered; and in particular human beauty suffers alteration for the worse. For which reason, the artful painter and the sculptor, imitating the Divine Master, form to themselves, as well as they are able, a model of the superior beautics, and reflecting on them, endeavour to correct and amend the common nature, and to represent it as it was first created, without fault either in colour or lineament. This idea, which we call the goddess of painting and of sculpture, descends upon the marble and cloth, and becomes the original of those fine arts. Belloci. Translated in Dryden's Parallel of Poetry and Painting.

562-565. Job, xxxviii. 7; Psalms, xxiv. 7.

563. Stations. This is the reading of the First Edition in the Second it is station, which, though probably a misprint, is followed by Newton, Todd and others. The station of a planet, Newton says, is a term of art when the planet appears neither to go backwards nor forwards, but to stand still and keep the same place in its orbit.

564. Pomp. Used here in its classical sense of a procession, and so again in viii. 61.

578. Parement stars. So in iv. 976, 'the road of Heaven star-paved.'

- 581. Powdered with stors. This expression occurs in Sylvester's DuBartas, Drummond's Poems, Boccacio's Decameron; and so would seem to have been a common one.
 - 591. From work now resting, Sc. Genesis, ii. 1-3:-
 - 1. Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them.
- 2. And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.
- And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made.

596. All organs of sweet stop. Wind instruments.

597. On fret. The fret is the stop or hole on the soundboard of a musical instrument.

Ham. Govern these vantages with your fingers and thumb, give it broath with your month, and it will discourse most excellent music. Look you these are the stops.....There is much music and excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it. Why do you think that I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me you cannot play upon me. Hamlet, iii. 2.

598. Tempered. Modulated.

599. Unison. Singing alone, singly; unisonus.

600. Flowing from golden censors. Revelation, viii. 3, 4.

605. The giant Angels. He calls the robel Angels 'giant Angels' in allusion to the War of the Giants against Heaven in the Greek mythology; see i. 198, Note. The 'return from the giant Angels' is described in vi. 880—892.

607. Created to destroy. To destroy what has been created.

The clear hyaline, the glassy sea. The 'crystalline ocean,' line 271; the expressions are borrowed from Revelution, iv. 6. "Before the throne there was a sea of glass (θάλασσα δαλίνη) like unto crystal." Hyaline is the Greek for 'glassy,' or 'crystalline.'

624. Her nother ocean. The 'waters under the firmament,' the 'clear hyaline' being those above the firmament.'

- 631. Thrice happy. Sc. A translation of Virgil's well-known line
 - O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint. Georgics, ii. 458.
- 636. Face of things. Visible appearance of things.

BOOK VIII.

The First Edition of Paradise Lost consisted of only Ten Books: in the Second the number Twelve was made by dividing the then Seventh and the Tenth. Thus the Eleventh originally comprised the present Seventh and Eighth Books, and lines 639 -642 ran

If else thou seekest

Aught, not surpassing human measure say. To whom thus Adam gratefully replied:

'What thanks sufficient,' &c.

In the Second Edition the three lines with which the Eighth Book begins first appear, as an opening to the Book.

14. Resolve was formerly used in the sense of solve, clear the doubts of, answer; "Christ resolveth a rich man how he may inherit everlasting life." Mark, x., Heading of Chapter.

This goodly frame, this world. The words of Hamlet: -" This goodly frame, the earth." ii. 2.

19. Numbered. 'Numerous,' vii. 621; as 'unnumbered.' ii. 903, viii. 432, is innumerable. To roll spaces. To roll through spaces; or, spaces, a cognate objective.

21. Argues. See Note on argument, i. 24.

To officiate. To supply as a duty; see Note on officions, line 99. Punctual. Point-like, no bigger than a point; Lat. punctum, a point.

24. Survey. Extent.

25. Admire. Wonder; see i. 690, Note.

28. So many nobler.....greater so manifold. 'To create so many nobler and so many times greater bodies.

30. For anglet appears. For anything we see or know to the contrary, Their orbs. The spheres to which they belong.

32. The sedentary earth, Sr. According to the Ptolemaic theory, that the earth was the centre of the universe.

36. Such a sumless journey, Sc. Brought such a long way and so swiftly. Brought agrees with warmth and light, and journey is the objective of distance, or governed by some such preposition as 'through,' understood. cxxxviii NOTES.

Incorporeal speed. The 'speed almost spiritual' of line 110. 37.

Number. Mathematical number, see 108, 113, 114. 38.

In sight. Within view. 41.

61.

Pomp. Train, procession; as in vii. 564.
This to attain, &c. There are two ways of construing this passage, according as we take this to refer to what precedes or follows. To attain this knowledge of the seasons and years, it matters not whether it be heaven or earth that moves. (Newton, Masson.) Or 'To attain this knowledge, viz., whether it be heaven or earth that moves, is of no importance.' (Hume, Richardson, Dunster, Keightley.) In the latter construction to attain is the subject of imports; in the former, the clause whether heaven more or earth.

78. Wide. Wide of the mark.

- Centric and eccentric. Centric, or concentric, are such spheres whose centre is the same with, and eccentric such whose centres are different from, that of the earth. Cycle is a circle; epicycle is a circle upon another circle. Expedients of the Ptolemaics to solve the apparent difficulties in their system. (Richardson.)
- Officious. Officiating, line 22. The use of officious in the sense of meddling, taking too much on oncself, is modern; in Bailey's Dictionary, Ed. 1747, the only meanings are 'Ready to do one a good office, serviceable, very obliging,' these it has entirely lost. In Milton officious is found only in its old sense, see ix. 104, and Paradise Regained, ii. 302.

100. For. As for, with respect to.

His line stretched out so far. The expression is taken from 102. Job, xxxviii. 5.

108. Numberless. Pearce and Newton refer numberless to circles;

Bentley and Keightley take it with swiftness, as in line 38.

128. In sir. The Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn. See v. 175-177 and Notes.

Three different motions. The three motions of the earth are:-Its diurnal revolution on its axis, which causes day and night; its annual orbit round the sun, which brings about the change of the seasons; and its libration or oscillation of itself so that its axis is parallel with that of the world. The last motion is in the Ptolemaic theory called the 'trepidation' (see iii. 483 and Note), and is, according to it, attributed to the Ninth or crystalline sphere; but the Copernican system assigns it as well as the other motions to the carth itself.

131-133. Else....thou must ascribe......or save the sun, &c.

Either.....thou must ascribe.....or save the sun, &c.

The construction and meaning is: Which three motions of the earth you must either ascribe (according to the Ptolemaic system) to several spheres moving in a contrary direction to the earth and crossing each other obliquely; or (according to the Copernican) you must (by attributing these motions to the earth), save the sun his labour, and that primum mobile, or nocturnal and diurnal rhomb supposed (to exist, in the Ptolemaic theory), invisible otherwise (i. e. except in supposition) beyond all stars—the wheel of day and night; which (supposed rhomb) needs not thy belief, if the earth, industrious of herself, bring about day by (revolving on her axis and) travelling east, and that part of her which is turned away from the sun meet night, while the other part is shone on by it.

135. The wheel of day and night. This is a translation of 'nocturnal and diurnal rhomb.' Milton often, as here, translates a Greek or Latin expression immediately after using it; thus 'the galaxy, that milky way,' vii. 579; 'the clear hyaline, the glassy sea,' vii. 619.

140. Luminous. Illuminer.

143.

Enlightening her. Giving light to the moon.
Reciprocal, &c. Doing good in turn to the inhabitants of the 144.

moon,—if it is inhabited.

Her spots thou seest as clouds, &c. In Milton's day it was supposed that the moon had like the earth an atmosphere, clouds, and rain; but this has since been found to be erroneous.

Other suns. The reference may be to Jupiter and Saturn, 148. which Galileo had discovered had each an attendant moon or satellite.

150. Communicating male and female light. The suns giving male or original light, and the moons female or borrowed light. Pliny speaks of the sun as a masculine star, drying all things, and the moon as a feminine and soft star, dissolving humours by night.

152. Stored. I understand it as qualifying suns and moons. The only commentators who refer to the difficulty are Keightley and

Professor Masson; their notes are:-

Keightley: - "Stored, &c. i. e., each orb (each of them) being supplied with living inhabitants. With, i. e. by.

Masson:—"I believe that stored here qualifies world, and that the meaning is 'Which two great sexes animate the world—a world stored perhaps in each of its orbs with some living things.' But it is possible that stored refers to seres, or to suns and moons, in either of which connexions an intelligible meaning would arise."

The accent is on the first syllable, as with 155. Contribute.

attribute, lines 12 and 107.

157. This habitable. The earth; the adj. used for a substantive;

so in vi. 78, 'this terrene.'

158. Light back to them. Bentley objects to light, as, if the fixed stars conveyed only a glimpse of light, it would be too much to say that the earth 'returns back light' in general, and he proposes nought for light. But according to the reasoning of the passage the earth does send out light, line 140; and so Bp. Pearce suggests like for light.

That spinning sleeps, &c. Metaphors taken from a top, of which Virgil makes a whole simile, Mneid, vii, 378. It is an objection to the Copernican system, that if the earth moved round on her axis in twenty-four hours, we should be sensible of the rapidity and violence of the motion; and therefore to obviate this objection it is not only said that 'she advances her silent course with inoffensive pace that spinning sleeps on her soft axle,' but it is farther added, to explain it still more, 'while she paces even, and bears thee soft with the smooth air along;' for the nir, the atmosphere, moves as well as the earth. (Newton.)

cxl Notes.

173. Be lowly wise. Todd notes that one of Milton's letters to his friend Deodate concludes with 'Humilè sapiamus,' 'let us be lowly wise.' And Hume quotes the Latin phrase, Noli altum sapere.

181. Intelligence. A term for a heavenly being, similar to 'Virtues in v. 371. The expression 'pure Intelligences' for Spirits of Heaven' occurs in Spenser's Hymn of Heavenly Beauty:---

Fair is the Heaven where happy souls have place,..... More fair is that, where those Ideas on high Euranged be, which Plato so admired. And pure Intelligences from God inspired.—78, 82—84.

183. Nor with perplexing thoughts, &c. Todd compares the speech of the Chorus in Samson Agonistes:---

More there be who doubt his ways not just,
As to his own edicts found contradicting,
Then give the reins to wandering thought
Regardless of his glory's diminution;
Till by their own perplexities involved,
They ravel more, still less resolved,
But never find self-satisfying solution. 300-306.

184. The sweet. The sweetness; noun for adj.

186. Molest. Infinitive on bid.

191. Not to know.....but to know.....is the prime wisdom, &c. Several passages on which this may have been based are to be found in the Scriptures:—

The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law. Deuteronomy, xxix. 29.

Seeing there be many things that increase vanity, what is man the better? Ecclesiastes, vii. 11.

Be not righteous over much, neither make thy self overwise. Ib, vii. 16. Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after rudiments of the world. Colossians, ii. 8.

Keightley notes that in the doctrine in this passage (183—197) Milton is directly opposed to Bacon's teaching and philosophy. To qualify the impression the passage conveys in this respect, Professor Masson refers to Milton's enthusiastic outburst on the pleasures of Scientific research and speculation in the third of his Prolusiones Oratoriae, and also his advocacy of Physical Science in his Tract on Education. His real meaning, he adds, is probably the same as Goethe's in his famous aphorism (though that was uttered with reference rather to metaphysical than to physical speculations): "Man is born not to solve the problem of the Universe, but to find out where the problem begins, and then to restrain himself within the limits of the comprehensible."

195. Fond. Foolish; see iii. 470, Note. Impertinence. Doing what does not pertain or belong to one.

197. Still to seek. Having always to seek; the search being still before us. To seek may be construed as a future participle according to the Latin idiom.

211. Sweeter thy discourse is, &c. The poet had here probably in mind the passage in Virgil:—

Tale tuum carmen nobis, divina poeta, Quale sopor fessis in granmie; quale per æstum Dileis agus saliente sigim restingurere rivo — Edouge

Dulcis aquæ saliente sitim restinguere rivo .-- Ecloyue, v. 45.

O heavenly poet! such thy verse appears, So sweet so charming to my ravished ears, As to the weary swain, with cares opprest, Beneath the sylvan shade, refreshing rest; As to the feverish traveller, when first

He finds a crystal stream to quench his thirst. - Dryden.

But the fine turn in the three last lines is entirely Milton's own, and gives an exquisite beauty to this passage above Virgil's. (Newton).

212. Fruits of palm-tree. Dates. Hume, Milton's earliest commentator and contemporary with him, writes: The palm-tree bears a fruit called a date, full of sweet juice, a great restorative to dry and exhausted bodies, by augmenting the radical moisture. There is one kind of it called Palma Eyyptiaca, which from its virtue against drouth was named 'Αδιψος, Sitim sedans.

213. From labour. After labour; to one returned from labouring.

225. Our fellow-servant. As the Angel described himself to St. John; 'I am thy fellow-servant.' Rec. xxii. 9.

230. Uncouth. See Note on couth, ii, 409 and on uncouth, vi. 362. 239. Inure. Accustom, practise by use; ure is another form of the word, from utere, to use; but Keightley says manure, inure and are are from waves.

241. Barricadoed. Barricado was the old form of barricade.

246. The Sabbath-evening. The day being from sunset to sunset, Sabbath-evening means the evening before the Sabbath or Seventh day, just as Christmas-eve is the evening before Christmas, see vii. 581, 591, seq. The Angels were required to watch at Hell-gates only on the day of the creation of man, and, the Seventh Day beginning with the Seventh Evening, 'they returned ere evening.'

251. Himself. Objective. Beginning. The participle.

252. Desire, &c. It was (therefore) desire to converse longer with you that induced me to relate my story.

258. Gazed the ample sky. The preposition on or at is omitted by poetic license, and so in v. 272, 'a phoenix gazed by all;' but elsewhere in Milton gazed, when an active verb, is followed by on or upon.

263. Liquid large. See the Note on turget gapture vii 299.

263. Liquid lapse. See the Note on torrent rapture, vii. 299.
265. All things smiled. In Tonson's edition of 1727, there is no

265. All things smiled. In Tonson's edition of 1727, there is no stop after smiled, and a comma is placed after fragrance. But in Milton's editions there is, as in the Text, a comma after smiled, and 'with fragrance' is taken with 'overflowed';—my heart overflowed with joy and fragrance.

269. As lively vigour led. As is misprinted anil in the Second Edition.

277. How came I. Keightly reads 'how I came.' A note of interrogation is sometimes wrongly printed after here; no question is asked, but a request made, in this and similar constructions. See xi. 785, Note; xii. 385.

282. Know. Can conceive.

290.

Insensible. 'Insensibly'; adverbial to passing.
Thy mansion wants thee. For wants see Index to the Notes. 296.

Led me up, &c. See vii. 535, Note. 303.

316.Submiss. Falling low, prostrate. Rewed. In its primary sense, raised up.

But of the Tree, &c. This being the great hinge on which the whole poem turns, Milton has marked it strongly. 'But of the Tree-Remember what I warn thee, -he dwells and expatiates upon it from ver. 323 to 336, repeating, enforcing, fixing every word, it is all nerve and energy. (Richardson).

335. Yet. Still. Dreadful....though in my choice, &c. The sound of it is still dreadful to me, though it is left to my choice not to incur it.

337. Purpose, Speech, discourse; as in iv. 337; see Note.

338—449. Genesis, ii. 18--25, covers this portion of the narrative:

18. And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone;

I will make him an help meet for him.

19. And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them; and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof;

And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

21. And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof. 22. And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

23. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh.

25. And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

350. These. The latter, i. e., the beasts.

Stooped. Bent, swooping; a participle; as cowering. 351.

Let not my words offend thee. Borrowed from the speech of Abraham, Genesis, xviii. 30.

382.This line is generally printed without any punctuation; it may either be read

And these, inferior far, beneath me set?

And these inferior, far beneath me, set?

Sort. Consort, company together; cf. use of sorted, x. 615.

Professor Masson explains it "issue, come to pass, succeed."

387. Intense.....remiss. Stretched and slack. The metaphor is taken from the strings of a musical instrument, where if one is wound up tight and another slack there can be no harmony, only disparity; and so, there can be no society between man wound up and strained to a loftier faculty and understanding, and the brute, remiss, let down, and of a lower nature.

- 393. Each with their kind. Their for its; see Note on its, i. 254.
- 395. Much less can bird, &c. Much less is to be taken with line 391, what intervenes being parenthetical. The brute cannot be human consort, (the beasts going in pairs according to their kind), much less can bird with beast, (which are of different species) nor ox and ape (though of the same), but least of all can man and beast associate.

Converse. Dwell together; see ii. 184, Note. 396.

402. In pleasure. In allusion to the meaning of Eden, which is pleasure.

407. Second to me or like. Newton quotes :--

Unde nil majus generatur ipso

Nec viget quicquam simile ant secundum. Horace, Odes I. xii.

408. Converse. Accented on the second syllable, but as a noun now on the first.

410. Infinite descents. Governed by by understood; or the obj.

of measure; or an adverbial clause qualifying inferior.

417. But in degree, -the cause, Sc. Only relatively perfect, (and this want of perfection is) the cause of his desire to lessen or solace his defects by companionship with one like himself. His like. Like is a noun; the plural is in use still in the phrase 'the likes of you,' common as a provincialism and in Ireland.

Through all members absolute. A translation of an expression used by Cicero, omnibus numeris absolutus, meaning perfect in all its parts. In Shakspeare absolute is common in the sense of perfect, finished; and Milton employs it in this sense in line 547.

423. His single imperfection. The imperfection of him single. To manifest his single imperfection. To show that his being alone is an imperfection.

In unity. In being only one. Defective. Agreeing with Which. The antecedent is to beget like, &c. 425.

image.

429. So pleased. If you are so pleased; i. e., if you are pleased to do so.

435. Permissive. Permitted, agreeing with freedom. Milton uses this word only twice elsewhere; once actively, 'granting permission,' - by his permissive will, iii. 685; and once again passively, - clad with permissive glory, x. 451.
438. Knowing of. Having knowledge of, acquainted with the nature of.

Knew it not good, Sc. Genesis, ii. 18. 445.

450. Other self. So in iv. 488; x. 128; like the Latin alter idem. 453. Earthly....heavenly. Understand 'nature'; cf. 'intellectual,'

ix. 483. Overpowered sunk down. As Daniel describes the effect of the heavenly vision on him:-- "As for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me." Daniel, x. 17.

458. Sleep. Genesis, K. 21.

Abstract. For abstracted and in its literal sense, carried away, removed (from himself). As in a trance, &c. Compare Balaam's account of the trance he fell into:—"The man whose eyes are open hath said, he hath said, which heard the words of God, cxliv NOTES.

which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open." Numbers, xxiv. 3, 4.
464. Awake I stood. When awake I had stood.

465. My left side. The Scripture account does not say from what side the rib was taken, but simply 'one of his ribs.' Milton, however. adopts the idea of some commentators that it was from the left side, and in Adam's speech to Eve, he says, > to give thee being I lent Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart, Substantial life. iv. 484.

hence the use of cordial here, 'from the heart'; and see x. 886.

She disappeared and left me dark. The same metaphor as he uses regarding the vision of his own wife: --

I waked, she fled, and day brought back my night. Sonnet, xxiii. 485. Led by her Heavenly Maker. The Lord God 'brought her unto the man.' Genesis, ii. 22.

488. Heaven in her eye. Newton quotes from Shakspeare:--

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek. Troilus & Cressida, iv. 4.

491. Turn. Favour, kind act. To do one a 'turn' is a phrase, meaning to do a kind act for a person, to do a bad turn, an unkind act. The expression is now too homely and familiar for epic poetry, or to be used in the present connexion.

494. Nor enviest. To be taken with 'hast fulfilled.' Thou hast fulfilled thy words, and dost not envy or grudge (thy gift).

500. Divinely brought. Brought by God; line 485.

502. Conscience. Consciousness; an old use of conscience; as in Hebrews, x. 2; 1 Corinthians, viii. 7.

503. That would be woord, &c. This recalls Shakspeare's:-

We cannot fight for love as men may do ; We should be wood, and were not made to woo.

Midsummer Night's Dream, ii. 2.

She's beautiful, and therefore to be wood;

She is a woman, therefore to be won. Henry VI. Part I. v. 3.

The former contains the same sentiment as that before us—that woman is to be sought and not herself woo; the latter quotation is similar merely in 'wooed' and 'won' being in proximity.

504.Obvious. Coming across the path, in the way. See Index.

To say all. To complete the list, or to sum all together or in one, (of what caused her to turn from him). The construction of lines 501-507 is: Innocence, and modesty, virtue and conscience of her worth, or (to say all) Nature herself wrought in her.

507. She turned. I. e. 'turned away.'

509. Obsequious majesty, Compare the expressions 'coy submission, modest pride,' iv. 310.

510-520. To the nuptial bower, &c. See iv. 492-501; 689-

713; 736-743; and 771-775.

518. The amorous bird of night sung spousal. 'These, lulled by nightingales, embracing slept.' iv. 771; and iv. 648, and v. 40, Note: 532. Superior and unmoved. Nominatives, agreeing with I.

534. Nature failed in me. Nature made me deficient (in this respect).

539. Elaborate.....exact. Both these words mean the same thing, 'fully wrought, completely finished'; the prep. e or ex in composition denoting completion.

538. Too much of ornament. We have the same sentiment more fully in Samson Agonistes:-

Is it for that such outward ornament Was lavished on their sex, that inward gifts Were left for haste unfinished, judgment scant, Capacity not raised to apprehend, Or value what is best

In choice, but often to effect the wrong?

547. Absolute. Perfect, complete; see line 421, and Note.

552. Degraded. Placed in a lower grade or rank.

553. Shows. Appears; used before as a neuter in vii. 555.

554. Not after made occasionally. Hume points out that this is a contradiction of Aristotle's saying of woman: Animal occasionatum, non per se et ex principali nature intentione generatum, sed ex occasione. Occasionally. For some particular occasion or object; this use of the word survives in the expression 'an occasional sermon,' which means one for some particular occasion.

567. For what admirest thou, Sc. 'The punctuation of this passage

567. For what admirest thou, &c. The punctuation of this passage is not uniform. Newton and Todd have the interrogation after outside; Keightley and Masson as in the Text. The latter is the simpler and more natural construction; the former will require what to be taken as a Greek acc. and outside the subject of transports 'For what (why) does an outside transport thee?'

569. Cherishing, honouring, love. The words are taken from Ephesians, v. 28, 29; 1 Peter, iii. 7; and the promise made by the man—'to love and to cherish'—in the Marriage Service of the Church of England.

576. Adorn. Milton uses adorned several times, and so far as the metre is concerned might have done so here; but it is an adjective rather than a participle, not 'made adorned, ornamented,' but made beautiful, perfect.

578. If ho sees, &c. Who knows when you are least wise; art seen, being equivalent simply to 'art,' 'art seen to be.' Or, according to Professor Masson, 'Who beholds thee in those moments when thou art to be seen in thy least wise condition.'

583. Divulged. The literal meaning of divulge is to make common.

589. Love refines the thoughts, &c. So in Spenser's Hymn in Honour of Love:—

Such is the power of that sweet passion, That it all sordid baseness doth expel, And the refined mind doth newly fashion Unto a fairer form.—190—193.

And Tennyson's lines on the elevating passion of love are worth quoting:-

I made them lay their hands in mine and swear......

To lead sweet lives in purest chastity, cxlvi NOTES.

> To love one maiden only, cleave to her, And worship her by years of noble deeds, Until they won her; for indeed I know Of no more subtle master under Heaven Than is the maiden passion for a maid, Not only to keep down the base in man, But teach high thought, and amiable words And courtliness, and the desire of fame, And love of truth, and all that makes a man. - Guinevere.

Judicious. Full of judgment and discernment; an old use 591.of it, as applied to persons, - 'the judicious Hooker;' 'the judicious reader.' Scale. Ladder; as in v. 509, and scaled, iii. 541.

593. Not sunk. If thou art not sunk.

Of goes with deem. Genial bed. Lectus genialis. Horace, 598.Epistles, I, i. 87. Cf. the use of genial, vii. 282.

Decencies. Graceful acts; so decent is used in iii. 644.

Subject not. Do not make me a slave to them; in reply to 607. line 170.

609. From the sense, &r. In consequence of the sense presenting them variously. Represent is equivalent to present; see v. 104; x. 849. 628. Restrained conveyance. The limited mode of going from place to place, as with inhabitants of the earth.

630. Parting. Departing.

631. Green Cape and Verdant Isles. Cape Verd (i. e., Green) and the Cape Verd Islands.

632. Hesperean sets. Sets in the west; hesperean goes with sets, not with Isles. It is thus spelt in the original editions, though elsewhere hesperian. My signal to depart. When he met Adam he told him he could stay 'till evening rise.' v. 376.

636. Else. Unswayed by passion.

645. Benediction. Gracious speech, thanks. Since to part. 'Since you are about to depart,' or 'since we are about to part."

653. Adam to his bower. The conversation between Raphael and Adam took place in his bower, v. 267, 375, 378. When it was over, the Angel arose, 644, Adam followed him, and, after he had gone up to Heaven, returned 'to his bower.'

BOOK IX.

With man, as with his friend. The expression is borrowed from the Scriptures:—

The Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh to his friend. Erodus, xxxiii. 11.

 Genesis, xviii.
 The same picture of the connexion of Sin and Death occurs in x. 249, 264.

For Sin and Death no power can separate; where Sin is similarly described as the 'shade' or 'shadow of Death.' See Romans, v. 12.

14-19. The wrath of God on fallen man was a higher theme and more worthy of being celebrated in an epic than the anger of heroes or gods which forms the subject of the Iliad, the Odyssey, and the Eneid, the three greatest epics the world had yet seen.

His foe. Hector, who after having fled thrice round the walls of Troy was slain by Achilles, in revenge for his having killed his friend Patroclus; an incident related in the Iliad, the subject of which was, as announced in the first line, "the wrath of (stern) Achilles."

17. Turnus, the son of Dannus, the king of the Rutuli at the time of the arrival of Æneas m Italy. He fought against Æneas because Lavinia, the daughter of king Latinus, who had been betrothed to him, was given to Æneas; in the end he was slain by the hand of the Trojan hero. This episode is related near the end of the Mucid, the plot of which mainly turns on the irc of Juno to Ancas.

The Greek. Ulysses, pursued by the anger of Neptune, the god of the sea; the story of whose wanderings is the subject of the Cythered's son. Eneas, who suffered from the wrath of Juno. Venus, the mother of Æneas, is said to have arisen from the foam of the sea near Cythera; and that island was famed for her worship, whence her epithet of Cytherea.

If answerable style. This refers back to line 6, before the parenthesis. 'I now must change these notes to tragic, if answerable style I can obtain from my celestial patroness.'

21. My celestial patroness. The heavenly muse, Urania; i. 6; vii. 31. 23. Dictates. The accent was formerly on the first syllable; but now as a verb the stress is on the second syllable, and as a noun on the first. For another instance of the old pronunciation, see line 355.

26. Long choosing and beginning late. Milton had proposed the story of king Arthur as a subject for an epic poem; he had also sketched out the plan of a drama on the Fall of Man. Paradise Lost was begun about two years before the Restoration, when the poet was 52 years of age.

29. Chief mastery. Supply, 'it being considered to be' (chief mastery to dissect). Dissect. The allusion is to the minute accounts of the wounds received by heroes in fight.

33-34. Races and games. As in Iliad, xxiii. Eneid v. Tilting furniture, &c. As in Mallory's Morte d'Arthur; Spenser's Fuerie Queene, Ariosto, and other writers of romances.

34. Furniture. The word furniture was not formerly limited to signify the furniture or moveable articles of a room or house, but referred to 'whatsoever are requisite to furnish a house, or any other place or thing.' Bailey's Dictionary.

Whereas the king, being in the parts beyond the seas, needed ready money toward the furniture of his wars. Lambarde. Perambulation of Kent, p. 215. Ed. 1596.

35. Impresses is spelt impreses in the original Text, from Ital. impresa, a device or emblem on a shield. It occurs in Shakspeare:—

> From mine own windows torn my household coat, Rased out my impress .- Richard II. iii. 1.

cxlviii Notes.

36. Bases. The base was an apron worn as part of a Knight's dress on horseback. See Faerie Queene, v. 5, 20. The expression tiusel trappings may have been taken from Spenser.

Her garments all were wrought of beaten gold,
And all her steed with tinsel trappings shone.

Faerie Queene, iii, 1. 15.

37. Murshalled feast, &c. The guests were marshalled or conducted to their places by the murshall; the sewer marched in before the dishes and arranged them on the table; and the seweschul was the steward or major-domo.

Marshall, mareschal, from Tuet. mara, a horse, and scale, a servant; the 'curator equorum.' Sewer, from sew, to assay or taste. Semeschall,

Teut. sincigs, senior, elder, and scale, servant.

39. The skill, Sr. The duties of marshalls, sewers, and seneschalls.
41. Me....remains. The Latin construction me manet; it remains to me.

Skilled of. This expression also follows the Latin idiom of a gen. after peritus; but Todd quotes another instance of the use of 'skilled' followed by 'of':—

As holy men of human manners skilled.

Harrington's Ariosto, iv. 42.

44. Unless an age too late, &c. He expressed the same dread in 1641, when announcing to his countrymen his intention of composing a poem "to be left so written to after-times, as they should not willingly let die":—

f to the instinct of nature, and the emboldening of art, aught may be trusted, and there be nothing alterse in our climate, or the fate of this age, it haply would be no rashness, from an equal diligence and inclination, to present the like offer in our ancient stories.—Reason of Church Government.—ii.

45. Damp my intended wing depressed.—A classical idiom; 'damp

my wing so as to depress it.'

41—47. Milton has two or three similar prologues in the course of the Poem,—iii. 1—55, and vii. 1—39,—in which he refers to himself or his feelings. Such digressions of a poet he defends in the Reason of Church Government:—

Although a poet, soaring in the high region of his fancies, with his garland and singing robes about him, might, without apology, speak more of himself than I mean to do; yet for me, sitting here below in the cool element of prose, a mortal thing among many readers of no empyreal conceit, to venture and divulge unusual things of myself I shall petition to the gentler sort it may be no envy to me.

53. Late fled. See iv. 1014.

58. Midnight should be pronounced as two distinct words, so as to throw the emphasis equally on mid and night.

59. From comparing the earth. Job, i. 7. Cautious of day. Beware of, and so avoiding, the daytime.

60—62. See iv. 555—590.

64. Thrice the equinoctial, &c. Three days he went round the earth from east to west; and four days from north to south, but all the time kept himself on the dark side of it.

The colures are two imaginary circles intersecting each other at right angles at the poles. Newton considers that traversing means going obliquely; according to Keightley it means simply 'going along,' as in line 434.

67. The coast averse. The side of Eden which was away from. See iv. 178—182; 543—550, where the 'entrance' and the 'cherubic watch' are described.

77—82. From Eden, &c. From lines 63 to 67 Satan's journey has been described astronomically. Here it is more fully detailed geographically; on leaving Eden, iv. 1016, Satan went north over the Black Sea, the Sea of Azof, still north over Siberia by the Ob which flows into the Arctic Ocean, over the north pole and down on the other side of the earth to the Antarctic; from east to west, he went from the Orontes, a river of Lydia, to the Isthmus of Darien, and on, over India, back again to Eden.

Pontus. The Euxine or Black Sea. The pool Maotis. Maotis

palus, the sea of Azof.

80. Orontes. A large river of Syria, which flows into the Mediterranean. The ocean burred. See Job, xxxviii. 10.

86. See Genesis, iii. 1.

87. Irresolute of thoughts revolved. Not having brought to a due resolution or conclusion the thoughts he had been revolving.

89. Imp. Imp originally means a graft or shoot, a scion; and was thence applied to a young person, troublesome child or sprite; though formerly it had not an invidious sense.

92. Whatever. Any that might appear.

104. Officious. In its old sense of doing one's duty. See viii. 99, Note.

107. Influence. See iv. 669, Note.

113. Growth, sense, reason. The various degrees of life, or animated nature, comprising the vegetable and animal kingdoms, and man, with his rational nature, summing up all three.

131. Him destroyed. The obj. case absolute; so in vii. 142.

141. Well nigh half, &c. See ii. 692; v. 710; and Revelation, xii. 4. 146. If they at least, &c. In his reply to Abdiel (v. 853 seq.) Satan argues against the Angels being created beings.

156. Psalms, civ. 4; xci. 11.

157. Their earthy charge. Psalms, xci. 11. Earthy. This is the reading in the poet's own editions; the common one is earthly.

166. This essence. Himself, his spiritual nature. To incarnate.

Inf. on constrained.

170. Obnoxious. Exposed, liable to.

176. Son of despite. Offspring of hatred, created for my punishment. A Hebraism, like 'sons of Belial,' wicked men; 'sons of pride,' proud men.

186. Nor nocent. It was 'not nocent' in the First Edition, but altered in the Second.

187. In at his mouth. Cf. vi. 352.

191. Close. Secretly; ii. 485, Note.

cl notes.

192. When as. An archaic form for 'when,' 'at the time that';

sometimes written as one word.

193. The humid flowers that breathe, &c. This beautiful passage, says Todd, has been the parent of two elegant imitations:—

See, Nature hastes her earliest wreaths to bring, With all the incense of the breathing spring—Pope, Messiah. The breezy call of incense-breathing morn.—Gray's Elegy.

199. Creatures wanting voice. An instance of the word creature being applied to inanimate objects; see iii. 442.

212. Wild. Wildness; adj. for noun.

213. Hear. This is the reading of the First Edition, in the Second it is bear. The change probably arose from the similarity of the type, 'h' and 'b'; either word suits the context, and some editors read one, some the other.

218. Spring of roses. Spring, from which comes 'sprig,' originally meant shoot, rod, and was poetically used for grove or coppiee.

222. Object. Professor Masson has objects,—a misprint no doubt. 245. Wilderness, Wildness; so used in Measure for Measure:—

Such a warped slip of wilderness Ne'er issued from his blood.—iii. 1.

249. Solitude is sometimes best society. Cf. the proverbial saying of Scipio, 'Nunquam minus solus quam cum solus.'

288—289. The construction of these two lines has not yet been attended to. The note of interrogation after 'dear' requires 'which' as well as 'they' to be the subject of 'found,' and 'misthought' to be taken as a participle. We have then a classical use of the relative, and 'which how found they?' is equivalent to 'and how did they find?' or there is an anacolouthon, and the whole clause is adjectival to 'which,' and the sentence broken off incomplete. I would remove the question and put a note of admiration after 'dear,' taking 'misthought' as the predicate of 'which.' Then the sentence will read, Thoughts, which, however (it was that) they found harbour in your mind, thought wrongly of one whom you speak of as so dear to you. Keightley has a note of interrogation after 'breast, and a note of admiration after Adam, and after dear!

302. Affront. Meeting face to face. See i. 391.

306—308. Neither despise the subtlety of one who could seduce angels; nor think that the aid of others is superfluous.

310. Access. Addition, increase.

313. Shame to be overcome. Shame lest he should be overcome. 314. Raised unite. Newton explains it,—"Would unite and add vigour to wisdom, watchfulness, and every virtue, mentioned before.

vigour to wisdom, watchfulness, and every virtue, mentioned before. If this be not the meaning, it must be understood thus, Would raise the utmost vigour and collect it all when raised."

327. Harm precedes not sin. We shall not suffer harm before sinning.

328. Foul esteem. Low estimation, disparaging opinion.

334. The event. The issue, result.

335. What is faith, &c.? What merit is there in faith, love, or virtue when left untried, and without exterior help to sustain it?

That is, to prove one's faith, &c., a person should have it put to the test when all their strength lies in themselves, and not in the help of others. Unassayed alone. If it has not been assayed alone, and unsustained by external help.

337. Let us not suspect, &c. Let us not suppose our happy state to have been left so imperfect.

339. As not secure. As not to be secure. To single or combined. To us when single or combined.

358. Mind (thee). Remind. 365. Most likely. To avoid it would be most likely. Approve. Prove. See in the Argument, Book x.

Securer. Less on our guard, 'less prepared,' 381; see Note 371. on secure, i. 261.

387. Oread or Dryad. Nymphs of mountains or trees.

Delia. Diana; so called from the island of Delos in which she was born and which was the principal seat of her worship.

393. Pales, the Roman goddess who presided over shepherds and flocks; Pomona, the goddess of fruit-trees; Ceres, of the fruit of the ground and agriculture.

Vertumnus was the deity worshipped in connexion with the change of the seasons and the like, but more particularly with the transformation of plants and their progress to fruit from blossom. The story is that when Vertumius was in love with Pomona he assumed various forms, in the end gaining her by appearing as a blooming youth. Pomona when she fled. In all the beauty Pomona is described as possessing where the story is related by Ovid, Metam. xiv.

396. Yet virgin of Proscrpina. Before she had conceived Proserpina of whom Jove was the father.

402. All things. Gov. by amid; or, according to some, by 'to have' understood.

405. Of thy presumed return. To be taken with failing. 'Much failing of thy presumed return.

Bushing is the original reading; blushing, which was proposed by Bentley, is also common.

432. The same simile occurs in iv. 270.

436. Then, now. At one time, at another.

438. The hand of Eve. Her handiwork. Cf:-

> Artificumque manus inter se operumque laborem Miratur.— Eneid, i. 455.

440. Or, \ldots, or . Either,or.

Of revived Adonis, or renowned Alcinous. The gardens of Adonis and Alcinous were proverbial for their beauty. Pliny writes:-Antiquitas nihil priùs mirata est quam Hesperidum hortos, ac regum Adonidis et Alcinoi, xix. 4. At the festival of Adonis flower-pots containing lettuce and fennel, and called the 'gardens of Adonis,' were carried about. There is an allusion in Shakspeare to this custom :--

> Thy promises are like Adonis' garden, That one day bloomed, and fruitful were the next. Henry VI, Part I, i. 6.

clii] NOTES.

and in Spenser, Facrie Queene, iii. 6. Alcinous was the king of the Phæacians in the island of Scheria, and entertained Ulysses, the son of Laertes. See v. 341, Note.

442. That not mystic. The garden of Solomon, which was not feigned or fabulous. It is described in the Song of Solomon, vi.

450. Tedded grass. To 'ted' is to spread and turn up the fresh mown grass, and thus make it hay.

The same thought occurs in Spenser:—

And all, though pleasant, yet she made much more. Facrie Queene, II, vi. 21.

The hot hell that always in him burns. See iv. 20, Note. 467.

·480. Occasion. Opportunity; i. 178, Note.

et seq. Todd observes, In the sacred drama of Protoplastus, 481. written by Hieron-Zieglerus, and published in 1547, there is a conversation between Lucifer, Belial, and Satan, on the method to be employed in seducing Adam and Eve; when Satan declines assailing the man and says :-

> Heus, non virum tentabimus, mulier erit His rebus aptior, viri ingenium scio, Flecti nequit, frangi potest muliere dicto.--ii. 3.

Exempt from wound. In like manner Eve had remarked that they were 'not capable of death or pain,' line 283,-their condition before the Fall.

488. To. Compared with; see iv. 78, Note.

Though terror be in love, &c. A lovely and beautiful woman will inspire fear, unless the person who approaches her is more influenced by hatred for her than by the effect of her beauty.

496. Indented wave. Shakspeare applies this epithet to the motions of a snake :-

Nor with indented glides did slip away. As You Like It: iv. 3.

497. Not prone on the ground, as since. Genesis, iii. 14.

Not those that in Illyria, &c. Cadmus and his wife Hermione or Harmonia were changed into serpents for having slain one sacred to Mars (Ovid, Mctum. iv). The serpents 'changed' them, but after their transformation they were still Harmonia and Cadmus; hence the expression, though unusual, is correct; and stands for 'Not those that Hermione and Cadmus were changed into.'

Pearce suggests that 'were' may be understood before 'changed;' 'those that were changed, viz. Hermione and Cadmus.' Dunster and Todd place a comma after 'changed,' and take 'changed' to mean 'underwent a change.' Cf. the use of changing, x. 541.

506. God in Epidaurus. Æsculapius, the god of medicine, the chief seat of whose worship was in Epidaurus. Being sent for to Rome in the time of a plague, he went there in the form of a serpent (Metam. xv). God, obj. on changed.

507. Nor to which. Nor were those serpents lovelier in whose forms Jupiter Ammon, or the Capitoline Jupiter appeared; the former with the mother of Alexander the Great, the latter with the mother of Scipio. Jupiter Ammon, the Lybian Jove, was an Egyptian deity. It was fabled that he appeared in the form of a screent to Olympias, and that she bore Alexander the Great to him. Dryden alludes to the story in Alexander's Feast:-

> The song began from Jove, Who left his blissful seats above, (Such is the power of mighty love). A dragon's fiery form belied the god; Sublime on radiant spires he rode, When he to fair Olympia pressed; And while he sought her snowy breast Then round her slender waist he curled, And stamped an image of himself, a sovereign of the world.

Similarly in flattery of Scipio Africanus he is said to have owed his birth to Jupiter Capitolinus, so called from his temple on the Capitol.

515. Steers. Keightley suggests that Milton may have dictated veers.

522. Circean call. Alluding to the effect of the magic cup of Circe, whose charms induced the followers of Ulysses to partake of it, upon which they were turned into swine. Ovid, Metam. xiv.

> Who knows not Circe, The daughter of the sun, whose charmed cup Whoever tasted lost his upright shape, And downward fell into a grovelling swine? —Comus, 50—53.

With serpent tongue, or &c. Either making the serpent's tongue the organ or instrument, or by striking a sound like that of a voice on the air. Patrick Hume's note is: That the Devil moved the serpent's tongue, and used it as an instrument to form that tempting speech he made to Eve, is the opinion of some; that he formed a voice by the impression of the sounding air, distant from the serpent. is that of others; of which our author has left the curious to their choice.

532-548. Compare this speech with that of the 'gentle voice' which Eve heard in her dream, v. 37-47.

549. Glozed. Flattered. See Note on gloss, v. 435. Compare Comus, 160-164, and Paradise Regained, iv. 5.

558. Demur. Hesitate about, doubt; the noun is used similarly in ii. 431.

Thee,.....I knew. I knew thee to be the subtlest beast, &c. 563. Speakable. Able to speak. Of mute. 'From being mute,' or 'among mute creatures;' cf. 'of brute, human,' 712.

581. Smell of sweetest fenuel, Sc. He mentions such things as were reputed to be most agreeable to serpents; according to Pliny (Nat. Hist., xix. 9, 56,) they delighted in fermel, and they were likewise supposed to suck the teats of ewes or goats.

Got. Arrived; agreeing with I in 596. 594.

Retained. Bentley proposes restrained; but, as Warburton remarks, the word of strictest propriety is retained. For retained signifies the being kept within such and such bounds in a natural state; restrained, to be kept within them in an unnatural; but the serpent's being confined to his own shape, was being in his natural state. Retained to this shape. To is not the preposition we should use with retained.

605. Middle. The air, 'between (heaven and earth) spun out,'

vii. 241.

612. Universal Dame. Mistress of the Universe. Dame, domina, lady, does not convey the same idea of respect now as in Milton's day, or even more recent times, being formerly the title for the wife of a Knight, in which use Lady has displaced it.

613. Spirited. Possessed with a spirit; compare the use of the word in iii. 717.

624. Bearth. Almost all modern editions have birth; but bearth is Milton's spelling here, though everywhere else he writes birth. But in this passage he does not mean birth merely, but intends something more, the produce of nature already born, which she is bearing at the time, her burden,—her bearth.

630. Conduct. Leadership, leading.

633. Swift, agreeing with he.

634. As when a wandering fire, &c. This simile of the ignis fatuus, or Will of the Wisp, is well chosen, there being so many points of resemblance;—its light and the glistering of the snake; the delusiveness of both; 'some Evil Spirit (they say) attending;' the effect on the person who follows the misleading fire.

635. Compact of. Composed, made up of. Compact is now only used metaphorically but formerly was used in its literal sense; as

A cunning carpenter, getting together fit matter for his purpose, compacted of wood, wire, paste, and paper, a rood of such exquisite art and excellency. Lambarde. Perambulation of Kent, p. 227.

640. Misleads the amazed night-wanderer, Sc. Another turn of Shakspeare's line:--

Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm.

Midsummer Night's Dream, ii. 1.

643. Fraud. Misfortune, harm; one of the meanings of fraus:

Quis deus in fraudem, quæ dura potentia nostri Egit.—Æneid, x. 72.

Milton uses fraud in the same signification in vii, 143, where he speaks of Satan having led the angels into fraud.

644. The tree of prohibition. A Hebrew idiom for 'the prohibited tree.'

648. Fruitless, agreeing with coming.

649. Rest. Optative mood. Todd and the Clarendon Press editions have rests,—in each case an oversight, probably.

653. Daughter of his voice. His word; a Hebrew phrase. "So arrows," says Hume, "are called the 'sons of the quiver' (Lament. iii. 13), and corn the 'son of the threshing floor' (Isaiah, xxi. 11)," It was the only command God had given, and so is said to be sole; see iv. 428, 433. The rest. A classical idiom; as for the rest, in other respects. We live law to ourselves. Romans, ii. 14.

- 656. Indeed! hath God then said, &c. The first seven verses of the Third Chapter of Genesis bring us to the end of the Book :-
- iii. 1. Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yen, hath God said. Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

2. And the woman said unto the screent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden;

3. But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

4. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die;

For God doth know that in the day ye cat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

- 6. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did cat.
- 7. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.

672. Since mute. Either in Athens and Rome, or in general.

Addressed. See Note on addressed, vi. 296.

673-674. Stood in himself collected. This expression has been borrowed by Dryden (Theodore and Honora, 98, and Aurengzebe, iv. 1) and Pope (Iliad, ix, 512). Each Part. Each part of the orator, head, hand, limb, &c.; (each) motion, every movement and gesture; each act, all his actions.

Ere the tongue. Understand 'won audience,' or 'gave utterance.' Professor Masson has no point after tongue, thus making it (instead of orator) the subject of began; - which is an innovation, and is unnoticed in his Notes.

686. Life to knowledge. Life in addition to knowledge.

Since easier shunned. Since it would be more easily shunned 699. if known.

Your fear itself, &c. You being afraid of incurring the 702. punishment of death from God throws a doubt on his justice, but he cannot be unjust and be God, and so your fear is groundless.

To put on Gods. The expression is taken from the English version of the Scriptures: "This corruptible must put on incorrup-

Can envy dwell in heavenly hearts? The words of Virgil: 729.Tantæne animis cœlestibus iræ.—Æneid, i. 11.

Humanc. Human; see ii. 109, Note.

Which to behold, 'The sight of which;' the whole expression is the subject of might tempt, and not which only.
738. Seeming. Thinking; a noun. With truth goes with impregned. 739. The hour of noon drew on, &c. Newton observes: "This is a circumstance beautifully added by our author to the Scripture clvi NOTES.

account, in order to make the folly and impiety of Eve appear less extravagant and monstrous." Dunster remarks thereon: "I should not, however, attribute beauty to this circumstance on the ground on which Dr. Newton has done it. All these little circumstances, marking the particular hour of any transaction and noting the procession of time, furnish materials that are interesting and enlivening; and I would estimate them as varying and relieving the general narration and description. It may be observed that, in Paradise Regained, Milton has laid the temptation of the banquet nearly at noon, ii. 292."

With desire. Causing desire; "a tree to be desired," Genesis. iii. 6.

742. Inclinable. Inclined; bent down, literally.

754. Infers. Proves; as in viii. 91; ix. 285; and cf. vii. 116.

757. Not had at all. This is the reading of all the editions, till the Clarendon Press, which has had not at all,—without remark.

771. Author unsuspect. An informant not to be suspected (of a wrong motive).

777. Fair to the eye, &c. Genesis, iii. 6.

781. Eat. This is the old spelling, and that in Milton's editions; it is pronounced et., cf. beat the past tense of beat. Some modern editions have atc.

Todd's note is:—Compare the Sarcotis of Masenius, lib., ii. p. 110 cd. Barbou; where Sarcothea is represented reaching forth her hand to pluck the forbidden fruit, but not yet gathering it; a similar prodigy, however, occurs:-

Obtulit illa manus primum : sed dextra retractans Sponte redit. Natura nefas horrescere visa, Pondere tam gravium cæpit titubare malorum.

yet this prodigy is neither so affecting, nor so poetical in the description, as that of Milton. In Masenius also, after Sarcothea had eaten, a long description follows of the various prodigies which succeeded:

Mora nulla, solutus Avernus

Expuit infandas acies, fractumque remugit

Divulsa compage solum, &c.

Twenty more lines are employed in painting the convulsions of earth, sea, and air on the occasion. I need not observe to the reader with what conciseness and energy, with what beauty and judgment, Milton's scene of 'completing the mortal sin original' is drawn. Virgil, as Addison observes, has related that the earth trembled, the Heavens flashed with lightnings, and the Nymphs howled on the mountain-tops when Dido was ruined. But though the reader should ransack all the volumes of poetry, both ancient and modern, he would never find a passage which might be brought in competi-790. Nor was Godhead from her thought. 'By this sin fell the angels.'

792. Knew not eating death. A Greek idiom; 'did not know herself (to be) eating death.'

793. Boon. Merry, gay.

795. Precious of all trees. 'Most precious tree,' a classical idiom. Cf. 'sancte deorum,' Eneid, iv. 576.

797. Infamed. Not famed, uncelebrated.

807. Experience. Nom. of address; Experience, i. e., the result of her experiment, is personified. Owe. Am indebted.

815. Safe. In the old sense of scrure, over-confident; feeling safe because he has all his spies about. Pearce explains it: Safe here signifies as in the vulgar phrase 'I have him safe,' or 'he is safe asleep,' where not the safety of the person secured or asleep is meant but the safety of others with respect to any danger from him.

823. 825. On this passage Newton refers us to Chaucer's Wife of Bath's Tale, "wherein the question is proposed 'What is it that women inost affect and desire.' Some say wealth, some beauty, some flattery, some in short one thing and some another, but the true answer is sovereignty. And the thought of attaining the superiority over her husband is very artfully made one of the first that Eve entertains, after her eating of the forbidden fruit, but still her love of Adam, and jealousy of another Eve, prevail even over that; so just is the observation of Solomon, Caut., viii. 6. Love is strong as death, jealousy is cruel as the grave."

826—833. What if Gall have seen, &c. Todd notes: Perhaps the most striking instance of imitation by Milton, of the rabbi Eliezer, is this part, Archbishop Lawrence has shown, of Eve's soliloquy: "Forsan jam moriar, et Sanctus Benedictus parabit illi aliam uxorem. Sed dabo quoque Adamo, et causa illi ero ut edat mecum; ut si morianur; ambo simul morianur: si viyamus, ambo quoque in vita maneamus".

simul moriamur; si vivamus, ambo quoque in vita maneamus".

838. Adam had wove a yarland. Newton cites as a parallel the story of Andromache amusing herself similarly and preparing for the return of Hector, not knowing he had been slain by Achilles, Iliad, xxii. 440.

845. Divine of. Foretelling, foreboding; a Latin phrase, 'imbrium divina avis imminentum,' Hor. Odes, iii. 27, 10.

846. He the fullering measure felt. He felt that his heart misgave him; felt it beating unequally.

854. Apology to prompt. This is the reading in all the early editions; Fenton proposed too, for to, which has been adopted by Newton, Todd, and others. Either makes very good sense, but there is no occasion to alter the line as it stood in the poet's editions, the metaphor drawn from the stage being kept up.

864. A tree of danger tasted. A tree of danger when tasted.

888. Dunster's note is: In reading this verse, it is absolutely necessary to make a long pause after Adam; which gives time, as it were to the poet, and for the reader also, to contemplate or imagine Adam's extreme horror, before the description of it is entered upon; or we may suppose the poet pausing himself, as it were, to consider in what language he shall adequately describe such extreme horror. In short, it is a pause which the imagination of the poetical reader will not fail to avail itself of and to turn to good effect. Let us only vary the position of the words:—

Adam, on the other side, soon as he heard, &c.

and we shall be more sensible of the kind of effect, which it is now so peculiarly calculated to produce.

890. Horror chill, &c. Virgil's expression, Æncid, ii. 120; xii. 951.

892. The garland wreathed for Eve down dropt. The similar circumstance told in Spenser (Facric Queene, iii. 4, 30) of Cymoent flinging away the garlands she was making on hearing of the misfortune that had befallen her son, has been noted. Milton's description of the scene is perfect, and adapted to the situation in which Adam was, the garland dropping unconsciously from his hand as he stood in mute amazement.

893. Shed. Were scattered; intrans.

901. Devote. Doomed, see iii. 208, Note.

Thy love so dearly joined. That is, the love of thee so dearly joined to me.

The very idea of his being left without her makes him think of Paradise as if already a wilderness.

922. Who hust. This is the reading in the First Edition; the Second has hath; the former is received as the correct reading, but the Clarendon Press adopts hath. And in the original editions there is no comma after dared, showing that it is to be taken with to eye.

Fact. Act or deed; ii. 124, Note.

932. He yet lives. Todd and Keightley have yet he lives, -a misprint apparently.

946-951. This is similar to the argument used by Moses in his intercession for the children of Israel, Numbers, xiv. 15, 16; Decteronomy, xxxii. 27.

953. Certain. Resolved, determined.
965. Adam? In some editions the note of interrogation is after attain; Todd carries it down to the end of the sentence at known, 976. Were it. If it were that.

979. Rather die. I would rather die.

980. Oblige thee. Render thee liable to the punishment of. Oblige is here used in the sense of obligare, to bind:-

Sed tu simul obligasti

Perfidum votis caput. Horace, Odes ii. 8, 5.

989. Deliver to the winds. A proverbial expression; Horace, Odes, i. 26; Homer, Odyssey, viii. 409.

998. Not deceived. 1 Timothy, ii. 14; Genesis, iii. 17.

1007. That now. So that now; and the result was that.

1011. To scorn the earth. Horace's 'spernit humum fugiente penna, Odes, iii. 2. 24.

1016. Gan. See vi. 60, Note.

Exact of taste and elegant. Exact and elegant of taste. 1017.

1018. Since to each meaning, &c. We apply the word savour both to the understanding and the palate. Savour and sapience in English, and saveur and savoir in French, come from sapere, which means both 'to have a taste of,' and 'to be wise.'

1023. Nor known, &c. And we have not known true relish in what we have tasted before.

1027. Play is used in the same sense as in Ewodus, xxxii. 6.

Milton may have had in mind the conversation between 1029. Paris and Helen in the third Iliad, as well as that between Jupiter and June on Mount Ida in the fourteenth Iliad.

1034, &c. Compare the description of the love scenes between Adam and Eve before the Fall. iv. 736-743; viii. 510-520.

1049. Sleep, bred of unkindly fumes. Very different from the sleep

they enjoyed in their state of innocence, v. 3.

1058. He covered. Shame covered Adam and Eve, but his clothing uncovered them more; though they were 'clothed with shame' (Psalms, cix. 28) they were thereby rendered more naked. They had lost the veil of Innocence, and the robe of Shame only discovered their nakedness. Cf:--

> In vain thou strivest to cover shame with shame; Or by evasions thy crime uncoverest more.

-Samson Agonistes, 841, 842.

1059. To. Understand the correlative as before they, 1062; their places too are interchanged. Just as Samson rose shorn of his strength, so they rose destitute of all their virtue. The Danite. Samson was the tribe of Dan; Judges, xiii. 2.

1060. The harlot lap &c. Judges, xvi. 4—19. 1061. Dalilah. In the English Bible it is Delilah; but Milton spells and pronounces it Dalilah.

1064. Strucken. An old form of stricken.

Worm. The word worm was formerly applied to all kinds 1068. of reptiles; see vii. 476, Note.

1078. Evil store. Evil in store, in abundance; see v. 322, Note.

1079.Shame, the last of evils. Last is greatest. Shame is so described by Euripides:

μεγίστη τῶν ἐν ἀνθρώποις νόσων πασῶν,ἀναιδεια.—Medea, 472.

1068. Woods impenetrable to star. Newton quotes the expression from Statius:

> Nulli penetrabilis astro Lucus iners.—Thebais, x. 85.

1088. Cover me ye cedars. See Hosca, x. 8; Revelation, vi. 16.

1101. The fig tree. In Gerard's Herball there is an account of the 'arched Indian fig-tree,' from which Milton appears to have borrowed his description, adopting some of the expressions word for word. The tree, however, spoken of in the Herball, is the banyan, its being there called the fig-tree led Milton to treat it as the tree from which Adam and Eve procured the fig leaves of which they 'made them-selves aprous.' Pliny's account of the Ficus Indica is similar (lib. xii. c. 5) and referred to by Gerard. He says, Ipsa se serens, vastis diffunditur ramis; quorum imi adeo in terram curvantur, ut annuo spatio infigantur, novamque sibi propaginem faciant circa parentem quodam opere topiario-fornicato ambitu;-intra sepem cam æstivant pastores; foliorum latitudo peltæ effigiem Amazonicæ habet. This latter particular does not hold good of the banyan, its leaves being small for a forest tree. In Dellon's Voyage to the East Indies, translated from the French in 1698, there is an account of a "the bananas or Indian figs; the tree or stalk on which they grow is different from ours, it seldom grows above eight or ten feet high, without any branches. The least of the figs are about three inches long, their skin grows yellow as they ripen, their peel is pretty thick, not very close to the pulp, which is very white, and of an admirable taste." If then, as appears, both the banyan and the banana, or plantain, were known as the Indian 'figs,' we have the explanation of the banyan being described as 'renowned for fruit' and with 'leaves broad as Amazonian targe,' so true of the banana or plantain.

1140. Approve. Prove, put to the test. This is said in reference to Eve's reasoning in line 335.

1157. Facile. Yielding, pliant. Gainsay. Oppose, say against it. Is this the love? Bentley reads, 'Is this thy love?' which 1163. is an improvement, they being contrasted with mine in the next line.

1170. In thy restraint. In restraining thee. In Tonson's edition of 1711 it is 'in my restraint.' which is followed by Tickell, Fenton, and Bentley; the correct reading was restored by Newton.

Women is the reading of the old editions; Bentley reads coman on account of the pronouns that follow being in the singular.

BOOK X.

1. Heinous. Formerly spelt and pronounced hainous. Fr. haineux, fr. hain, hatred, malice. How much better the line would read, as it used to be read, if we said hainous?

8. Attempt. Another form of tempt.

Armed. The comma after armed is the punctuation of the original editions, but it was removed by Dunster, (who is followed by Keightley and Masson) unnecessarily and wrongly I think. Their interpretation is that 'full armour,' 'cap-à-pir, is what is intended, and that so we should have 'armed complete.' But to me it seems that the pause after armed, and the expansion of the idea in the next clause, is quite Miltonic. The comma after armed does not cause complete to go with man; but, his 'free-will was armed, --completely so to have discovered any fraud.'

11. Whatever. Any at all.

12. The antecedent is man, a noun of multitude. They.

38. Foretold. Having been foretold.

40-47. I told ye, &c. In iii. 86-96. Speed. See iv. 13, Note.

45. Moment. Force; see ii. 448, vi. 239, Notes. Moment, inclining and scale. Metaphors from weighing in a balance.

54. Justice shall not return, &c. Justice shall not return back, as Bounty has done, treated with scorn and rejected.

To thee, &c. John, v. 22.

66. All his Father. See iii. 139, vii. 196; and Hebrews, i. 3.

69. Mine. It is my business. Cf. Virgil, Eneid, i. 76.
74. When time shall be. When the time for it comes round. So I undertook. See iii. 236--265.

77. Derived. Lit., diverted from its course.

80. Attendance none shall need. No attendance will be necessary. Need is the neuter verb, cf. iii. 341.

83. Convict. Formerly convince and convict retained the root meaning of to overcome, whether by might or argument. In seventeenth century English a man might be said to be convinced of guilt who would not himself admit that he was in the wrong, who was not what we now mean by convinced. Convict was similarly used, to overpower and to prove guilty; thus here 'convict by flight, conviction to the serpent none belongs,' means He has proved himself guilty by taking to flight, no proving of his guilt is necessary. Again in line 831, 'All my evasions lead me still to my own conviction',—to convincing me of my guilt.

So, by a soaring tempest on the flood, A whole armada of convicted sail Is scattered. King John, iii. 4.

- 93. Now was the sun, &c. 'The cool of the day,' as the Scriptures express it. The account of God's interview with Adam in the garden, as far as line 208, is as follows (Genesis, iii, 8—21):—
- iii. 8. And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day; and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees of the garden.
- 9. And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?
- 10. And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.
- 11. And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou enten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldst not eat?
- 12. And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.
- 13. And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that then hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.
- 14. And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou cut all the days of thy life;
- 15. And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.
- 16. Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee.
- 17. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying Thou shalt not eat of it, cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;
- 18. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field;
- 19. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

20. And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother

21. Unto Adam also and to his wife did the Lord God make coats of skins, and clothed them.

106. Obvious. Meeting in the way. Common in this sense in Milton.

156. Person. Character; used in its primary sense, persona dramatis. In his History of England, Milton uses person in the same sense, the part or character one acts.

168. Then. Therefore.

169-173. More to know, &c. To know more did not concern man, nor did it alter his offence; it was of no importance that he should be told then that the serpent was merely the instrument, and who Satan was who had really tempted him; still God, in sentencing the serpent at the last applied the serpent's doom to Satan, though in terms unintelligible to Adam, as was thought best then.

Dust shalt cat. Newton misprints shall.

Oracle. The word spoken.

184-191. The Scripture references are Luke, x. 18; Ephesians, ii. 22; Colossians, iii. 15; Psalms, lxviii. 18; Romans, xvi. 20.

205. Shalt thou. Professor Masson, or his printer, has transposed these words.

214. The form of servant. Philippians, ii. 7.

215. As when he washed, &c. John xiii.

Beasts or slain, &c. Beasts which were either slain for the purpose, or supplied with a fresh coat, as the snake,—the one cast off being given to Adam and Eve. This last hypothesis is ridiculous.

219-223. Romans, v. 10; Isaiah, lxi. 10.

Was sinned and judged. Impersonals, after the Latin idiom; so in vi. 335.

231. Counterview. Vis-à-vis; face to face, 'each other viewing.' 233. Since the Fiend passed through, &c. See ii. 648 et. seq.

260. For intercourse, &c. For going to and from the world, or leaving this altogether, whichever may turn out to be their lot.

273. As when a flock, &c. Quotations might be multiplied of vultures and other birds of prey coming long distances after a battle; Todd quotes :---

'Tis said of vultures.

They scent a field fought, and do smell the carcasses By many hundred miles. Beaumout and Fletcher. Beggar's Bush.

But Milton's simile is that they scent the slaughter to be, before the battle is fought.

279. Feature. See ii. 666. 281. Quarry. Prey; common in Shakspeare and Spenser either for the dead body of the animal hunted or the animal itself.

288. Shoaling. See Note on shoals, vii. 400.

The Cronian sea. Part of the frozen ocean at the north pole; 'a day's sail beyond Thule,' says Pliny. Cellarius in his Geographia Plenior says 'Credunt quidam Gronium legendum ut cum Grönlandia magis conveniat.' Ed. 1703, ii. 5.

- 291. The imagined way. It being supposed that there might be a North-East passage to the Indies.
 - 292. Petsora. The Petchora which falls into the Arctic Ocean.
- 293. The Cathaian coast. Cathay, Catay, China. In Milton's Brief History of Moscovia, and of other less known countries lying Eastward of Russia as far as Cathay, Chap. v. gives an account of "the first discovery of Russia by the north-east, in 1553."

294. Petrific. Petrifying; formed like magnific.

296. Delos, floating once. Delos, one of the Cyclades; mentioned before, v. 265. According to the legend, it was called out of the deep by the trident of Poscidon, but was a floating island until Zeus fastened it by adamantine chains to the bottom of the sea, that it might be a secure resting-place to Leto for the birth of Apollo and Artemis. Smith. Classical Dictionary.

297. Gorgonian rigour. See ii. 611, Note.

305. Inoffensive. As in viii. 164. See Matthew, vii. 13.

308. Memnonian palace. Herodotus calls Susa Memnonia.

312—318. Now had they brought the work, &c. Though in the original there is no comma after chaos, line 317, the construction must be 'Now had they brought the work,—by wondrous pontifical art,—a ridge of hanging rock, over the vexed abyss, to the bare outside of this round world, following the track of Satan to the selfsame place where he first lighted, &c.

313. Pontifical. In its derivative sense of bridge-making; in this sense it is peculiar to Milton, as is the word pontifice, 348.

315. Where he first alighted. See iii. 418-422 and 498-501.

328. Steering his zenith. Steering for, directing his course to, the zenith.

332. After Eve seduced. After the seduction of Eve; cf. 'Since created man,' i. 573.; and see line 577.

344. Understood not instant. Found out to be not immediate. In Milton's editions and until altered by Tickell there was a full stop at time, 345; but which understood is evidently the case absolute, and understood a participle.

368. Confined. Agreeing with us taken out of our; 'the liberty of us confined.'

381. His quadrature. There may be an allusion to the description of the New Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 16). 'The city lieth four square.' Hume quotes from Gassendus: Colum Empyreum, mentium beatarum sedes, habetur formæ exterius quadratæ, quod Civitas Sancta, in Apocalypsi descripta, posita in quadro dicatur.

390. Triumphal, &c. That have met my triumphant act—the conquest of the new world, with a triumphal act of yours—the construction of this bridge so near Heaven's door. Keightley has a comma after act and removed the one after met, "as it destroys the sense;" but he has missed both sense and construction.

392. Continent. Continuous tract of land. 402. Make sure. Secure; be certain of making.

415. The causey. Highway, road, embankment. From its meaning a way, causey has been corrupted into causeway; way, however, has nothing to do with the root; causey is from Fr. chausee, and that clxiv NOTES.

from calceuta (via), a road paved with chalk. In the Bible of 1611 we have causeway in Chronicles, xxvi. 18, for what in the 'Breeches Bible' is translated 'the paved street;' and causey itself occurs as a marginal reading to Proverbs, xv. 19.

416. Exclaimed. Cried aloud, roared.

418. That. The antecedent is bars. His. Of Chaos.

424. Pandemonium. See i. 756.

426. Paragoned. Likened. See v. 708 and 756, and Notes.

427. The grand. The chiefs, the grandees; the 'grand infernal peers,' ii. 507.

431. As when, &c. As when the Tartar retreats from his Muscovite enemy, over the snowy plains by Astracan, a considerable part of the Czar's dominion, formerly a Tartarian kingdom, with a capital city of the same name, near the mouth of the river Volga, at its fall into the Caspian sea; or Bactrian Sophi, or the Persian emperor, named Bactrian of Bactria, one of the greatest and richest provinces of Persia, lying near the Caspian Sea, (retiring) from the horns of Turkish crescent, from his Turkish enemies who bear the horned moon, the crescent, in their ensigns, leaves all waste beyond the realm of Aladule, the greater Armenia, called by the Turks (under whom the greatest part of it is) Aladule, from its last king Aladules, slain by Selymus the First, in his retreat to Tauris, a great city in the kingdom of Persia, now called Echatana, sometime in the hands of the Turks, but in 1603 retaken by Abas, king of Persia, or Casbren, one of the greatest cities of Persia, in the province of Ayrach, formerly Parthia, towards the Caspian Sea, where the Persian monarchs made their residence after the loss of Tauris, from which it is distant sixty-five German miles to the south-east. (Hume).

411-452. Unmarked, Sc. Newton thinks this incident to be copied from the similar one related of Eneas. Eneid, i. 439-440; 586

—589.

452. All. An adverb; entirely.

456. Consulting peers.....divan. See i. 794-798.

461. For in possession such, &c. See v. 773.

477. Unoriginal. Having no origin or beginning.

492. Dwell. Inhabit. Used actively without a prep., as in iii. 670.

499. Set. Appointed, determined.

512. Clung. Not necessarily, as Professor Masson says, "for clinging"; but the past part., under the same construction as drawn.

513. Supplanted. 'Taken off his feet;' the literal meaning of supplantare. Dunster points out that both supplanted and reluctant (515) are terms of the gymnasium (luctus and supplantatio), and that Milton preserves in both the gymnastic idea.

514. A monstrous serpent, &c. Compare with this the transformation of Cadmus in Ovid's Metamorphoses; iv. 575; referred to before in ix. 506. Some of the expressions in a similar transformation scene in Dante are the same as here:—

The pierced spirit
Drew close his steps together, legs and thighs
Compacted.
The shoulders next I marked, that entering joined

The monster's armpits, whose two shorter feet So longthened as the others dwindling shrunk. The feet behind them twisting up became That part that man conceals......Meanwhile extends His sharpened visage, and draws down the ears Into the head. Carey's Inferno, xxv.

521. Riot. The reference is to his having deceived Eve; but it is a peculiar application of the word. Johnson, in his Dictionary, explains it as 'sedition, uproar,' in this passage, which, however, is the only one he quotes under that meaning of riot.

524—526. Scorpion, §v. The different kinds of reptiles he names here are from Pliny, Nicander, and Lucan's Pharsalia. The scorpion noted for its venomous sting; the asp for its poison (Romans, iii. 13) and deadly sting (Facric Queene, iv.); the amphishmua is said to have a head at both ends, and is so named from ἀμφι and βαίνω, 'going both ways'; the cerastes was horned, hence the name from κερας, a horn; the hydrus, a water snake, ὑδωρ, water; the clops is said to give no sound of its advance, and hence drear, doleful; and the dipsus (δίψος, thirst) caused those whom it stung to suffer unquenchable thirst.

526. The soil bedropt, Sc. Lybia; the fable, that accounted for the number of serpents in it, being that as Perseus was carrying the bleeding head of the Gorgon Medusa through the air,

The gory drops distilled as swift he flew And from each drop envenomed serpents grew.

The story is told in Ovid, Metam. iv. 616, and Lucan, Pharsalia, ix-696. For other references in Milton to the Gorgon see the Index.

527. The isle of Ophiusa, in the Mediterranean, was also notorious for serpents, and hence its name of the Snake-island, in Greek Ophiusa (opis, a snake), in Latin Colubraria (coluber). Ovid speaks of Cyprus as ophiusa arva.

529. Dragon grown, &c. The 'great Dragon' is one of the titles applied to Satan in Scripture, Revolution, xii. 9; and so Milton describes him as larger even than the fabulous Python produced from the mud left on the earth after the deluge of Deucalion, as related in Ovid, Metans, i. 438.

531. No less &c. No less than before his transformation. The and of this line joins the clause to still greatest of 528.

536. Sublime. On 'tip-toe,' or 'elated;' see ii. 528, Note.

541. Changing. Change for instead of change into; cf. the use of change, ix. 505.

546. Exploding. Explode literally means to drive an actor off the stage with a hiss; it is so used again in xi. 669. Triumph to shame.

"I will change their glory into shame." Hosen, iv. 7.

560. Megæra. One of the three Eumenidæ, or Furies; fearful winged maidens, with serpents twined in their hair, and blood dropping from their eyes. They dwelt in the depths of Tartarus, dreaded by Gods and men. The names of the others were Tisiphone and Alecto.

561. That which grew, &c. The 'apples of Sodom,' the name given to a fruit described by Josephus as to be found growing out of clxvi notes.

the ashes of the 'cities of the plain,' which appeared fair to the outside but on being touched dissolved into ashes and smoke.

562. Where Sodom flamed. Genesis, xix. 24-29.

565. Gust. The taste and relish. With gust. With gusto, con gusto.

568. Drugged. Nauscated as one is with a bitter drug. According to the punctuation, which is Milton's, drugged agrees with them taken out of their, and jaws is the subject of writhed. 'Of them, drugged as oft (as they tasted), the jaws, filled with soot and einders, writhed with hatefullest disrelish.' Keightley, not discovering that writhed is a neuter verb, "removed the comma after oft, as they drugged is the nom. to writhed."!

572. Triumphed. Triumphed over; the omission of the prep. is common in Milton.

573. In Milton's editions there is no comma after and, while there is one after famine. The line was accordingly a puzzle to commentators, the want of a conjunction between with famine and long and ceaseless hiss, being the chief stumbling-block; "but that," says Newton, "might be remedied thus;

And worn with famine, and long ceaseless hiss.

Or thus:

And worn with famine long, and ceaseless hiss.

Keightley was the first to see that hiss is a verb, and punctuates accordingly. It is unquestionably the correct reading; making both the best pause and sense; and I know of no more common error among last century printers (and some of the present day too) than the separation of the subject or object and its verb by a single comma, as in the old reading here, though not always thereby necessarily making the sentence ambiguous or misleading. Out of many examples that might be given from Milton's editors, take one or two:—Newton, Keightley, Major, Edmonston, Prendeville, Brydges, and the Clarendon Press read

God

Approaching, thus to Adam called aloud. x. 101.

Professor Masson has

Nor set thy heart

and in various editions, x. 1016; xi. 21, and 540, are wrongly pointed.

574. Permitted. Agreeing with they.

577. Dash. See Index to the Notes. Man seduced. The seduction of man; a Latin idiom common with Milton; cf. 'that tasted fruit,' line 687, and see i. 573, Note.

579. Purchase. Acquisition.

580—584. Falled how the serpent, &c. In this passage he speaks of the two dynasties of Gods among the Greeks before Zeus was regarded as supreme. First Ophion, i. e. Serpent, and Eurynome ruled in Olympus or Heaven; then Saturn and Ops, having driven Ophion thence, were in possession until Jove in his turn drove them out.

See the allusion to the story before, i. 510—514 and Notes, The word Eurynome means Wide-ruling, and, he says, 'just as Ophion represented the Serpent, so perhaps Eve, who was also 'wide-encroaching,' appears as Eurynome in the fable. Jove is called Dictoral from Dicte, a mountain in Crete, his birth-place.

590. His pale horse. "I looked, and behold a pale horse, and his name that sat upon it was Death." Revelation, vi. 8.

593. Not better fur. Is it not better far, &c.? In the original there is no note of interrogation except at the end of the sentence. Keightley inserts a second after difficult; Masson a second after now.

597. Famine. See Index to the Notes.

599. Ravin is used in old writers for prey, booty:

As when a gryfon seized of his prey

A dragon fierce encountereth in his flight

That would his rightful ravin rend away. Faerie Queene, i. 5.

601. Maw, &c. See ii. 847. Un-hide-bound corpse. Body which is not tightly bound by its skin, as it would be if it were full. Corpse was not formerly restricted in meaning to a dead body.

602. Incestuous. See ii. 747-818.

617. Havor. Dr. Johnson says that a learned correspondent (Sir William Blackstone) informed him that "in the military operations of old times, havor was the word by which declaration was made that no quarter should be given." Newton sees an allusion to the following passage in Julius Consur:—

Casar's spirit raging for revenge, With Ate by his side come hot from Hell, Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice, Cry Haroc, and let slip the dogs of war. iii. 1.

630. Draff. Dregs, the brewer's grains that are thrown as refuse to pigs.

633. Glutted. Swallowed down; Lat. glutire, Fr. engloutir.

639. To. Up to; not 'for,' as Keightley says.

642. Sung, Halleluiah, β.c. "I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many thunderings saying Halleluiah." Revelation, xix. 6; and see xv. 3, and xvi. 7.

645. Extenuate. Diminish, disparage.

648. Or down from Heaven. 'I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God, out of Heaven.' Revelation, xxi. 2.

651. Sorted. Agreed; see viii. 384, Note. 656. Blanc. Pale, white; cf. i. 786; iii. 732.

657. The other fire. See viii. 128, Note.

659. In sextile, δc . Professor Masson gives the following translation from Belivelius De Sphæra (1582), an old Latin Catechism of Astronomy, which explains all the allusions in this passage:—

"What are the aspects of planets? They are such arrangements and distances of the planets as allow them to intercommunicate their influence. How many species of aspects are there? Five—Conjunction, Sextile, Square, Trine, and Diametral or Opposition. What is the first? The first kind of aspects, called Conjunction, is when two stars or planets are conjoined and as it were connected in one line; by the Greeks it is called Synod. What is the Sextile aspect?

elxviii notes.

When two planets or stars are distant from each other a sixth part of the Zodiac, i. e. two signs or 60°. What is the Square aspect (quadratus aspectus)? When two stars look at each other at an interval of three signs, making a quadrant or 90°. What is trine (Trigonus) aspect? When the distance of the stars measures a third of a circle, that is, 120° or four signs. What is the Diametral aspect? It is the opposite configuration of two luminaries which are distant from each other 180,° or half a circle . . . How are the aspects Into happy and unhappy. Which are the happy and prosperous aspects? The prosperous and benign are the Trine and Sextile. Why are they called happy? Because the rays of the planets, falling obliquely and mutually yielding, infuse and communicate to inferior bodies gentler and less violent influences. What are the unhappy aspects? The unhappy or malignant are Conjunction, Square, and Opposition. Why are they called malignant? Because the planets, meeting each other with their rays, mutually collide, and neither can yield to the other on account of the directness of their onset. Therefore they exercise greater force in stimulating and varying seasons, and in mixing the temperaments of animals and the qualities of the air. Whence is the variety of effects known? The effect and variety of configuration was first observed in the case of the moon, and afterwards transferred to the other planets by artists (artifices), who, by great sharpness of intelligence, and more attentive observation, endeavoured to find out and display the causes of events from the very nature of the heavenly motions and the species of the aspects.

661. Synod. The Greek for conjunction, the Latin term explained

above.

664. Set. Appointed.

666. The thunder. Supply set; they appointed the thunder when it was to roll. Some, however, regard roll as an active verb, and 'rolling the thunder' part of the duty of the winds. When. The time that it should.

682. Unbenighted. Without any night.

685. Which had forbid. Which would have prevented there being snow so far south as Estoliland; or, towards the south pole, as far north beneath the Straits of Magellan. Estoliland is the name on Mercator's maps of the country west of Labrador and east of Hudson's Bay.

687. That tusted fruit. The tasting of that fruit; line 577, Note.

688. Thyestean banquet. The story is that Atreus, King of Mycene, to be revenged on his brother Thyestes who had done him a wrong, pretended to be reconciled and invited him to a banquet, at which the two sons of Thyestes, whom Atreus had killed, were served up, and their father partook of the dish not knowing what had happened until Atreus produced their heads and hands. At this deed of horror the sun is said to have changed his course. Milton changes the accent from Thyestean to Thyéstean.

689. Else, &c. If it did not change its course at the Fall, how could the earth then, more than now, have enjoyed perpetual spring as it did, and not be subject to the extremes of heat and cold?

696. Norumbega. An old name for the French possessions in North America. The Samoed shore. In his Brief History of Moscovia, Chap. ii. Milton gives an account of Samoedia and the inhabitants; it begins: "North-east of Russia lies Samoedia by the river Ob."

698. Gust and flaw. These words are frequently found together in old descriptions of storms, as in Venus and Adonis:

Like a red morn, that ever yet betokened Wreck to the scaman, tempest to the field, Sorrow to shepherds, wee unto the birds,

Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds. 453-456.

But flaw has gone out of use in this sense, and gust is now only a sudden blast of wind, not the violent storm it used to be; the present meaning of gust, it and flaw being treated as synonymous, has led to flaw being regarded merely as a 'sudden blast,' instead of a 'violent storm of wind;' Milton uses it again, clearly in this sense, in Pavalise Regained, see the account of the storm, iv. 410—419, and further on

I heard the wrack
As earth and sky would mingle; but myself
Was distant; and these flaces, though mortals fear them
As dangerous to the pillared frame of heaven. 452—455.

See also the quotations from Drayton and Surrey in Richardson's Dictionary. Fluw is commonly said to be derived from flutus or from φλάω, but it has nothing to do with Greek or Latin, being, as one might expect, Teutonic.

699—706. Boreas and Coccias were the North and North East winds; Thrascias and Argestes, the corresponding winds in the North West. These four northern winds are met from the South by Notus, the South wind, and Afer, the South West. On the other hand, from east and west come the Lecent (or 'rising') winds,—Eurus and Sirocco, and the Ponent ('setting'),—Zephyr and Libecchio. Sirocco and Libeccho are Italian, while the other winds are called by their classical names. With their lateral noise,—being side-winds, as it were,—Sirocco, South east of Eurus, and Libecchio, south west of Zephyr.

701. Blast. Professor Masson has blasts.

719, Disburden. Sc., himself,

720. Miserable of happy.....accursed of blessed. Of for from.

733. Who of all ages, &c. Who is there of all future ages but will curse me, feeling the evil brought on him by me?

736. His thanks. In this line we have one of the jingles which Milton has been found fault with for indulging in: 'He may thank Adam for this! Ay, but our thanks will be curses.' 'The execution.' Viz. 'Ill fare our ancestor.'

738. Mine own, &c. The curses peculiarly mine. All from me.

All the curses propagated from mc?

740: Light heavy. Fall heavily. Keightley has a comma, and Masson a semicolon, after light;—better as in the Text, for heavy is the adverb here, qualifying light.

741. Though in their place. According to the laws of physics they should have no weight at all, being at the centre.

743. Did I request thee, &c. Isaiah, xlv. 9.

748. Equal.....reduce. See Index to the Notes.

756, 757. Then.....when. At the time that.

767. Thy reward was of his grace. Any reward he should give thee was of his favour.

783. All I. All of me, 792; cf:- 'non omnis moriar.'

806. By which, §r. By the law of Nature all other causes act according to the power they have of receiving, and not to the extent of their own powers. This is a translation of an axiom of the schools: Omne efficiens agit secundum vires recipientis, non suas.

815. Death and I am. Some editors, agreeing with Bentley's objection to am, have altered it to are. We often have for emphasis sake, two nouns with a sing. verb; see x. 138, and cf.:

Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one. As You Like It. 1. iii.

822. Your curse. Either the object, or the cause, of your curse.

834. So might the wrath. Would that the wrath were to light on me only! For so, see iii. 34.

852. Death as oft, Sc. He accused Death as oft of being slow, since it was denounced to him the day he offended, and had not yet been put in execution.

859. Slowest. Very slow; superlative without comparison. Her slowest pace. Horace's 'pede pona claudo,' Odes III, ii. 32.

866, Reyard, Look.

872. Pretended to. Stretched forward in front of so as to conceal. 883. And understood not. And joins understood with fooled and bequiled after I, line 880.

886. To the part sinister. There is a play upon the word sinister;—in allusion both to the rib being from the left side (viii. 465), and to sinister meaning 'unlucky.'

887. Supernamerary, &c. In allusion to an idea held by some that before Eve was formed Adam had thirteen ribs on one side,—one over the number men have now.

888. O, why did God, &c. Similarly in Euripides, Hippolytus and Jason cry out against the creation of woman. Hippolytus, 616; Medea, 573.

898. For either, &c. These lines recall the well-known passage in Shakspeare :—

The course of true love never did run smooth, &c.

905. Linked may agree either with he or with choice. His shame in the next line makes the former the more probable construction of the two. His hate and shame. Whom he hates and is ashamed of.

917. Bereave me not, &c. Do not deprive me of that on which I live, your looks, &c.

938. Till peace obtained. Till peace should be obtained.

940. For his heart releated. Throughout the whole of this episode,—in the sentiments in lines 888—908, in Eve's supplication for forgiveness, and in Adam's reconciliation,—there are evident allusions to similar scenes in Milton's own married life.

952. Bearest so ill. Are so little able to endure.

978. As in our evils. In such evils as ours are; considering our evils.

996. Before the present object. In presence of the object within our reach.

997. Like desire. The same desire in each of them.

1000. Make short. Make short work of it; a phrase of the time. 1009. Pale. Paleness; the adj. for the noun, as before, iv. 115.

1024. Forestalled. Newton thought forestall too low and trite for heroic poetry, though, he adds, it might not be so trite and vulgar formerly, and quotes Fairfax as using it. It is also in both Spenser and Shakspeare; and if it was considered vulgar in Newton's day, it is not so now. To forestall primarily meant to purchase articles before they reached the stall or market, for the purpose of selling them at a higher price; it is used only metaphorically now, which may account for its not having a 'low' idea attaching to it still.

1066. Shattering. He uses the same word similarly in Lycidas:—

Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year.

1069. This diarnal star. The sun, called the 'day star' in Lycidus, 168.

1071. Serv. This word appears to have been out of use, last century. Warton, in his note on Ingeidas, 2, says, with reference to Newton's observation, that 'there are more antiquated and obsolete words in that poem than in any other of Milton's.' that the 'word serv is one of the most uncommon of these;' and in his note on the same passage Newton refers us to Paradise Lost, x. 1071, "where" says he, "it was explained and justified from parallel instances from Spenser." Todd too, who belonged to the beginning of this century, thinks it necessary to tell his readers that serv is 'dry,' and adds that it often occurs in Chaucer and Spenser.

1075. Tine. Kindle; another form is tind (cf. rine and rind); and the noun is tinder, -still in use, though both tine and tind have gone out.

1078. Supply. Supply the place of.

1091. Frequenting. Filling; see Index to the Notes.

1098-1104. Repetitions of this kind occur in the Classics; see Georgies, iv. 538, 541.

BOOK XI.

3. Prevenient. See Index to the Notes. Removed the stony, &c. Ezekiel. xi. 19.

Yet refers back to the first line; the intermediate part being parenthetical.

12. Dencalion and chaste Pyrrha. Dencalion was the son of Prometheus and Clymene, king of Phthia, in Thessaly. When Zeus (Jupiter) had resolved to destroy the degenerate race of men, Dencalion and his wife Pyrrha were, on account of their piety, the only mortals saved. On the advice of his father, Dencalion built a ship, in which he and his wife floated in safety during the nine days flood, which destroyed all the other inhabitants of Hellas. At last the ship rested, according to the more general tradition, on Mount Parnassus in Phocis. Deucalion and his wife consulted the sanctuary of Themis how the race of man might be restored. The goddess bade them cover their heads and throw the bones of their mother behind them. After some doubts respecting the meaning of this command, they agreed in interpreting the bones of their mother to mean the stones of the earth. They accordingly threw stones behind them, and from those thrown by Deucalion there sprang up men, from those thrown by Pyrrha women. Deucalion then descended from Parnassus, built his first abode at Opus or at Cynus, and became by Pyrrha the father of Hellen, Amphictyon, Protogenia, and others.

Nor missed the way, &c. Compare iii. 414.

27. Manuring. See Note on manure, iv. 628.

His Advocate and Propitiation. 1 John, ii. 1. 33.

The smell of peace. Genesis, viii. 21; Leviticus, iii. 3, 5. 38.

His days. Cognate obj. on live. Let him reconciled live before thee at least the limited number of days allowed him. Most editions, -Newton, Keightley, Clarendon Press,—point off live from its object by only one comma, after reconciled. Live before thee. A Scriptural expression; "O, that Ishmael might live before thee." Genesis, xvii. 18.

56. Of incorrupt. From the state of being incorrupt.

74. Heard in Oreb since, Sc. See Exodus, xx. 18; and 1 Thessalonians, iv. 16.

General doom. Cf. 'our general sire,' iv. 144; 'general 76. mother,' iv. 492; general being equivalent to 'of all.'

80. In fellowships of joy. Compare the expression in Lycidas, (179) 'in solemn troops, and sweet societies.'

84, 85; 93-122. Genesis, iii. 22-24, as follows:--

And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us; to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever;

23. Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken.

- So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a-flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.
- 86. Defended. Forbidden; used in this sense in Chaucer, and also law statutes, from the French defendre.
- 91-93. Longer than they move, &c. 1 know how variable and vain he is when left to himself, and any longer than my motions are guiding him.

101. Thy choice. See v. 333.

128. Four faces, &c. Ezekiel, x. 12-14.

131. Argus, the 'all-seeing, had a hundred eyes, and was the guardian of the cow into which Io had been metamorphosed. Hermes, or Mercury, the messenger of the gods, was ordered to carry off Io, which he accomplished by charming Argus to sleep with the sweet notes of his Arcadian or shepherd's pipe, and the soporific effects of his caduceus, or herald's staff.

132. Charmed. If they were to be charmed. Bentley objected to 'more wakeful than to drowse'; but it is 'more wakeful than to drowse even if they were to be charmed by Hermes' pipe and rod.'

135. Leucothea. Literally the 'white-goddess;' used by Milton as a suitable name for Aurora; Leucothea being used in Greek for Matuta, the early morning.

Persuasion in me grew. I became persuaded. 152.

157. The bitterness of death, &c. The words of Agag. 1 Samuel,xv.32.

159.Eve rightly called, Sc. Genesis, iii. 20.

The bird of Jove. The eagle; Jovis ales, And, i. 399. Stooped. "A hawk is said to stoop when, being upon her wing, she bends down violently to strike the fowl." Bailey.

186, 188. Two birds.....a gentle brace. Two birds and two deer, as types of the human pair.

208. By this. By this time, now.

213. Not that....in Mahanaim. Genesis, xxxii. 1, 2. 216. Nor that....in Dothan. 2 Kings, vi. 13—17.

219. Levy war. See Note, ii. 501.

Livelier than Melibuan or the grain of Sarra. See Note on grain, v. 285. Virgil alludes to both Melibeea and Sarra as famous for their purple dyes:

Quam plurima circum

Purpura Meandro duplici Melibra cucurrit. Zineid, v. 251.

Ut gemma bibat et Sarrano dormiat ostro. Georgies, ii. 506.

244. Iris had dipt the woof. He has the same metaphor in Comus:

I must put off

These my sky-robes spun out of Iris' woof. 83.

249. From his state. From his stately posture. Inclined not. Did not bow.

259-262. It is after the manner of Homer, that the Angel is here made to deliver the order he had received in the very words in which he had received it. (Newton.)

270. Native soil. It was the native soil of Eve, as she was created there, but not of Adam, who was brought into Paradise after his creation elsewhere.

283. To this obscure. Obscure compared with this. See Note on to, iv. 78.

332. His utmost skirts of glory. The reference is to Exodus, xxxiii, 22, 23.

333. Far off his steps adore. Newton quotes from Statius:

Sed longe sequere, et vestigia semper adora.—Thebaid, xii. 817.

356-358. Know I am sent, Sc. Todd quotes Daniel, x. 14. 381. Not higher that hill, Sc.....glory. Matthew, iv. 8. 356-358.

387-411. From the destined walls, &c. In this panoramic view Adam is shown the world continent by continent. From 388 to 395 -Asia; from 396 to 404-Africa; 405-Europe; and from 407 to 411—America.

387-395. From the destined walls, &c. He first takes a view of Asia, and there of the northern parts, the destined walls, not yet in claxiv notes.

being, but designed to be of Jambalu, seat of Cathaian Can, the principal city in Cathay, a province of Tartary, (x. 293), the ancient scat of the Chams, and Samarcand by Owns, the chief city of Zagathaian Tartary, near the river Oxus, Temir's throne, the birth-place and royal residence of Tamerlane. And from the northern he passes to the eastern and southern parts of Asia to Paquin, or Pekin, of Sincean kings, the royal city of China, the country of the ancient Sinæ; and thence to Agra and Lahor, two great cities in the empire of the great Mogul, down to the golden Chersonese, that is, Malacca, the most southern promontory of the East Indies, so called on account of its riches to distinguish it from the other Chersoneses or peninsulas; or where the Persian in Echatan sat, Echatana, formerly the capital of Persia, or since in Hispalian, the capital city at present, or where the Russian Ksar, the Czar of Muscovy, in Mosco, the metropolis of all Russia, or the Sultan in Bizance, the Grand Signior in Constantinople, formerly Byzantium, Turchestan-born, as the Turks came from Turchestan, a province of Tartary; he reckons these to Asia, as they are adjoining, and great part of their territories lie in Asia.

- 396 --- 404. He passes now into Africa; nor could his eye not ken the empire of Negus, the upper Ethiopia or the land of the Abyssinians, subject to one sovereign, styled in their own language Negus or king, and by the Europeans Prester John, to his atmost port Ercoco, or Erquico, on the Red Sea, the N. E. boundary of the Abyssinian empire, and the less maritime kings, the lesser kingdoms on the sea-coast, Mombaza, and Quilon, and Melind, all near the line in Zanguebar, a great region of the lower Ethiopia on the eastern or Indian Sea, and subject to the Portuguese, and Sofala thought Ophir, another kingdom and city on the same sea, mistaken for Ophir, whence Solomon brought gold, to the realm of Congo, a kingdom in the lower Ethiopia on the western shore, as the others were on the eastern; and Angola farthest south, another kingdom south of Congo; or thence from Niger flood, the river Niger that divides Negroland into two parts, to Atlas mount in the most western parts of Africa, the kingdoms of Almansor, the countries over which Almansor was king, viz. Fez and Sus, Morocco and Algiers, and Tremisen, all kingdoms in Barbary.
- . 405. After Africa he comes to Europe, of which, as it is so well known, Rome only is mentioned.
- 496—411. In spirit perhaps he also saw, he could not see it otherwise, as America was on the opposite side of the globe, rich Mexico in North America, the seat of Montezinne, who was subdued by the Spanish general Pizarro, and yet unspoiled Guiana, another country of South America, whose great city, Manhoa, Geryon's sons, the Spaniards, from Geryon, an ancient king of Spain, call El Dorado or the golden-city, on account of its richness and extent.

And thus he surveys the four different parts of the world, but it must be confessed, more with an estentation of learning, than with any additional beauty to the poem. (Newton.)

414. Euphrasy and ruc. Two herbs supposed to have the effect of purging the sight; and no doubt tried on Milton's eyes. Of euphrasy, or eye-bright, Shenstone says:-

Yet enphrasy may not be left unsung That gives dim eyes to wander leagues around.

The Schoolmistress.

429--447. Beheld a field, Sec. The story of Cain and Abel, Genesis, iv. 2, 8.

430. Tilth. In a state of tillage.

433. Sord, swerd, or sward, originally meant a skin; 'sword of bacon' was an old phrase for the skin of bacon. Hence sord, now written sward, was applied to the skin or covering of the earth, the green-sward.

458. The other's faith approved. Hebrews, xi. 4.

479. A lazar-house. An hospital for lazars, or diseased people and beggars like Lazarus in the parable.

485—187. These three lines are not in the First Edition, but were inserted by Milton in the Second.

496. Though not of woman born.....to tears. The references to Shakspeare are to Macheth, v. 7, and Henry V. i. 6.

531. The rule of 'not too much.' The classic aphorism, Μηδέν άγαν,

Ne quid nimis.

535-537. He seems to have had in mind the passage of Cicero De Seuectute, 19. Et quasi poma ex arboribus, cruda si sint, vi avelluntur; si matura et cocta, decidunt; sic vitam adolescentibus vis aufert, senibus maturitas.

542. To. Compared with, as in line 283. For. Instead of.

551, 552. These two lines are expanded in the Second Edition from one of the First, which was

Of rendering up." Michael to him replied :-

555. Permit to Heaven. Newton quotes Horace's Permitte Divis catera. Odes, I. ix. 9.

556-573. The descendants of Cain. See Genesis, iv. 20-22.

562. Instinct. Instinctively.

573—592. After these.....a different sort. The descendants of Seth. On the hither side. Not so far off from Paradise as Cain who was banished to the east of Eden.

612. His gifts.....none. None of his gifts; ii. 331, Note.

614. For that fair female troop thou sawest. For you have seen that bevy how beautiful they are.

621. To these that sober race, &c. In this place Milton adopts the opinion that the Sons of God (Genesis, vi. 1, 2.) were the children of Seth. In v. 447 he refers to the other theory that the Sons of God were Augels, and in Paradise Regained, Sons of Bolial, fallen Angels:—

Before the Flood thou with thy lusty crew, False titled Sons of God, roaming the earth,

Cast wanton eyes on the daughters of men. 178-183.

624. Trains. Wiles, artifices.

660. In this visionary part Milton has frequently had his eye on his master Homer, and several of the images which are represented to Adam are copies of the descriptions on the shield of Achilles, Iliad, xviii. The description of the shield of Achilles is certainly one clxxvi notes.

of the finest pieces of poetry in the whole Iliad, and our author has plainly shown his admiration and affection for it by borrowing so many scenes and images from it; but I think we may say that they do not like other copies fall short of the originals, but generally exceed them, and receive this additional beauty, that they are most of them made representations of real histories and matters of fact. (Newton).

651. Makes. Altered from tacks, the reading of the First Edition.

656. Scale. Ladder, escalade; see Note on scaled, iii. 541.

661. To council in the city-gates. See Genesis, xxxiv. 20; Deuteronomy, xvi. 18, xxi. 19; Zechariah, viii. 16.

665. Of middle age one rising. Enoch, 365 years being middle age for an antediluvian patriarch.

681. Whom had not heaven, Sr. There is an attraction of the relative here, the construction being: Who was that just man, who, had not Heaven rescued him, had been lost?

688. These Giants. Genesis, vi. 4.

694. And for glory done, &c. The interpretations of this passage vary.

Fearce: Milton had said before that it 'shall be held the highest pitch of glory, to subdue nations and bring home their spoils,' and here he adds, for this I take to be his sense, that it shall be held 'the highest pitch of triumph for that glory' obtained 'to be styled great conquerors.' So that though I approve of Dr. Bentley's changing done into won, I cannot agree to his altering of triumph to or triumph.

Newton: This is one of the most difficult passages. I am not satisfied with the conjectures of either of these learned men, and see no other way of understanding it but this: 'To overcome, to subdue, to spoil, shall be held the highest pitch of glory, and shall be done for glory of triumph,' shall be achieved for that end and purpose, 'to be styled great conquerors.'

Keightley: This passage is rather difficult. We would understand it thus, These things being done for glory it shall be held the highest pitch (understood from 693) of triumph to be styled, &c.

Masson: The true meaning seems to be, To overcome in battle, &c. shall be held the highest pitch of human glory, and to be styled great conquerors, &c., shall be the highest pitch of glory achieved.

700. The seventh from thee. Jude, i. 4.

706. Rapt, &c. We are not told how Enoch was taken from the earth; but Milton assumes that it was in the same way as Elijah, and describes his translation almost in the same words as he uses of the latter, in iii. 522:

Rapt in a chariot drawn by flery steeds.

In Keightley's text it is wrapped, though in his note, at the foot of the page, it is rapt. I mention this is an instance of the difficulty of keeping out all misprints, whether they are to be set down to the slip or sleep of the editor or the perversity of the printer. Mr. Masson's edition too, published by Macmillan, is not immaculate;—sufficient justification for emendations of Milton's text, cautiously and sparingly done, when, in addition to the 'reader's' liability to trip, the printer could, in those days, spell and point pretty much as he pleased.

717. Passing.; Surpassing; an adverb.

719. A reverend sire. Noah. Gen. vi.; 1 Pet. iii. 19, 20; 2 Pet. ii. 5.

53. One small bottom. Bottom is an old word for a boat or ship:

A bawbling vessel was he captain of,

With which such seathful grounds did he make

With which such scathful grapple did he make With the most noble bottom of our fleet. Twelfth Night, v. 1.

766. Dispensed. Weighed out.

773. Which neither. Bentley objected to neither.....and. Newton defended it by examples of neque.....et from Terence and Cicero. Todd supplied what he thought a parallel from Milton's prose:—"In such a posture Christ found the Jews, who were neither won with the austerity of John the Baptist, and thought it too much licence to follow freely the charming pipe of him who sounded and proclaimed liberty and relief to all distresses."

Bentley sent them all off the scent. The and of line 774 does not connect the sentence that follows with that in 773, but with Evil, he may be sure; 773 being parenthetical. And, neither is simply a strong negative, equivalent to 'not even.'

785. How comes it thus, §c. All editions follow the original in placing a note of interrogation after thus, and beginning a new sentence with unfold; the order is: Unfold, Celestial Guide, how comes it thus, and whether the race of man will end. See Note on viii. 277; and xii. 385.

833. The great river. The Euphrates; Genesis, xv. 18. The gulf.

The Persian Gulf.

840. Hull. Drift, float as a vessel without oars or sail would.

846. Their flowing. Their refers to wave; "as a noun of multitude of the plural; it is not easy to account for the syntax otherwise." (Newton). "The poet had probably dictated 'waves' in the preceding line." (Keightley). "A liberty of syntax." (Masson). None of these; their stands for its, as before 'each in their kind,' vii. 453; and again 'each their way,' line 889; see Note on its, i. 254. There is an idiom in which we use their as the possessive with a sing, noun, when the sex is not known to the speaker or it may refer to either, as in such phrases as: One loves their own.

858. His foot. In the Bible narrative the dove is feminine,

Genesis, viii. 9.

866. Listed. Striped, streaked, (879).

886. Late. Lately, recently; Genesis, vi. 6-12.

892-901. Makes a covenant, &c. Genesis, ix. 11-15; viii. 22; 2 Peter, iii. 12, 13.

BOOK XII.

1-5. The first five lines were written as introductory to this Book, when the original Tenth was divided here to form two books.

1. Baits. To bait is to stop on one's journey for a bit or bite. So in Samson Agonistes:—

Evil news rides post, while good news baits, 1538.

Till one shall rise, &c. Nimrod. Genesis, x. 8-10. According to some Jewish commentators his being a 'mighty hunter' is explained to mean that he was a tyrannical ruler; and 'before the Lord' is said by some to mean against or in spite of God; while others explain it as under God, claiming to be next to God and that his sovereignty is derived from God; both these explanations are given in lines 34, 35. From rebellion shall derive his name. Nimrod being from a Hebrew root meaning to rebel. The whole passage is characteristic of Milton's republican sentiments.

40-63. Marching from Eden, &c. Genesis, xi. 2-9.

Cast. Plan; iii. 634. 43.

55. Jangling noise is the expression Sylvester uses in his account of the confusion of tongues.

62. The work 'Confusion' named. According to the translation of Babel in the margin of Genesis, xi. 9.

69-71. Man over men, &c. Hume quotes from S. Augustine: Rationalem, factum ad imaginem suam, noluit nisi irrationalibus dominari, non hominem homini, sed hominem pecori. De Civit. Dei.

Dividual. Separate; see vii. 382.

Tyranny must be, &c. Tyranny is a 'necessity,' but that does not justify 'the tyrants' plea'; iv. 393; and cf. Matthew, xviii. 7. 97—100. Yet sometimes, &c. Todd quotes from Milton's History of England:

When God hath decreed servitude on a sinful nation, fitted by their own vices for no condition but servile, all estates of Government are alike unable to avoid it. v. 1.

Witness the irreverent son, Sc. Genesis, ix. 22--25.

One peculiar nation. Genesis, xii.; Douteronomy, xiv. 2.

Yet. Before God called him.

Bred up in idol-worship. "Terah the father of Abraham, served other gods." Joshua, xxiv. 2.

Vouchsafes to call by vision. "The God of glory appeared into our father Abraham." Acts, vii. 2.

132. Servitude. Servants; the abstract for the concrete.

139-146. From Hamath, Sr. Numbers, xxxiv. 3-12; Deutero-tomy, iii. 8, 9. The desert. 'The wilderness of Zin.' The great vestern sea. The Mediterranean. Mount Carmel is 'on the shore' f the Mediterraneau. The Jordan is called the double-founted tream, as it is formed by the union of two streams. Senir was the Amorite name for Hermon, (Deut. iii. 9.)

Faithful Abraham. Genesis, xvii. 5. Galatians, iii. 9.

160-164. He comes invited, &c. Genesis xlvi. 1.

164-214. Grown suspected to a sequent king, &c. Exodus, i. 6; xiv.

These two brethren. Keightley and Masson have those. 159.

173.

Denies. Refuses. Exodus, v. 2.

Palpable darkness. See Note on 'palpable obscure' iv. 406.

The river-drayon. "Thus saith the Lord, Behold I am 188.

gainst thee, Pharaoh, king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in he midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own and I ave made it for myself." Ezekiel, xxix. 3. In the First Edition it ras 'This river-dragon.'

- 204. Remove. Sc. itself.
- 207. Defends between. Defends, used as in xi. 86, forbids, prevents. 210. Craze. Break; from the French, écraser. So in i. 311, he says the chariot wheels were 'broken,' though in Exodus, it is only said the chariot wheels were 'taken off.'

- 217. Alarmed. Roused to arms, a l'armeè.
- 220. For life, &c. For those who are untrained in arms, whether noble-minded or not, are fonder of life (than those who are trained and risk it less), unless when led on by rashness.
 - 227. From the Mount of Sinai. Exodus, xix. 1, 16, 18, xx.
- 229. Trumpet's. It is the singular, (not the plural, as some read) as may be seen from Evodus, xix. 16.
- 250. Of cedar. This is an oversight of Milton's, the sanctuary, or tabernacle, was made of ten curtains hung on 'pillars of shittim wood, overlaid with gold.' Ecodus, xxvi. Cedar is not mentioned in any of the Books of Moses. Therein an ark, &c. Exodus, xxv.

255. Representing the heavenly fires. A gloss of Josephus.

- 283-306. The portions of Scripture referred to are: Galatians, iii. 11, 12, 19, 23; iv. 7; Romans, iii. 20; iv. 22-25; v. 17, 20, 21; vii. 7; viii. 15; x. 5; Hebrews, vii. 18, 19; ix. 13, 14; x. 1, 4.
 - 310. Whom the Gentiles Jesus call. Acts, vii. 45; Hebrews, iv. 8.
- 322. A promise shall receive. 2 Samuel, vii. 16; Psalms, lxxxix. 34-36; Isatah, xi. 10.

334. Such. Such kings.

- 338. Heaped to the popular sum. The faults of the kings heaped along with the sins of the people.
 - 348. By leave of kings. Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes.
- 353-358. Among the priests dissensions spring. The contest for the high priesthood between Jason and Menclaus led to Jerusalem being taken (B. C. 173) by Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria, who plundered the city and defiled the temple. Again in B. C. 107. Aristobulus, the high priest, took the title of king. Then in B. C. 61, the sceptre was 'lost to a stranger,' Antipater of Idumæa being made king by Pompey, the Roman General, and he was succeeded by Herod, in whose reign Christ was born.
 - 374. Which these. A construction like this his, line 419.
- 400. Theirs which. The antecedent of which is transgression understood with theirs.
- 402-435. References to Romans, vi. 9: xiii. 10; Galatians, ii. 16; iii. 13; Colossians, ii. 14; Matthew, xxviii. 1.
- 409. His merits to save them. Understand 'who shall believe' from line 407.
- 436—465. Nor after resurrection, &c. The Scripture references are: Matthew, xxviii. 19, 20; Romans, iv. 16; Colossians, ii. 15; Revelation, xx. 2; Luke, xxi. 27; xxiv. 26; Ephesians, i. 20, 21; iv. 8.
- 442. Baptizing in the profluent stream. In his Treatise on Christian Doctrine, Milton expresses the opinion, conveyed here by his use of the word profluent, that baptism should be by immersion in a running stream.

clxxx NOTES.

486-497. From Heaven, Sc. The Scripture references are:-John, xv. 26; xvi. 13; Luke, xxiv. 49; Galatians, v. 16; Ephesians, vi. 11-16; Psalms, lvi. 11.

508-514. Wolves shall succeed. Acts, xx. 29; 1 Peter, v. 2-3;

1 Corinthians, ii. 14.

526. His consort Liberty. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is there is Liberty." 2 Corinthians, iii. 17.

527. His living temples. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you ?" 1 Corinthians iii. 16. "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost." vi. 19.

533.Of spirit and truth. "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." John, iv. 24.

538. To good inalignant to bad men benign. Malignant and benign are astrological terms, 'unhappy' and 'happy'; see Note ou x. 659. The day of respiration. "The times of refreshing." Acts, 539.

iii. 19.

547. Then raise from the conflagrant mass, &c. 2 Peter, iii. 12, 13. 574. Also last replied. Replied for the last time too, as said of Adam's speech, line 552.

To thy knowledge answerable Corresponding with your know-582.

Add faith, &c. 2 Peter, i. 5; 1 Corinthians, xiii. 13. ledge.

607. Descended. Case absolute; the hill being descended.

608. Found her waked. Milton forgot he had written this, when he says in the Argument that Adam "wakens Eve."

609. With words not sad. Sr. Of Eve's speech Addison says: "The sleep that fell upon Eve, and the effects it had in quieting the disorders of her mind, produce the same kind of consolation in the reader, who cannot peruse the last beautiful speech which is ascribed to the mother of mankind, without a secret pleasure and satisfaction. The following lines which conclude the poem rise in a most glorious blaze of poetical images and expressions.

In me is no delay. Newton quotes: In me mora non crit Virgil, Ecloque. iii. 52. With three to go is to stay here. To go with thee pleases me as much as if I were to be allowed to remain in Paradise.

630. Marish. An old form of marsh; it occurs in Ezekiel, xlvii. 11.

Which. The antecedent is sword. 634.

635. Adust. Dry, burning; adusted we have met in vi. 514.

In either hand, &c. One in each hand. The particular of the Angel taking Adam and Eve by the hand is not in the Scripture account of the expulsion from Paradise, but is borrowed by Milton from the story of the Angels taking Lot and his family out of Sodom, 'while he lingered, laying hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife.' Genesis, xix.
